A Canadian Hospital Ship Is Destroyed By A Submarine

Over Two Hundred Lives Are Believed To Have Been Lost

CANADIAN HOSPITAL SHIP TORPEDOED BY SUBMARINE

Two Hundred and Thirty Lives, Including Fourteen Canadian Nurses Unaccounted For---The Huns Shelled the Lifeboats to Remove All Traces of the Sinking--One Boat With Twenty-eight Men Picked Up.

WAR NEWS ON ALL FRONTS

London, July 2. — The Canadian hospital ship Llandover Castle, on June 27th, returning light, was sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast. Of 258 persons on board, including 14 Canadian nurses, only one boat with 28 men, was picked up.

The Huns shelled and rammed the other boats to "prevent all trace."

The German commander told the captain of the hospital ship he sunk her because United States aviators were on board, which was false.

FIERCE FIGHTING.

Rome, July 2. — Two thousand Austrians were taken by the Italians in recent assaults in the Asiago battles. Fierce fighting continues.

REPORT PROGRESS.

London, July 2.—Both the French and the British war statements indicate progress in some points, but only minor fighting.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONT.

Rome, July 1. — The Italian forces supported by allied troops, captured Monte Dieval Bella on Saturday with 800 prisoners, and subsequently repulsed all counter attacks.

LOCAL ATTACKS.

London, July 1. — The British repulsed a local attack on Sunday near Merris. The German artillery showed great activity on the Flanders front.

ADMITS 100,000.

Amsterdam, July 1.—Premier Werkerle caused a sensation in the Hungarian Parliament on Saturday by admitting that the Austro-Hungarian casualties in the recent Piave battle were one hundred thousand.

IMPROVED POSITION.

London, July 1.—In a minor operation last night, British troops improved their positions north west of Albert capturing machine guns and prisoners, and also raided a German post in Aveluy Wood.

BOLSHEVIKI DISSOLVED.

London, July 1. — The Czecho-Slovak forces have dissolved the Bolsheviki council at Vladivostock.

MORE GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

Washington, July 1.—Government ownership of telephone and telegraph lines were recommended to Congress to-day by President Wilson and it is expected that an effort will be made this week to rush through legislation to this effect, in view of the threatened telegraph operators strike.

HOTEL BURNED.

Grimsby, July 1. — The Grimsby Beach Inn, formerly the Lakeview Hotel, was burned early this morning. The large number of guests all escaped but lost their belongings.

Intense German Artillery Fire On Western Front

STORM MAY BREAK ANY MOMENT

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 2.—Intense enemy artillery fire yesterday rocked the British line with its sinister detonations, and the tension which has existed along this front appears to have increased, but the German offensive still remains merely in the boiling-up stage.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg has maintained such a distribution of his effectives as would permit a blow on any part of the front. One thing seems certain—when the enemy does strike he will hit hard. It is predicted that there will be more terrific fighting than has yet developed this year. At any moment the storm may break, and the allied troops are awaiting it with grim determination and confidence.

The air forces of both sides are working over time these fine moonlight nights and there has been heavy bombing throughout th war zone. They have been no less active in fighting and reconnoitring through out the day and many battles royal have been fought along the lines.

The Baby Tanks.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 2.—The successive waves of speedy baby tanks, followed by infantry, in a swift attack on a three and a half-mile front between Villers Cotterets Forest and the Aisne have been the outstanding features if the fighting on the French front since the enemy's last disastrous Mondidier-Noyon offensive.

At the same time a few of this species of tank, the smallest yet of these modern warfare chariots, won a swift though glorious reputation as they faced and turned on their own tails, helping the infantry to round up about 1,200 prisoners belonging to five different German regiments within thirty minutes.

Charges German Soldiers With Revealing Secrets

Ludendorff Loses Faith In His Own Troops and Issues Order Alleging Treason—High Command Impresses Troops With Seriousness of the Offence.

WARNING GIVEN THE FRENCH

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 2.—A secret German army order dated June 10, signed Ludendorff, (now in possession of the French Military authorities), develops that Ludendorff has notified the German troops that two German soldiers belonging to the Seventh Chasseurs, 197th Division, divulged to the French all the plans of the German attack between Soissons and Rheims during the last days in May. Ludendorff adds that soldiers made prisoner by the French north of Chemin-des-Dames on the night of May 26-26 warned the French against a surprise gas attack, especially then Thirtee French division which took new positions on the heights between Aisne and Wesle.

Impressed Soldiers.

He continues: "The resistance of this division cost the life and health of many German soldiers. Without this treason the surprise of May 27 would have been more successful, even more so than it was."

The document, the tone of which was both plaintive and fierce, also charges German prisoners with giving the French all details of the German attack of June 9 between Montdidier and Noyon, which caused the French to prepare such strong resistance. He says:

"One is struck to see the precision and richness of details which our enemies obtain from German prisoners," and strict orders are given that all German soldiers be impressed with the importance of how to conduct themselves as prisoners and that the army give publicity, "through papers it controls," as t the dire consequences of giving information to the enemy.

The Path of Honour.

Ludendorff concludes: "Most men unhappy enough to be made a prisoner do not realize the measure in which declarations, even as to insignificant details, not only imperil the lives of their comrades but compromise the success of our attacks. The infamous conduct of certain ones can not only have extremely grave repercussions on the victorious issue of the war, they can cause gravest prejudices to the whole nation. The captured soldier who refuses to speak honours himself, conserves a clean conscience in his own eyes and in those of his supreme chief and country, and finishes by forcing the respect of his adversary.

"(Signed), P. O. Lulendorff."

The adove document is a striking confession of a growing lack of confidence even of Ludendorff in the German rank and file, which many other signs show is suffering a lowered morale, since the apparent failure to gain a quick victory.

DIFFER OVER ORIGIN OF DOG

Whether All Kinds Had a Common Ancestor Has Long Been a Matter of Dispute.

The ancestry of the dog has been the occasion of much controversy, according to Leo S. Crandall's book, "Pets." Many naturalists have considered that it is descended from a single ancestor, such as the common wolf of Europe. Darwin, however, leans toward the theory of multiple origin, and advances much convincing proof in support of his belief. It is widely known that many savage tribes have dogs, which appear to be simply half-tamed representatives of the particular wild doglike animals inhabiting the same regions.

The dogs of the American plains Indians closely resemble the small prairie wolf, or coyote; the husky of the north country is plainly not far removed from the gray wolf; the German sheep dog and the Samoyede are strikingly wolflike in appearance. Whether our present dogs are the result of crossing these many simple derivatives of wolves and jackals among themselves, or whether there was an original ancestral dog, now extinct, with which the blood of other species has become mingled, we have not yet been able to determine, though so many primordial animal remains have come to light.

According to St. George Mivart, the dingo is the only wild dog still existing which meets the requirements of an ancestor of our modern breeds. This species is found throughout Australia and fossil bones which have been found show its presence there from very early times.

Mexico Expects Big Cotton Crop.

A bumper crop of cotton is expected this next year in Mexico. Indications are that the cotton crop of the Laguna district of the states of Coahuila and Durango will be three times as great as for the past year, when it amounted to more than half a million bales of a total value of ten million dollars. None of it was exported, but it was all consumed by the factories of the republic.

Wartime Footwear in Holland.

The manufacture of slippers with wooden soles and cloth tops is a wartime industry which has sprung up in Holland, reports the United States department of commerce. The upper and inner parts of the slippers are formed of twill, corduroy and woolen stuffs. All these materials are relatively cheap, and yet make comfortable and durable slippers. The cloth parts are made by hand and the wooden soles by machinery.

In view of the mounting prices of leather footwear, these combination slippers, which retail for the equivalent of $1 a pair for the best quality, are selling rapidly. It is claimed that they are entirely satisfactory for wear in the home and are practicable for women engaged in indoor occupations.

The Man With The Hoe

Hoeing is a severe strain on the back. It calls into play muscles not used much in lifting or in other kinds of farm work.

If you have a weak back you cannot stand much hoeing unless you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to set the kidneys right and remove the cause of weakness and lameness of the back. Just try one pill a dose at bed time and see how much better you will feel.

PETERBOROUGH HAPPENINGS OVER JULY 1

Lakefield Train Ran Off the Track —Severe Storm Swept Over the City

HORSE HAD TO BE SHOT

Over four thousand people took in the Dominion Day celebration that was held in Peterboro yesterday under the auspices of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition.

THE STORM.

The storm that swept over Peterboro late Sunday night did considerable damage. Over three inches of rain fell, and it will cost the Utilities Commission in the neighborhood of five thousand dollars to repair the damage to their light and power system. Peterboro was in total darkness for several hours during the night, and all day Monday the street railway service was operated on about one-half the usual power load.

CULVERT WASHED OUT.

It will cost the township of North Monaghan in the neighbourhood of a thousand dollars to repair a culvert that was washed out by the storm.

TRAIN OFF THE TRACK.

The Lakefield train which left Peterboro about seven o'clock on Saturday evening for Lakefield jumped the track while approaching the Nassau bridge. The swing in the bridge was being closed at the time, and the open "D" rail threw a portion of the train including the engine off the track, and left them stranded on the ties. The company chartered a fleet of automobiles from Peterboro and other points and had the passengers conveyed to their destination. The cause has not been officially announced.

HORSE WAS SHOT.

While driving an automobile into the city, Alfred Harris of Villiers, Otonabee Township, crashed into a horse and vehicle on Hunter street, near the Munro House, shortly after one o'clock. The injuries to the horse included a broken leg, and it had to be shot. It was the property of D. G. Maloney, of this city.

Hardware and Metal

Price changes have been quite numerous in hardware commodities during the week, and embrace some very important lines. Builders' hardware of Canadian make has advanced approximately 7½ per cent. Washers and wringers have been increased in price about 8 per cent. New prices on sheep and horse-shearing machines have been announced for next year, and show substantial increases over those prevailing for this year.

Prices have been withdrawn by the manufacturers on all brass goods, such as pet cocks, stop cocks, globe, angle and check valves and compression bibs, which is taken as a precursor of higher prices in these lines. One of the well-known manufacturers has withdrawn prices on hand saws, compass tenon saws, brick trowels, plastering trowels and pointing trowels, and has intimated that higher prices in these lines can be expected. Scarcity of raw materials and higher labour cost is given as the force operating to cause this action.

Other Price Changes.

Other lines in which changes have been recorded include bread mixers, hose clamps padlocks, latches, keys, handbells, grindstones, soil pipe and fittings, wrenches, galvanized and painted metal shingles, galvanized and painted metal siding and metal ceiling, cistern pumps, railroad chalk and snaps, forges, brass injectors.

In paint materials white lead in oil again shows an advance of 50c per hundred pounds, due to the steadily firm market in pig lead. Putty prices have been increased 10c per hundred to make provision for increased freight rates. Turpentine was again in firm market, with advances held in steadfwyp mfwyp - wyppupp of 5c per gallon recorded in some quarters. Linseed oil held in steady position. Business in ready-mixed paints has been exceptionally good, householders giving evidence that they are in the mood for putting on preservative materials as a matter of conservation. Business in hardware lines has been fair, but midsummer months are expected to show usual quietness in the trade—"Hardware and Metal."

OBJECTING TO TENDERS FROM UNDERTAKERS.

Kingston, June 25.—The Militia Department is receiving severe criticism over the action in asking the various undertakers to submit tenders for the burial of bodies of soldiers who died in the military hospitals here. The news has leaked out, and it is supposed that the department has issued the same request to undertakers in all the military centres throughout Canada. At present undertakers are paid $50 for the burying of soldiers' bodies.

Chickens Tirpitz.

Current number of the Prussian Jahrbucher, Prof. Hans Delbruck, German historian, accuses Admiral Tirpitz of lack of foresight during his term of office in the matter of construction of submarines. "Tirpitz was fascinated with dreadnights," he says, "and even during the war hindered the construction of new submarines, in the belief the few he had consented to were sufficient to beat the British in a few months." Delbruck asks the Reichstag to order an investigation into von Tirpitz's naval policy.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, as painful calluses, lift off. No soreness or smarting. One should keep a tiny bottle in the bureau drawer, and never let a corn twice.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

THE PORTRAIT IS HUNG

CHAPTER CVI.

Without saying anything to me George invited Madge Loring and her husband, also Julia Collins, to come and spend the evening. To see the picture. When he told me at dinner I started to speak sharply, then caught myself and said: "Shall we have a little supper prepared?"

"Yes, have something nice."

"Let me see, there will be just six Madge and her husband, you and me, Mrs. Collins, Mr. Gray and myself. I will tell Mary." I had purposely paired him off with Mrs. Collins.

Merton came first. He was so unaffectedly glad to see me, that I responded more warmly than was wise perhaps. George had not yet come down stairs so I received him alone. But we had time for only a few words before the rest came and George came down to greet them.

They made a great fuss over the portrait, and really it was lovely. George seemed so proud of it, so anxious that it should be hung so that every feature would show to the best advantage that I too commenced to feel a pride in it.

When it finally was hung to please George it was ten o'clock and we adjourned to the dining room. The table was beautifully laid for six—I had given Mary careful instructions, and had also told James to be most particular. I think they both understood that when these friends of my husband's were with us I was more anxious that everything should go right than at any other time.

A Repetition.

"Madge and Loring, you and me, George, Mrs. Howard and Mr. Gray," Mrs. Collins said laughingly as we went out in couples.

"That's exactly the speech Mrs. Howard made when I told her you were coming," George returned.

"Evidently they are both of the same mind as to who is who," Latham Loring said in his cynical way. A way that always implied so much, and left me feeling uncomfortable.

"You mean as to the proper pairing off," his wife added. "Don't try to blush Julia, we all know you have been in love with George for years! And an artist is always supposed to fall in love with his model isn't he Mr. Gray?"

"I believe so," Merton said so gravely we all laughed, then George added:

"You flatter me, Madge Julia, you should have told me of this love you have hidden for years."

The light bandiage at which we all laughed took all serious meaning from what had been said. Yet I could not help but feel that Madge Loring had really meant it, and that she had meant to hurt me. Afterward it often came to my mind; that speech of hers when she had declared that Julia Collins had loved George for years. I had felt from the very first that there was more than just friendship in her feeling for him, and in his for her.

They left about midnight, all voting they had had a lovely evening, even if it were informal.

After they left George and I returned to the portrait.

"It is lovely, Helen. I am very proud of it," George said as we stood before it.

"It flatters me."

"No, I don't think so. You are very pretty, dear. If you take the proper care of yourself, the proper exercise to keep your figure, you will be a very beautiful woman. But a good deal depends on yourself."

Evelyn Laughs at Helen.

I told Evelyn what Mrs. Loring had said.

"Old cat! I wouldn't mind her if I were you."

"I can't help minding, Evelyn. I am young and uninteresting," some of the bitterness I felt crept into my voice in spite of my effort to speak carelessly. "I am afraid I never shall be just as George wants me to be. And I so long to please him."

"My what a dolorous voice. I do believe you are just as much in love with him as I am with Kurts, even if you don't make so much fuss over him. And what difference does it make if Julia Collins is in love with him, as long as he cares nothing for her? Merton Gray is madly in love with you. Has been ever since he met you. But so long as you don't love him in return it can't hurt either you or George."

"Do be sensible, Evelyn. The idea that Mr. Gray cares for me is ridiculous. He is a charming man, a good friend— I hope, but nothing else."

"I know better! He is really in love with you, Helen. Kurts says he has known him always, and that Merton never has really cared for any woman. I didn't tell Kurts that he was in love with you. Men are so blind about those things, he never would dream of such a thing."

"Thank God he is blind if he would think he saw anything but friendship," I said so hastily, she laughed merrily

To-morrow—An Old Married Woman.

Most Barbarous Canadians.

The blond Eskimos are in the state of civilization that our ancestors enjoyed when dinosaurs roamed about the fields where our great cities stand, and mastodons peacefully curled up to sleep where the national capital now rises. They are a nomadic tribe, wandering along the Arctic shores of Northern Canada, minding their own affairs, except, like the animals in the zoo, when they are fed or annoyed by strangers.

'Way up in the northwest of Canada around Dolphin and Union Straits to Coronation Gulf live the mysterious Blond Eskimos of whom so little is known except to a few who have had the temerity to go among them. The murder of Fathers Laruc and Rouvier in 1914 by two of these strange people, who are the priests' livers and pronounced them "very good," bears testimony to their savagery.

The instincts of these Blond Eskimos are as primitive as those of prehistoric cavemen; there is nothing in their arts and crafts which reflects civilization in any form.

They represent several roving tribes who live along the Arctic shores of Northwestern Canada. In winter they make their houses in the ice, and in summer they go farther south to the Barren Lands, to get feathers, willow, moss, caribou and river fish. Their customs and costumes are unlike those of the Greenland, Alaskan or Delta Eskimos.—William Thompson, in World Outlook.

The Less Waste The Better The Service

"SLOW" telephone accounts -- the accounts on which repeated efforts to collect must be made -- result in waste of time and labor.

¶ Most telephone users pay their bills promptly and the labor and time of collecting them are reasonable.

¶ But some subscribers overlook their bills or neglect to pay them promptly, and the work of collecting such accounts is laborious and time-wasting.

¶ The elimination of waste in the telephone business means better telephone service. When we can do away with any waste time or labor that may be involved in furnishing service, we can put an equal amount of time and labor into the service itself to the benefit of all telephone users.

¶ Help us, by the prompt payment of accounts, to avoid waste time and labor and to concentrate on the enormous amount of necessary work that war-time conditions demand.

GLADLY TOOK "WAR" BREAD

Horrible Thought Quickly Cured Small Girl of Unreasonable Prejudice Against the Article.

"Oh, mother, must I get war bread?"

Little Daughter had been asked to go to the bakery for bread for her school lunch.

"It's wheatless day, dear."

"But I don't like war bread. It's so dark and different. And the rules aren't for children, are they?"

"No, but you know we were asked to send one million bushels of wheat to the allies by May first. We have given our word, and our baker is trying to help by making this special bread, which has almost no white flour in it whatever. But, of course, if you don't feel you can help in this way, you may buy a lighter loaf."

"Little Daughter started off. In a few moments she returned. Mother unwrapped the package. There was the small, dark loaf, indeed different, but really most palatable and nourishing. Little Daughter's eyes were glowing.

"Mother, the baker asked me if I liked war bread, and I said I did."

Mother looked up in astonishment. "But, my dear, you just said—"

"Yes, mother, I know I just said to you I didn't like it, but I was afraid if I told it to the baker, he would think I was a German."—By Jane Dransfield of The Vigilantes.

Bread Without Wheat Flour.

The New York Herald announces that a New York chef has a "wonder recipe for making bread, without wheat flour." Jean Rieroch, chef of the Biltmore hotel, is responsible for the recipe, and he now gives it to the country, without money and without price. Mr. Rieroch told a Herald reporter the ingredients of the new bread are as follows: "Twenty-five pounds of rye flour, 25 pounds of graham flour, 25 pounds of corn flour, 25 pounds of crushed oatmeal, 1 pound of lard and 2 pounds of yeast." This, it is explained, is enough to make 150 pounds of bread. The yeast and rye flour should be mixed first and the others added alternately. Smaller quantities of bread can be made by using smaller proportions. The receipt doubtless is a good one, but it does not provide for bread without wheat flour. Graham flour is unbolted, wheat flour. So, while the bread is a wheat saver, it does not do away entirely with the use of that grain.

HELPED IN THE CRISIS.

How Company of Railroad Troops Showed Their Mettle.

One company of Canadian railway troops, of a York County, Ontario, battalion, had amazing adventures during the British retirement. They were building lines at the extreme eastern limit of the British section and for days and nights they worked feverishly to connect up with a French system, so that the valuable rolling stock could be hauled away. At one place they made a record of nine miles construction in one day under heavy shelling from the enemy. By making the connection 27 locomotives and 235 trucks were run out of the danger zone.

Their wanderings from Chauny took them to Noyon and thence to Applecourt, where a barge was obtained from the French and their equipment loaded on that and sent down the canal to safety. At Longueil they came across a huge French engineering dump, which our allies were trying to salve. They offered their services and set to work in real Canadian fashion. There is a great shortage of barges, but plenty of huge timbers. The railway boomed the canal and dumped the lumber, making long, slim rafts that would just fit the locks.

Twenty thousand feet of lumber was salved in this way, but that was not enough. They loaded steel rails and other engineering material on the improvised rafts and under the guidance of some French-Canadian lumbermen, who belonged to the battalion, started their adventurous but completely successful journey down the canal. Lower down another huge timber dump of 50,000 feet and several thousand telegraph poles and wooden ties were salved the same way. Arrived safely at Compeigne with their miscellaneous freight, they built a huge skidway, and safely removed all the lumber and other material. They then started north and joined their battalion.

The Good That Comes of It.

Do you think that the war is making people less selfish in the world and in the United States? Surely it must, when in so many places people are sacrificing their dear ones and their money for a cause. Even if it seems to some more a question of honor and family or national tradition than justice or freedom. I often think of the rank and file of the German army, and even the junior officers. They are suffering untold hardships and showing magnificent bravery in the face of heavy odds, as much as, perhaps more than, the soldiers of the allies. Although one must be here to realize that men have risen to a height of courage and endurance in this war that people living in modern civilization never dreamed of. Surely some gain must come from this tremendous effort and conquest of self, and Germany must not be entirely a loser, when her sons, even if forced, have paid such a price.—Edwin A. Abbey, II, in the Atlantic.

Cosmopolitan Odessa.

Odessa, recently entered by German troops, furnishes the most remarkable instance in Europe of a rapid growth, like that of the mushroom cities of the New World. Founded in 1794 on the site of a small Turkish fortress which had been taken by the Russians a few years previously, it does not possess a single building which by any stretch of imagination could be described as old. The city as well as the port owes its origin to a Frenchman named De Ribas, an officer in the Russian army who had led the attack on the Turkish stronghold. French influence is strong and there are important commercial French and British colonies. Italians, Greeks, Bulgarians, Tartars, Armenians, Georgians, and other races in addition to the Jews and Russians make up the population of this cosmopolitan city.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food element, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION — Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Brains vs. Embonpoint

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Ned Majers, promising younger brother of Stone Majers, head of the dress manufacturing house of Majers & Clay, was put in charge of the "Stout Model" department of that large concern, he announced his intention of having a woman for his "right-hand man." Stone Majers and the other executives of the concern had always held out against women in responsible positions. Even their stenographers were young men. Girls were well and good at the telephone or to run errands, or something of that sort, Stone Majers told his brother, but when you come to having them in your office with you, you first get to noticing what sort of dresses they wear, then you start in making pretty speeches, and the next thing you know your mind is more on the girl than your business.

"When I get ready to marry," he continued, "I'm going to get some nice young girl, fresh from boarding school. I don't want some one that knows the dress-manufacturing business better than I do, and that will serve us shop talk at breakfast and dinner."

"That's just where I'm perfectly safe," Ned retorted. "I couldn't possibly fall in love with the sort of girl I'm going to get. What I want a woman for is because in my end of the work the right sort of woman can fairly sell the models off her back. I'm going to have a 'stout;' that's why she will help sell the type of dresses that I am going in for, and, moreover, that is why there isn't any remote chance of my falling in love with her. I could like a stout girl a lot and get along with her beautifully, but I'm no Turk. I don't want a fat wife. I simply could not think of it."

"Advertise, of course. 'Wanted—A stout woman with brains and a knowledge of the woman's dress business.' That ought to get her."

So the advertisement was inserted in the morning papers, and for an hour or two the door that led to Ned Majer's office was blocked with heavyweight applicants, who considered themselves qualified for the position. Apparently they all did qualify as to embonpoint. Ned's problem was simplified into telling which of the fifty-seven applicants had the most brains. So important did he consider this qualification, in fact, that when Hilda Clark tipped the scales only at 160 pounds—hardly one of the others but had done better—Ned waived this slight discrepancy because of her very obvious advantages in the other considerations. He had had a set of scales brought into his office from the factory, so that he might not trust to mere guesswork regarding the weight of his applicants.

"You look fat enough, anyway," he said good-naturedly to her, as he helped her step down from the weighing platform. "Eat plenty of butter and potatoes and things. I guess you are just the 'man' I'm looking for." And as he showed her to the exit hall he made his way to his brother's office.

"Well, I've got her," he said. "And she's fat and all intellect. We're both safe. I never could get sentimental over such a heavyweight, and you couldn't stand the intellect. She's the kind of girl that looks as if she knows just what a buyer was going to order as soon as he came into the place, and it is all in her eyes—the brains, I mean."

So Hilda Clark was installed, and before long Stone Majers had forgotten that he ever opposed his brother in taking on a woman assistant. With an amazing capacity for hard work and a keen interest in all the phases of her work that brought her active mind into contact with other minds as shrewd as her own, or nearly so, she soon had charge of the selling end of the business for both brothers. Her personal magnetism, rather than actual beauty, made every frock she tried on take on new interest and distinction, and this, as Ned had foreseen, had considerable effect on the size of buyers' orders. No mere man, even with the same ability as Hilda Clark, could ever have pushed the selling of the Majers & Clay "stout models" as she did. So the work piled up, and evenings, when she was not slaving after hours straightening out a tangle of orders with Ned, she was conferring with Stone. It was hard work, but pleasant. It agreed with her, but—

"What's the matter with the last model?" was the blunt and peevishly put query of one of the large buyers one day some six months after Hilda had come to be Ned's "right-hand man." "They are the dowdiest things I ever saw. Say, honestly, just because a fat woman's fat she doesn't want to dress like her great-grandmother."

That was the first of the complaints. Others followed. The designer was blamed first, but she was apparently putting out as good ideas as ever. The workmanship was the same, and the same quality of material was going into the dresses.

"I know what's the matter; Hilda's lost twenty pounds. She's been doing it gradually. I knew something was wrong, for the models looked so dowdy on her. I knew she must be getting thin. You know, I never could fall in love with a fat girl. And, anyway, I got her on the scales today. She wouldn't get on, so I lifted her on. I couldn't have lifted her when she first came. And I found out what was the matter."

"Does that help matters any?" snapped Stone.

"Well, not so much, only that we know what the matter is. And, besides—"

"But we ought to have a woman here that can show the dresses. She is ruining the business now. The buyers say something is the matter with the models. Couldn't she take antithin, or something, or drink milk?"

"She says it doesn't do any good. I knew you'd say that, so I suggested it to her." Ned laughed at the humor of the situation, that was not apparent to his brother. "And, besides, there was something I wanted to tell you—"

"Well, I hate to say it, but Hilda is not doing any good if she can't get fat again. She's clever, but that isn't enough. And yet I hate to let her go. Can you think of anything else we might get her to do? Is there something in your department you might get her to do so we wouldn't have to cut down her salary?"

Suddenly the two men sat up very straight and began to talk about two entirely different orders animatedly, in an effort to persuade Hilda Clark, who had just entered, that they had not been talking about her.

"Has Ned told you?" she smiled, putting a sisterly hand on Stone's arm.

"Yes, Hilda, and I'm sorry; but maybe we can do something about it."

"Sorry? Because I'm going to be your sister-in-law, or because I've lost twenty pounds?"

"My sister-in-law! Why didn't some one tell me?" cried Stone.

"And I have something to tell you both," announced Hilda. "You know that first day I came here. I saw Ned, and after I left his office he showed me to the hall and—well, I got mixed up and went the wrong way. Ned must have come in here to talk to you, for I heard quite distinctly what he said. He said: 'We're both safe. I never could get sentimental over such an heavyweight, and you couldn't stand the intellect.' So I knew right away that if I wanted either of you men to fall in love with me I'd either have to diet or become brainless. At first I ate all the potatoes and sugar I could. I knew this hard work would naturally pull me down, and then—well, Ned and I seemed to hit it off from the first. Besides, it was easier losing pounds than brains, and I'd rather part with them. I may need my brains later on. So then I began to diet. That's why I wouldn't have lunch with you—because I didn't want you to see what I was about—no sugar, no potatoes, no bread. I told my best friends I was Hooverizing. And so I lost twenty pounds. I knew it was the ruination of my business career."

"Do you mean you honestly did that?" demanded Stone. "Would any woman really do that much for Ned?"

"Well, suppose after you had got thin he hadn't happened to like you—you'd have lost out both ways?"

Ned had endured his brother's lingering long enough. He stood up and Hilda and put his arm around her slender shapely waist.

"I'd have married her if she was a perfect forty-six," he said. "Stone is only jealous because you didn't decide to lose your brains for him."

Perpetual Honeymoons.

A woman writer asks if a perpetual honeymoon can exist in this modern day, and quotes in connection with the question what another woman said, to-wit: "Any woman who has lived with a man eleven years can find ground for divorce." There is much talk of this kind and there are many divorces, all of which are the product of materialism, which doesn't see the difference between pleasure and happiness. That fact in its real working is behind all divorces and married infelicities. The fact is that pleasure is material and soon wears out; happiness is spiritual and lasts forever. Every marriage must note these standpoints, for they are swayed by one or the other. This is the age of divorces, because materialism flourishes as never before. It makes the husband impatient and the wife intolerant. When a couple reaches that state they should sing old hymns together and go to prayer meeting. Cigars and dry goods won't save them.—Ohio State Journal.

Some Financier.

"The fair defendant has been acquitted."

"So I hear."

"Is she thinking of going on the stage?"

"Not yet. She's too smart for that. She's going to marry her lawyer, and save a corking big fee."

Cement From Sugar-Beet Waste.

A result of experiments in French factories is the production of an excellent cement as a by-product of beet sugar refining. The first step in the production of sugar from beets is boiling them. It has heretofore been customary to throw away as valueless the scum formed on the caldrons. But it has now been discovered that this scum contains large quantities of carbonate of lime. It is estimated that 4,000 tons of the carbonates can be recovered from 70,000 tons of beets. To this quantity of the carbonate 1,100 tons of clay is added, the resultant product being a good cement. The beet scum is pumped into large reservoirs and allowed to evaporate for a certain length of time before being mixed with the clay. It is then stirred or beaten for an hour before being fed into rotary ovens such as is used in making Portland cement.

Not in His Line.

An auto load of Dunkards came into Winchester one day last week, and it was noticeable that the motor of their machine was "knocking." They stopped in front of the undertaking establishment of O. O. Fraze, which is next door to the Hecker & Doyel garage. One of the men left the machine and went into the undertaker's office, thinking it was the office of the garage.

"I would like for you to look at my motor and see what's wrong with it," said the man.

"It isn't dead, is it?" queried the undertaker.

"No, it is still running," said the Dunkard, whereupon the undertaker replied: "If it isn't dead we can't do anything for it. This is an undertaker's shop." The man was then directed to the nearby garage.

Character Came First.

If you are to become capable and efficient, desire, will, attention, concentration, purpose, discipline, reflection analysis and research are each an exercise to be diligently applied. Wordsworth once resolved to make an excursion to the mountains, and, in spite of protests, carried out his intention in the face of a violent storm. He gave as his reason that "the abandoning of a plan to avoid a slight discomfort is dangerous to your character."

A Safe Bet.

The late Capt. eVrnon Castle, the famous dancer who trained aviators in Canada all last summer, was popular with the flying cadets under him. Capt. Castle had a cheery way with him. A cadet one morning awaited rather nervously in the flying field his "solo hop," as the first flight alone is called. Capt. Castle, noticing the cadet's perturbation, slapped him gayly on the shoulder and said: "Cheer up, man. Don't be nervous. You'll come down again. There's no known instance of an aeroplane ever failing to come down."

Importance of Paraguay.

It was from Ascuncion, Paraguay, that parties went out to found Buenos Aires, Santa Fe, Corrientes and others of the important cities of the River Plate region. In fact, Argentina and Uraguay were once under the jurisdiction of the governor of Ascuncion, and it was at the request of a Paraguayan governor that Argentina was cut off from Paraguay. The first railroad constructed in South America was built in Paraguay. The first iron foundries, the first cannon and munitions factories of South America were all established in Paraguay.

Great Salmon Spawning Ground.

From early in March until late in November the great annual breeding of the salmon goes on. Upon 1,700 miles of coast line, from Bristol Bay in Alaska, to the Fraser river in British Columbia, the salmon swarms moves in regular and wonderfully regulated procession up the various fresh water streams and rivers to spawn and die, as did their parents four years before.

"Strafe" Made Prize of War.

The British have taken "strafe." In an announcement from the Oxford University Press the fact is officially made known. The captured word has been included, not to say interned, in the latest volume, Volume IX, of the Oxford dictionary. And as a trophy of war it has been treated after a characteristically British fashion. Its flat Teuton "a" has been changed to the long English "a" as of "safe," and from two syllables it is reduced to one, so that it may rhyme with "chafe."

Nor does the process of eliminating Germany in this verbal instance stop on the mere point of pronunciation. To the compilers of the Oxford lexicon it is "v. slang." So in captivity this word of portent originally fierce loses not only in quantity but in quality. To quote the London Times, as cited by the dictionary makers, "strafe is becoming a comic English word."

Government Finds Fathers.

The death rate among children born out of wedlock is notoriously and universally far higher than that among legitimate offspring. In the borough of Hampstead, London, it is 197 as against 60, and in New South Wales it is 162 against 67. Norway, however, has reduced the death rate to normal through the government assuming the responsibility of finding the father or of acting the father in case he cannot be found.

LADY'S ONE PIECE DRESS.

Very new and different is this design which goes a long way toward saving material, No. 8794. The dress hangs straight from the shoulders, but a narrow cord girdle or a belt may be used to draw it in at the waistline. The closing is on the shoulder, as the dress slips on over the head. The square neck is bound with contrasting material and the drop shoulder seams are finished in the same way. The sleeves are rather odd in design, having long pieces which turn back in cuff effect. Satin, serge, tricotine, wool jersey or chiffon broadcloth may be used for this dress, which requires only a small amount of material for making.

The lady's one piece dress pattern No. 8794, is cut in four sizes—36 to 42 inches bust measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is 1¼ yards. The 36 inch size, requires 3⅝ yards 36 inch and ¼ yard 36 inch contrasting material.

TO SAVE THE HAY CROP

Efficient Machinery and Careful Cutting Required.

Spraying for Potato Blight Begins—By Using Bordeaux Mixture and Paris Green Increased Potato Crop Will Be Harvested.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

In a season of labor scarcity haying is a problem on the average farm. It is necessary to make use of all the modern machinery available in order to expedite the saving of this important crop. First, then, we must emphasize the use of machinery in curing and storing. Men are not to be had in plentiful supply, but, in most cases some form of co-operation may be resorted to in order to obtain the use of tedders, hay loaders and horse forks to handle the bulk of the crop. By all means plan to use machinery in place of men this year or otherwise considerable of the crop will not be harvested in the best possible condition.

It is usually safe to cut after a rain when the weather appears to have cleared. Red clover should be cut when about one-third of the heads have turned brown. The tedder should then be used until the crop is dry enough to rake—a period which will vary according to the weight of the cutting, the weather and the amount of sap in the stalk. While it is possible to make slightly better hay by cocking up, this will be a practice of doubtful value this year in view of the labor shortage. Gather with a side-delivery rake if possible, or in small windrows with an ordinary dump rake. The hay loader works best with a small windrow. By all means us a loader if possible and to facilitate matters a sliding rack may be used so that when one-half the rack is loaded it may be pulled ahead and the remainder loaded.

We mention red clover because it is the commonest and most satisfactory hay crop, and is used in all general farming hay mixtures.

Timothy should be cut either after it is out of the first blossom or after the second blossom has fallen—generally the latter. It will require less tedding than clover, is more easily cured and may be drawn in sooner after cutting. Do not let it get too ripe and woody.

Alfalfa should be cut when the young shoots are noticed starting out from the axils of the lower leaves on the stalks, and should be handled much like red clover, only greater care is necessary to preserve the leaves, a very valuable portion of the plants.—Prof. Wade Toole, Ontario Agricultural College.

Spray for Potato Rot.

Late blight and rot is the most destructive disease of potatoes in Ontario. In wet seasons it frequently destroys a very large proportion of the crop and causes a loss of many thousands of dollars to the farmers of the province. This is to a large extent a needless loss, for "late blight" and "rot" can be prevented by timely, thorough and intelligent spraying with Bordeaux mixture.

Directions for Spraying.

Spray with Bordeaux mixture, strength 4 to 6 pounds of copper sulphate (bluestone) and 4 pounds of lime to 40 gallons (imperial) of water. Commence spraying when the plants are from five to eight inches high, and keep the foliage covered with Bordeaux throughout the season. Forty to 100 gallons of the Bordeaux mixture will be required for each application, the amount to be used depending upon the size of the plants. Take special care to see that the spraying is very thoroughly done if the weather is at all damp about the 15th of July, as blight often begins at this time. Add a poison when necessary for potato beetles—arsenate of lead paste, 3⅓ lbs. to each 40 gallons of the liquid spray, or Paris green 2 lbs. to 40 gallons or a mixture of 2 lbs. of arsenate of lead paste and 1 lb. of Paris green to 40 gallons. From three to seven applications should be made, depending upon the season, the wetter the weather the larger the number. Do not put off spraying because it looks like rain. If the spray is on the plants half an hour before the rain comes it will be dry and sufficient of it will stick to prevent infection, which takes place during or soon after rain. Spraying as described above should prevent not only late blight and rot but also early blight and potato beetles. For late blight and rot only, it is not necessary to commence spraying until about the 10th of July, but in Ontario it is usually advisable to spray for all three.

A hand pump barrel sprayer can be used for small lots of potatoes. Most men who grow any considerable acreage of potatoes consider that a power potato sprayer is a good investment. The best results from spraying are obtained with machines fitted with T-joint attachments so as to insure covering both surfaces of the leaves at each spraying.

Precautions Necessary to Insure Success.

1. Start spraying before the blight appears. Spraying is done to prevent, not to cure.

2. Spray thoroughly, which can be done only when the mixture is applied with a good pressure so as to insure covering every portion of the plants.

3. Do not hesitate to spray because it look like rain. If the spray is on the plants half an hour before rain comes sufficient of it will stick to prevent infection, which takes place during or soon after rain. If the spraying is left until after a prolonged rain it is very likely to be too late to do much good.

4. Careless spraying never pays. Spray thoroughly or not at all.—Prof. J. E. Howitt, Ontario Agricultural College.

Peter McArthur's View.

"Like the Government we view the situation from the point of military necessity. We agree with them in the view that food is of the first importance to our armies and to our allies. But we submit that the Government, in taking experienced men from the land, is losing more in food power than it is gaining in man power. The gain in men will not be sufficient to make up for the loss of food."

So said Peter McArthur, farmer-author, who participated in the Ottawa delegation that visited the Premier to ask for exemption for the farmers.

Continuing, Mr. McArthur said:—"An experienced farmer is equal to only one French, British or American soldier on the firing line. On the Canadian farm he is equal to at least ten men on European farms."

In Ekfrid Township, Middlesex County, where Mr. McArthur resides, there was one man to every 100 acres of land, later one man to every 160 acres, and when the new Military Service order-in-Council had taken its toll of young farmers there would be one man for every 200 acres.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

TOOK PHOTOGRAPHS OF CZAR

In "Donald Thompson in Russian," the movie photographer tells how he succeeded in getting a picture of the czar after the revolution had begun. He went out to Tzarskoye Selo, the palace near Petrograd where the royal family were confined, and from a distance saw the czar and his son walking in the yard. "The servants must have told him," writes Mr. Thompson, "for the czar sent word to me to come saying that he would allow me to make a picture as close as I wished. I told him that I had met him before in 1915, and had made pictures of him then at the front and at Lemberg. He remembered and immediately spoke of Meuse, the English photographer. While I was making pictures and the camera was being re-loaded so that I could put in some new film, several of the soldiers came up close, while the czar was watching how the camera was loaded. They were smoking. One of them elbowed the czar away and at the same time blew smoke directly in his face. But the czar didn't show that he was annoyed by this. After I had made some motion picture films of him and his son, and also some still photographs, I saluted and said 'good-by.' He answered 'good-by.' While walking away I glanced around. He was still looking after me and talking to his son."

"Tell T. R. It's Mike."

From New York comes the story of a former resident of Belleville who was kept busy night and day answering telephone queries regarding the health of Theodore Roosevelt during the latter's recent illness at Roosevelt hospital.

The man had a telephone number similar to that of the hospital.

The limit of his patience was reached, however, when a man called and said: "Tell the colonel that Mike Hicks called. He'll remember me. I'm the fellow that shook hands with him at the depot the day he came to Allentown."

Resourceful and Brave Cook.

That a cook should perform an act of the utmost daring in the pursuit of his occupation as a purveyor of food seems almost incredible. Yet that is what was done by William B. Gray, a third-class ship's cook in the United States naval reserve. During the cold weather of last winter the Roanoke marshes in North Carolina were frozen and boats were unable to reach the keeper of a lighthouse, who was consequently in danger of starvation. Gray made a sled by putting runners upon a lifeboat, loaded it with food and hauled it across the ice, which was broken and tossed by strong and dangerous currents, to the lighthouse, thus saving the keeper's life and enabling him to continue at his post of duty. Gray is a native of North Carolina.

Siam Studies Philippine Health.

The Philippine model sanitary house which has aroused so much interest not only among Filipinos but also among residents of neighboring countries, has been adopted by Siam, and contractors located at Bangkok, having secured instructions from the Philippine health service, have begun the construction of a number there. The Siamese are keenly alive to the importance of promoting public health, and inasmuch as the health problems of Siam are very similar to those of the Philippines owing to climate and products, delegations of Siamese have arrived from time to time in Manila for the purpose of studying Philippine methods, one of them last year, being headed by his Royal Highness Prince Rangsit, brother of the king of Siam.

Privation in France.

The bread ration of the French soldiers has been cut from 25 ounces to 21 ounces, the civilian bread card allows 10 ounces per day, which is about one-third of the average bread consumption of the French peasant or workman. The manufacture of crackers and pastry has been absolutely prohibited. Consumption of sugar has been reduced 49 per cent and of rice 61 per cent. The import of dried vegetables has been reduced 52 per cent and of fats 48 per cent.

SIMPLY PLACE OF DESOLATION

Little for the Traveler to Enthuse Over When He Visits the Old City of Jerusalem.

The allies' advance in Palestine has taken them through Jerusalem and the little village of Jericho. The plain of Jericho, the scene of so many historic incidents in the past, is once again caught in the old glare of the spotlight. Such a light reveals too plainly the hopeless poverty of the people, the cracks and holes in the rough walls of the hovels, the fields and gardens, fallen by neglect into a riot of weeds and wild flowers growing rank.

It is better to look at Jericho at sunset, and not too critically even then. In a soft light the wretchedness of the thatched huts is less insistent, the jasmine and oleanders seem sweeter and the ragged Bedouins acquire picturesqueness in spite of dirt and squalor.

It is only a short walk through the plain from this Jericho of the present to the two other sites which have borne the same name. One, the Jericho of Old Testament, destroyed by Joshua, is only a memory, its reality proved by bits of unearthed walls and pottery. The third Jericho of the triangle is the Jericho of the New Testament, the city of palm trees which Antony bestowed upon Cleopatra and which she later sold to Herod the Great. Made gorgeous in the reign of Herod as a city of palaces, it is now only a wreck of stones and battered towers. The palms for which it was famous are gone, with the palaces and circus which they shaded. The plain of Jericho is a wilderness, bound to civilization by its many highways and its tiny village. A few miles to the southwest lies Jerusalem, connected with the village by the robber-infested road along which the good Samaritan traveled. All about the plain rise the cliffs, mounted by steep and winding trails. It is not an attractive region, but even if it were more wild and desolate than it is it would still be much visited, for at every step are landmarks of history.

Clark's Day Dream.

In an address in Washington some time ago Speaker Clark said, according to the Pathfinder, that if he should suddenly find himself possessed of the wealth of a Rockefeller the first thing he would do would be to establish a publishing house in St. Louis, Mo.

"Then," he said, "I'd publish an unabridged dictionary, with words pronounced the way the people of the country pronounce them, and put it on the market to compete with those composed by somebody up in a garret who's trying to make people here talk like those in England.

"The next thing I'd do would be to have a real history of the United States composed and published under my supervision. In it I would give the people who have done things credit."

At Pool of Bethesda.

An English reservist, who was living near Sudbury, Ont., before the war, writes to his old neighbors from the Pool of Bethesda, Palestine: "I tasted the water—not too clean!—and in order to do it had to descend lots of steps, as the well is deep down in the ground. At the entrance one may, if one wishes, read in 77 different languages the account of the healing described in the fifth chapter of John—a quite sufficient choice, one would imagine, but 'Taffy' thought differently, and not finding his mother tongue represented, promptly wrote it all out in Welsh from his own Testament. So now there are 78 different versions for visitors to choose from."

Rhetorical Emphasis.

"Don't you think there is too much tendency to profanity in conversation?

"Yes. And it's going to be worse. I understand the government is going to open up more canals. And that means more mules."

has led many a suffering person to neglect the treatment of piles. The itching, stinging sensations produce the keenest distress. The thought of a surgical operation brings mental anxiety which undermines the general health.

Bolsheviki Won The Elections

The Bolsheviki Won Through the Votes of the Unemployed, the Red Guards and Others

(By Joseph Sheplen—United Press)

STOCKHOLM, July 2. — Closely censored despatched from Petrograd report that the Bolsheviki won a complete victory in the elections there.

Maxim Gorky's newspaper, "The Novaya Zhian", which furnishes the report probably most nearly correct, shows that the Petrograd proletariat were absolutely against the Bolsheviki. The majority of the employees of the biggest factories voted with the Mansheviki and the social revolutionaries of the right.

The Bolsheviki, it was indicated, won through the votes of the unemployed, the red guards, artificially created government organizations and alleged unions.

The Soviets, at the point of bayonet, arrested the opposition leaders stopped meetings, suspended newspapers and closed factories and workingmen's clubs.

In the Obuchovsky and Nevsky districts, martial law was proclaimed. Many workment were arrested, patrols and armored automobiles still fill the districts. Workmen are extremely resentful and a serious outbreak is expected.

A special conference of Petrograd workers decided on a day's strike as a protest. They all demand the abolition of capital punishment, which has been one of the methods by which the Bolsheviki retains its power.

"BOLOISM" WAS PRESENT IN ITALY

Important Evidence Revealed at Trial.

(Special to The Examiner.)

ROME, July 2. — Evidence of "Boloism" in Italy were brought to light to-day by the Rome "Mossagero" and the Milan "Sectolo."

Reporting the testimony of Rev. Fr. Freziosi, in a libel trial, those papers showed that alleged accomplices of Bolo Passa offered $1,600,000 for the newspaper properties in 1915. The offer was refused.

The Messagero declared that Senator Annaratone was chosen to control the proposed pro-German "journalistic trust."

RAIDING ACTIVITY IS REPORTED ON THE WEST

Enemy Attempts to Advance Were Repulsed;— Americans Capture Over 300 Prisoners.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 2.—German troops last night, after strong bombardment northwest of Albert north of Somme in attempt to regain position lost Sunday night, succeeded in gaining a footing in one of the British trenches, but elsewhere were repulsed with losses.

German troops also attempted to raid the British lines at points north of the Somme near Lens and on the Flanders front, but were repulsed. The British troops took prisoners in patrol encounters.

FRENCH OFFICIAL

Canadian Press.

PARIS, July 2. — The Village of Vaux, west of Chateau Thierry and a little ground to the west of Vaux, captured last night by Americans in the operation on Marne front carried out in conjunction with the French. More than three hundred prisoners including five officers were captured.

The success has resulted in the improvement in the Allied line between Hill 20 and the vicinity of Vaux. The French carried out raids on front between Montdidier and Noyon and eastward of Rheims in which prisoners were taken. German raiders were driven off by French fire near Belloy and in upper Alsace.

Americans Advanced.

(United Press Service.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, July 2.—American troops advanced on a two-mile front west of Chateau Thierry last night, to the depth of about a half mile, taking 450 prisoners and inflicting the heaviest losses on the enemy. The American losses were extremely light.

On the Italian Front.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES IN THE FIELD, July 2.—Further Austrian attempts to recapture Mont Di Valbelle are developing.

The enemy left at least 1,500 dead on the slopes after yesterday afternoon's assault. Nearly 2,000 prisoners were taken yesterday and the preceding day.

The capture of Mont Di Valbelle, Col Lel Rosse and Col Di Chele was the result of perfect co-operation between the Italian infantry and artillery. The enemy's losses were very heavy, while ours were light.

The Austrians employed four divisions (48,000 men). The Italian Ninth Infantry and Regina Brigade, and a company af Czecho Slovaks won particular distinction in the storming of Mont Di Valbelle, and the subsequent defense of that height against enemy counter attacks.

HOPE TO CHALLENGE THE ALLIED FLEETS

Kerensky Led The Movement

The Two Siberian Governments Have Been United—Dreadnoughts Blown Up

(United Press Service.)

(By JoJseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, July 2.—The Dreadnoughts Velia and Demokratia and six destroyers of the Russian Black Sea fleet have arrived in Sebastopol, according to semi-official despatches from Russian sources to-day. Their crews were disarmed by the Germans and forced to leave the city immediately.

In the revolt at Novo Russusk (two hundred miles north of Sebastopol), the Russians blew up the Dreadnought Svebednaya Rossia and ten destroyers.

Led Movement.

Persons close to the leaders of the Siberian government informed me that Alexander Kerensky led the Siberian movement in favour of re-establishment of the constituent assembly from outside the country. I am not allowed to divulge the details, but Kerensky went into Russia from Christiana with a delegation, all of whom were travellers in disguise. They visited Moscow and other centres, where they conferred with aides. Afterwards they all returned to a Scandinavian city.

Governments United.

The two Siberian governments have been united. The eastern government, the capital of which was at Sarbin, has joined with the western government and the latter's capital, Omsk, has been chosen as the centre of government. Members of the constituent assembly, Gen. Chorvat Batman of the Baikal Cossacks, and other leaders, have formed a small cabinet. Col. Ivanoff was named commander-in-chief of the Czecho Slovak front.

The Czecho Slovaks form the nucleus of the Siberian army. With them are brigaded several corps of volunteers and detachments of Cossacks.

POWER PLANTS HIT.

An electric "surge" produced in the wires by lightning on Sunday night swept into the Auburn power plant, burned holes in the insulation of some of the coils, and for the rest of the night left the generators dead and the city in uncontested darkness. Some of the automatic switches also suffered, and altogether it was a bad night for the power house engineers. The electricity from the air drove its field close to some of the distribution wires and which, affording an excellent conductor, carried it into the power house where the automatic switches doubtless saved the machinery from more serious injury from the surplus current gathered from the air.

SQUARE DEAL FOR ALL NATIONS AT THE FINISH

The World Will Soon Know the Definite Purposes of the United States.

"DOCTRINE OF AID"

(By Robert J. Bender—United Press)

WASHINGTON, July 2. — The world will soon know the definite purposes of the United States in its herculean efforts to bring an end to the struggle by 1920.

President Wilson has completed the formulation of his "Doctrine of Aid", the finished product holds out America's hand, not only to Russia, but to all the other oppressed peoples under Teuton militarism, and to the fighting nations themselves, now and in the future.

The president has decided the time has come for a recapitulation of aims in the war. The next months will be furious ones and strong decisions must be made. There must be no doubt in the minds of nations, however, that whatever course this country is called upon to pursue in any exigency, her ultimate purposes are to see that all nations get a square deal at the finish.

Sudden Death Of Mr. R. C. Read Of This City

Died at Niagara Falls From Acute Indigestion

On Sunday death claimed a well-known resident of Peterborough, in the person of Mr. R. C. Read, sales manager of the De Laval Company. Mr. Read, with his family, left by motor for Hamilton, Chatham and points west on a business trip. On Sunday the party motored to Niagara Falls. On the way Mr. Read complained of feeling unwell, and after arriving in the Falls he went immediately to a doctor. Twenty minutes after he entered the office he died from acute indigestion. The body was sent from Niagara Falls to Hamilton, where interment will take place. He leaves besides his wife, one daughter, Grace, seventeen years of age.

Mr. Read was very active in church and philanthropic work. He was a deacon of Murray street Baptist church and was beloved by those with whom he was associated. He was an active Y.M.C.A. worker and was known by a large number of boys in the city. Any association or club that had for its object the uplifting of boy life could count Mr. Read as one of its members. In the church he was always the prime mover in sports and social events of the younger generation. Immediately on receiving the sad news, the members of his Sunday school class met and sent a letter of condolence to Mrs. Read.

Mr. Read was born in Kent county, near Chatham, and like Abraham Lincoln, was born in a log cabin.

For many years he worked on the farm, and in April, 1904, he started to work for the De Laval Company, and subsequently was appointed local superintendent, which he continued to hold until Jan 1, 1912. On this date he was advanced one more step and was appointed manager of the separator department at the plant in Montreal. When a factory was located in Peterborough he was transferred here as sales manager of the separator department. He was described by his friends as quiet and reserved, and in disposition, courteous and obliging. He would go almost to any length to oblige a friend, even at great inconvenience to himself. He was the kind of man who could be counted on to represent all that is best in citizenship.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Building Permits Show Big Increase

Twenty-four building permits for June totalled $100,040 and for the half-year $174,835, as compared with $38,165 for June last year, and $108,088 for the first six months. This month's fine showing is largely a recovery from the fire of last winter and also a stretching of some of the factories to relieve their growing pains. The Neill building represents $35,000, the Pappas theatre $30,500, the Peterboro Cereal Company's extension $15,000, and the Campbell Flour Mills' addition, $7,000.

Washout 17 Feet Deep In Gravel Road By The Storm

Was Discovered Early Yesterday Morning by Automobile Driver Who Narrowly Escaped Running Into It.

FIVE CULVERTS DAMAGED

Five culverts were washed out in North Monaghan, Reeve McIntosh stated to-day. The worst damage occurred near Carver's on the Gravel road, a short distance west of the city, where a fissure seventeen feet deep and eight feet wide was cut through the road by the wash of water from Sunday night's rain. There is a stone bridge there, but the swollen stream forced a passage at one side of the bridge and gradually deepened and widened it until a waggon could have been driven through the cut. It was discovered first by a Peterborough man who was starting out for Toronto. He approached it in the dim early morning light, but fortunately noticed the excavation, although he stopped barely at its edge. The drop of seventeen feet would certainly have smashed the car, and might easily have caused a fatality.

Mr. McIntosh rounded up a gang of men yesterday and himself assisted in restoring the road through "sunset pass," as it has been named. The other culverts demanded considerable work, but everything was completed at noon to-day.

Farms Scored.

Mr. H. G. Webber stated that the heavy rain washed the rolling fields, especially where the hills were sharp, scoring them deeply and causing considerable damage.

SNOW THIS MORNING.

LIGHT FALL AT 3 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING, ACCORDING TO A REPORT.

According to a bulletin from the night police, there was a light fall of fine snow about three o'clock this morning, Tuesday, July 2nd. But for the wind, it was stated, there would surely have been a mid-summer frost to emphasize the extraordinary nature of the weather.

"De-rail" Saved Lakefield Train

Ran Past Semaphore and Was Only Hundred Feet From Nassau Bridge Which Was Partly Open

The stodgy old Lakefield train provided a flurry of excitement on Saturday evening at seven o'clock when the engine and baggage car were derailed on the west side of the canal at Nassau. The two coaches were crowded with Stoney Lake cottagers going up for the holiday, and an overflow crowd almost filled the baggage coach. The Steamer Stoney Lake had passed down the canal and the bridge was not quite closed when the train approached. It was stated that the semaphore was set against the train, but apparently Engineer Dolby did not see it, for he drove past. When the engine hit the "de-rail," which was open as a precaution against just such a contingency, it was thrown on to the ties. The emergency brakes had been quickly thrown on by the engineer and the train was pulled up within the length of the engine and baggage car.

The G. T. R. called both Lakefield and Peterborough garages for a taxi service for the stranded passengers, most of whom reached the lakes in good time. The "de-rail" is one hundred feet from the canal and passengers agreed that it had saved the train from probably plunging into the canal or at least of piling up at the bridge, which was just closing when the accident happened.

One pasenger was heard to remark, after seeing how close they came to the edge of the canal, "I thank God we are safe. Had the engineer not had presence of mind to put on the emergency brakes so promptly, we would all have gone into the canal."

AUSTRIAN SOCIALISTS REPLY TO THE ALLIED SOCIALISTS

Approve of a League of Nations and Believe a Democratic Peace Would Cure Many Ills

(Special to The Examiner)

ZURICH, July 2. — The Austrian Socialists in reply to the Allied Socialists war aims, approved a league of nations and demanded establishment of an Austro-Hungarian confederation of Autonomous nations and restoration and indemnification of Belgium.

Resolutions adopted by Austrian Socialists declared their belief that a complete, democratic peace would settle the questions of Alsace-Lorraine, Poland and Turkey, Italian expansion and the fate of the Tropical Colonies.

$25,000 WORTH OF DOPE FROM CANADA IN BOSTON

BOSTON, June 28.— Hundreds of packages of habit-forming drugs smuggled here from Canada and valued, federal authorities stated, at $25,000, were found in a room in a lodging house occupied by Alfred Carnicelli, of Arlington, who was arrested as a fugitive from Vermont. The packages were carefully wrapped and stacked in orderly array in a trunk ready for delivery at exorbitant rates.

Federal authorities charged that Carnicelli had been operating with Theodore Dutechman, in jail at Burlington, Vermont, and that they had crossed the border into Vermont many times with drugs.

After Carnicelli had pleaded not guilty and been held in $5,000 bond, the drug seizure was announced and his bail increased to $10,000.

The large enveloping cape reigns supreme.

Peterboro' Gun Is Still In Action

Machine Gun Donated by Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Mason is Doing Good Work

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Mason, of this city, have received an interesting letter from Lieut. J. H. Eastwood, which in part is as follows:

"A brass plate attached to a Lewis gun in my platoon informs us that it is one you presented. I thought you would be interested to know that the gun has done a great deal of useful work. It has been in use over a year to my knowledge. It is reputed to be one of the oldest guns still doing service with the 2nd Battalion. It has been wounded once by shrapnel in the fore radiator casing. It is manned by a splendid crew at present, including S. Anderson, who was Lewis gun sergeant in the 93rd Battalion, and it should do good work in this summer's fighting, which is bound to be more or less heavy. If you care to have a picture of it I will have one sent to you providing I can find a photographer. They are very scarce in this district."

Yours sincerely,
J. H. EASTWOOD.

The gun in question was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Mason in 1915 to the 2nd Battalion.

EXPRESS THANKS

The entertainment committee of the G. W. V. A. wish to express their thanks to the Ladies' Auxiliary for their work in connection with the refreshment booth at exhibition grounds yesterday and their deep gratitude to Mr. Wm. Lytle, who transported all supplies to and from the grounds, free of charge, this materially assisting in the financial success at the occasion.

A BETTER SYSTEM.

After nearly four years at war the Canadian military authorities seem at last to have solved the problem of facilitating the return to civil life of a returned soldier no longer fit for military service. Up to the present time men returned from overseas, many of whom had positions waiting for them, have had difficulty in getting their discharge, so long did it take to unravel the red tape.

The new system of District Depots, which are being established in each military district seems to do away with the old method of holding men in the army for a moment longer than necessary when they are found unfit. Much needless expense will be saved.

Every man coming back from overseas comes under the command of the district depot— not only invalided men, but soldiers on furlough as well. The soldier who requires treatment is sent to hospital, and when he is discharged from that institution he is either fit for further service or not. If being boarded if he is graded in category C1 or higher he is kept in the army—if graded lower than C1 he is ready to be discharged into civilian life. In the former case the Depot transfers him into a unit for which his category fits him—in the latter he is sent to the casualty unit under control of the Depot, and is discharged without delay.

This is a big improvement over the old plan and if satisfactorily carried out should remove many of the complaints that have been heard in the past.

INTEMPERANCE IN LANGUAGE.

"If some of these women would concentrate their efforts to work of vital importance instead of romping off to extremes of that kind they would be doing something to aid the country and in the meantime be improving their own minds." This criticism by Dr. Hastings, Toronto's well known Medical Officer of Health, of the action of the President of the Wentworth Women's Christian Temperance Union condemning the sale of grape juice and the sending of cigarettes to Canadian soldiers, may seem severe, but it is justified by the occasion. Dr. Hasting's remarks are founded on common sense and his warning to the misguided women who are endeavouring to go to fanatical extremes, that they are endangering the whole cause of temperance, is one that members of the W.C.T.U. should not ignore.

The condemnation of grape juice which Dr. Hastings says is more wholesome than ginger ale or other temperance drinks, is almost as absurd as the effort to stop the supply of cigarettes to the soldiers at the front. The women who have been leading these agitations are evident not students of history or they would see the great danger that exists in their becoming so intemperate in their desire to stamp out intemperance that they will cause a reaction in public sentiment that will sweep away all the reforms that have been achieved. This has been the case in the past, and the Women's Christian Temperance Union—at least those members of that body who are the leaders in these fanatical schemes to do away with grape juice and snatch from the soldiers the solace he finds in tobacco—would be well advised to consider the effect their actions will have on the whole cause of temperance. In the meantime, as Dr. Hastings points out, Canada is at war and there is work of vital importance for these women to busy themselves with. Grape juice is not the greatest menace that Canada is facing just now—the cigarette that Canada's soldiers are smoking will not do them as much harm as a day without a smoke would do them.

UNDEMONSTRATIVE.

The remark of a visitor at Friday evening's band concert in Victoria Park that Canadians are not very demonstrative, was justified by the attitude of the crowd towards the patriotic airs played by the 57th Band. As Monday was Dominion Day, Lieut. Gliddon decided to recognize the occasion by playing several national selections at the beginning of the programme. The National Anthem came first, and as by this time Peterborough audiences have learned that the music means something besides a signal that a concert is over, it was recognized by the crowd rising to its feet. Then came Canada's own stirring national air, "O Canada," played splendidly by the band. On the eve of the Dominion's birthday, with thousands of Canadians winning fame for their native land overseas, it might reasonably be expected that the rendition of this stirring selection would be greeted with a whirlwind of applause. There was not a sign from the crowd—the sound of the last crashing notes died away uninterrupted by even a single handclap. Imagine an United States' audience receiving the Star Spangled Banner in that fashion. And then came Canada's other favourite national air, 'The Maple Leaf." Its rendition was applauded by not more than half a dozen people.

If Peterborough people know the national airs when they hear them played, they certainly have learned how to conceal their feelings.

THE SPLENDID WOMEN.

The following from the Rochester Post-Express is an eloquent and well-merited tribute to the work that women have done for the allied cause. There should be a message in it for some Canadian women whose activity seems to take the line of slandering Canada's troops and to trying to keep away from them the comfort they are able to find in tobacco:

Come home victorious or do not come home, say the women of England to the men of England. "We will share your difficulties but not your defeat. We will not live in a world that Germany rules."

The woman's party in Great Britain, as voiced by Miss Christobel Pankhurst, scorns all thought of a compromise peace and declares for victory or death. They insist that every German sympathizer shall be driven out of office. They demand that all the men fomenting strikes—the British Bolsheviki— shall be thrust into the army. It is a sign of national degeneracy, they well declare, when interned Huns are fed on the fat of the land while Britons in Germany are tortured and starved.

Are they not right? What else but decay of virility, moral squashiness does the mandlin sentimentality of their pacifists, and our own pacifists, show? Even the women to whom compassion is a second nature put such flabby decadents to shame. How often it happens that women see the truth more clearly, stand for the right more staunchly, suffer and sacrifice more cheerfully than the men! Of course there is some feminine drivel, some women whose emotions run away with their minds. The combination of soft heart and soft head may be found in either sex. But who has heard tell of any woman profiteer? Who knows of any true American woman who is fomenting strikes or hampering the government in its conduct of the war? Or who knows of any mother with a son in France, or on the way there who would coddle the nation's enemies or slaver and slobber over interned spies?

In a Cleveland street car recently a sleek, rat-eyed male creature remarked to a friend with a vulpine physiognomy who smirked approval that the war might go on forever for all that he cared as he was making money enough. Then an American woman rose to the occasion. Crossing the aisle with flaming eyes she swatted the slink with all her strength, full in the face. "I have a son in France," she said. And then she gave him another crashing blow. "And that," she said, "is for my other son upon the sea."

Oh the splendid women of Allied lands, knitting, nursing, toiling, saving, suffering, sorrowing! To them not less than to the heroes who go with their Godspeed to the front will it be due that liberty is proclaimed throughout the world unto all the inhabitants there of.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Canada is suffering from many other things that are more dangerous than grape juice—the danger of a reaction following blue law agitation is one of them.

There are hundreds of citizens who are awaiting the action of the Council in regard to restaurants to-night.

The weather man must have pulled too many leaves off the calendar yesterday—at least it is certain that the brand he handed out was the November 1st variety.

ONE CLEAR CALL.

(Pittsburg Gazette-Times)

Being paged in soprano is the newest war experience.

SOUND TIMBER; SOUND OWNER

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

A Georgia woman offers a hundred acres of black walnut timber to the Government for the manufacture into gun stocks "at any price the Government see fit to pay."

THE LONG DEFERRED BUT BITTER DRAUGHT

(Kansas City Star)

More reports of revolution in Austria and still the crisis is deferred. If the Hapsburg had the good breeding exhibited by Charles II. on his deathbed he would apologize to the world for being such an unconscionable time dying.

A TWO-LETTER STEP

(New York World)

Professor Paul Rohrbach German historian, writes that "Russia is now a mere geographical conception and nothing more." It may be. Then again, the great bear may be only napping. It is but a step from Robrbach to roorback.

THE SILENT SERVICE

(Baltimore American)

There is regard and applause for the woman who so nobly performs patriotic work under the public eye. But there is heroic service being rendered in many a domestic kitchen by patient, patriotic housewives, uncomplaining under the burden of abnormal conditions that merits gratitude, at least.

CUTTING THE CACKLE

(Providence Journal)

Fortunately it is not incumbent on any of us just now to exercise our gifts of prophecy. The war will end when Germany has been beaten to her knees; that is all we need to concern ourselves about. The business in hand is to hasten the day by concentrating all our strength and skill upon the task.

WOULD NOT BE ECLIPSED

(The Springfield Republican)

A new record in eclipse observation was perhaps made by an astronomer in Wyoming, who when he saw that the clouds were not likely to break, jumped into a high-powered motor car and traveled at full speed till he found a bit of clear sky. He was rewarded for his enterprise with some good photographs.

THE ITALIAN FLAG

(Chicago Tribune)

While other nations have betrayed the Allied cause, Italy has remained steadfast. She proposes to stand with the Allies to the end, though her sufferings have in some respects been as great as those of France. The least we Americans here at home can do is to display the Italian flag as an earnest of our appreciation of our Italian ally.

LIEUT. FRANK SAWERS OF PETERBOROUGH, AWARDED THE MILTARY CROSS ON JUNE 1.

Canadian Dragoons' Work.
British Brigadier's Thanks.

The Canadian Army greatly appreciated a letter received from a British brigadier-general concerning dismounted work done by 220 men of the Royal Canadian Dragoons on March 23rd. The letter says:

"I wish to express my admiration and gratitude for the fine work done by the Royal Canadian Dragoons when they came to our assistance at a very critical time. I can assure you that this is the universal feeling throughout the brigade. I consider that the regiment saved the —— Brigade that day. God grant that if ever the brigade are in a tight corner they may be lucky enough to find themselves side by side with the Royal Canadian Dragoons."

PRAYER DAY IN WAR TIME, 1918

Auxilium ab Alto.

The British Empire has set apart Sunday, June 30th, as a day for universal Prayer.

I.

What shall we pray to Thee, thou God of Heaven?
We as an Empire kneel,
Where we have sinned we ask to be forgiven,
We do not wish to feel
That we, alone, can conquer by the sword—
But through Thy power, Lord.

II.

What shall we pray to Thee, Divine Sustainer,
Of Britain's past ideals?
What shall we do to make our purpose plainer—
The sword that Britain wields
Is like the sword that Shammah drew of old—
In God's might he was bold.

III.

And so, to-day, we ask of God our Father,
The guidance of Thy will.
Take from us pride or boast, for we would rather,
In humbleness fulfill
The call we think Divine to keep our faith
With Freedom unto death.

IV.

Thou art our strength, we are not this forgetting,
'Tis in Thy name we Rise!
We heard Right call—and we are not regretting
To make the sacrifice—
If in our hearts we hear Thy spirit voice
Approving of our choice.

V.

And so to-day we with one voice are pleading—
Forgive, and guide us on—
Fain would we only strive where Thou art leading,
And Justice may be won.
And may our wish to serve Thee never cease,
In conflict fierce, or peace.

T. C. DEAN.

Germany "Faked" Slav Atrocities

Krupp Director Says That Commission Found No Evidence.

WASHINGTON, June 29—Further revelations by Dr. Muehlon, director of the Krupp Company, who is in Switzerland, showing that Germany falsified stories of Russian atrocities during the early days of the war are summarized in a despatch today from Berne. According to Dr. Muehlon, the commission of Cabinet officers sent to East Prussia to investigate returned without evidence of atrocities and with a report that the population spoke in terms of praise of the conduct of the Russian soldiers.

Dr. Muehlon also is quoted as saying that in August, 1914, high German officials boasted that Germany possessed the means of destroying Russia without a single battle, by inciting revolution, and that the German plan also included the liberation of Finland and the Baltic countries, the pretended reinstatement of Poland as a kingdom; the turning over of Bessarabia to Roumania and the giving of the Caucasian territories and Persia to Turkey.

No Need Of Rise In Bread Price

MR. THOMSON STATES

Public Should Accept No Excuse From the Retailers.

Ottawa, June 29.—The Cost of Living Branch of the Department of Labor reports to Hon. T. W. Crother that the report that higher bread prices must result from the recent order of the Canada Food Board requiring substitutes of wheat to be used in the baking of bread, is not based upon facts.

There are sufficient supplies of these substitutes on hand in Canada to meet this new demand and the prices at which the millers are offering the same for sale do not necessitate an advance in the price of bread, the Cost of Living Branch declares. The percentage of substitute flour required by the order in Canada, it is pointed out, is not as high as that required in the United States, and the number of substitutes allowed in Canada is greater. There can, consequently, be no ground for patriotic Canadians to complain at the new order of the Food Board, the Cost of Living Branch says.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

OVER FOUR THOUSAND PEOPLE TOOK IN DOMINION DAY CELEBRATION YESTERDAY

Weather Was Disagreeable in Spots But the Large Crowd Made the Most of the Occasion—A Big List of Sports — Races Were Keenly Contested.

THE PRIZE WINNERS

Four thousand people passed the new entrance gate at the Exhibition grounds to witness the Dominion Day celebration that was provided yesterday by the directorate of the Fair Board, together with the co-operation of a large body of citizens. While the weather could have served such an event to better advantage, it did not mar the occasion to an appreciable extent. The track was a little heavy, but the liberal use of a road drag improved it materially. A big list of sports was provided and everything, including the whippet races, passed off without a hitch. The motor cycle race was the only event on the card that was cancelled. A bicycle race was substituted, as the condition of the track made the use of motor driven machines a dangerous proposition. A disagreeable wind swept over the grounds all afternoon and one of the most comfortable looking men on the grounds wore a fur-lined overcoat. Later in the day another man appeared on the streets in a fur coat of the coonskin variety and a straw hat.

The proceedings on the grounds were enlivened by the presence of the 57th band. The ice cream vendors had a poor day owing to weather conditions. A man with a "hot dog" stand would have made a small fortune yesterday.

THE OFFICIAL OPENING.

The celebration was officially opened by His Honour Judge Huycke, who commended the directorate upon the success of their efforts to improve the Exhibition park by the addition of a handsome new gate, and other improvements. His Honour was introduced to the large gathering in the grandstand by Mr. R. Denne, president of the Exhibiiton Board.

The Baby Show.

The baby show was a big feature, and the youngsters attracted a lot of attention. Following is the list of prize winners, giving the name, age and weight of each baby:

BABY BOYS UP TO ONE YEAR.

BABY GIRLS UP TO ONE YEAR.

2nd.—Dorothy Ellis, 79 Smith street, six months old; weight 25 pounds.

BABY BOYS ONE TO TWO YRS.

BABY GIRLS ONE TO TWO YRS.

TWINS UP TO THREE YEARS.

1st.—Marjorie and Margaret Sprost, 258 Aylmer street; two years and three months; weight 30 1-2 pounds each.

2nd—Jack and Gwynnette Campbell, 256 Water street; two years and one month; weight 24 pounds each.

3rd—Alfred and Alfreda Field, 94 Gladstone Avenue; one year and ten months; weight 26 and 25 pounds.

Extra prize for Twins—Philip and Willie Maynard, 469 Elm Street; two years and six months; weight 30 and 31 pounds.

The judges were Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Suckling, Mrs. A. H. Stratton and Mrs. B. Gardiner.

The Horse Races.

1st, "Little Wanna," owned by Blake Stapleton, Newcastle.

2nd, "Bob Hill," owned by H. C. Wade, Belleville.

Dr. Sinclair, of Cannington, Mr. J. Brooks and Mr. R. J. Munro, of this city, were in charge of the races.

The Baseball Game.

The baseball game resulted in the Thistles defeating the Riversides by a score of 8 to 1. The weather was very unfavourable, but the fans turned out and gave the boys a hand.

Mr. J. J. Solomon has received a telegram from Archie Burton, of the Toronto Wellingtons, asking that a game be arranged between the Wellingtons and a picked team from the Peterborough City League.

Bicycle Races.

The bicycle races were pretty good, considering the heavy going and the high wind. In spite of the liberal use of a road drag the track was heavy in spots and the riders found the going hard. There was only one Peterborough entry in the list and he got away with a third prize in the one mile novice race. The officials in charge of the races were B. B. Halladay, timer, Arthur Watson, timer, George Braden, judge, and W. W. Gladish, referee. The results follow:

One Mile Novice Race.—1st W. Taylor 2nd Neil Russell, 3rd D. Loscher of Peterborough. Time, 2.59. Eight starters.

Two Mile Handicap.— 1st George Watson, 2nd W. Taylor, 3rd Harry Martin. Time, 5.25. Six starters.

This race was substituted for the motor cycle races owing to the condition of the track, which made motor cycling dangerous.

The Whippet race.

The outstanding feature of the programme was the whippet races. They were held under the auspices of the Toronto Whippet Association and were easily the biggest feature on the programme. A whippet is really a small greyhound. As a rule the races are free-for-all handicaps, the advantage being given to the lighter dogs. A common handicap is three yards for each pound weight, though dogs with fast records are often compelled to start at scratch regardless of weight. The course is usually 200 yards from scratch. The big races are run in heats of four or five dogs to the heat, the winners qualifying for semi-finals and finals. The dogs are held on their marks by starters, or slippers as they are called, who grasp the neck and quarters or collar and tail. At the signal the dogs are thrown forward in such a way as to catch their stride on landing. Both man and dog must be steady at the start and much skill is shown by the professional slippers. The owners or trainers of the dogs run up the track, each waving a towel or coloured cloth and shouting to his dog, who strains from his slipper, eager to be off. The trainers stop a few yards beyond the finish line, continuing to shout and wave their towels. Then, at a pistol shot, the dogs are released by their slippers and dash forward toward the familiar waving towels and voices. The time-keepers and judges note the dogs as they cross the finish line, and then each dog makes a flying leap at his owner's towel swinging far out and well night upsetting his master. In about twelve seconds after the pistol shot it is all over—a swift, spectacular race, enlivened by much shouted encouragement to the dogs.

The Results.

The results of yesterday's races were as follows:

Nineteen of our machines are missing against the enemies 39.

WAKENED STAR BOARDER

Who Appeared In Police Court This Morning Charged With Assault.

Hormidas Lauzon was sleeping in his boarding house last Friday afternoon when W. Alford, a youth, entered and called up the stairs for a friend. In any case he wakened Lauzon who found him shortly after in one of the rooms, and without much ado punched him about the head and chest, and helped him into the street with a parting kick. After that Alford reached the Police Station and P. C. McIntosh was sent out for Lauzon who stated this morning that he had full authority in the management of the boarding house. The hearing of the case by Magistrate Rush was continued this afternoon.

On August 4, 1915, there was a downpour of 2.16.

Nov. 9, 1913, gave 2.25. This was followed by a heavy gale and disastrous wrecks on the Great Lakes.

On July 10, 1909, 2.30 fell.

June 30, 1906, 2.34

July 5, 1902, had 2.41 for the day, and the month 8.65

None of these figures, however, approach those of Sunday last.

Yesterday was a cool day for the 1st of July, the highest point reached being only 61 degrees. Last night's lowest was 47 degrees, but some early risers aver there were traces of white frost in some places.—W. P.

A blinding flash of lighting plunged the city into total darkness shortly after midnight during Sunday night's storm. The current running wild in its atmospheric medium, struck near bome, putting the power lines out of commission, and for a time the city's outlines were completely blotted out. Stygian night could not have been more impenetrable, and the late faring citizens wading home through the rain and the pools of water that had collected at many a corner, experienced some slight approximation to the conditions that returned soldiers can never forget, and never realistically describe.

Dominion Day, 1918, will be readily recollected in future comparisons, but those who were away from home when June turned into July will always remember the indelible features of its eve. As if some mysterious power mocked the artificial illumination, the bright lights in the streets and in the homes were put out in a twinking as if some mighty hand had thrust the city's torch into a depth of water. George street's shallow gulch was lost in the dense shroud, and the trees in the residential street, if possible, intensified the gloom. It seemed that a big, black, woolly cloud had fallen upon the city, folding into every doorway, in fact into the recesses of every home. And with this feeling followed a mysterious influence by which the darkness seemed peopled with vague, shadowy forms, an impression that was sometimes strengthened by collisions with persons whose rubber-padded steps were unheard approaching. This happened quite often on George street between one and two o'clock, when the storm's greatest wave seemed to have passed. Some of these stragglers, venturing forth, were guided here and there by the flashlights of the police, but for the most part they linked arms and struggled down George street in the middle of the road. Others groped their way home with their umbrellas, and few dry feet crossed the thresholds of home. One lone bicyclist in the south end stumbled into a slight hollow in the road which had become filled with water from walk to walk when the culverts plugged with the flotsam of the street, and sprawled over the handle bars into the shallow canal. From the sounds the night carried, with phosphorescent glints, his inch-correct an objurgation that must have completely chastened it for its temporary desertion.

Uptown many of the catch basins clogged with the scourings of the streets, but some of them were opened by P. C. Dainnard and P. C. Wigg, who waded into the pools and lifted the iron gratings by plunging their arms to the shoulders into the muddy eddies.

Automobiles turning in George street from either end lit up the long lane of buildings with strange, wan gleams, and then as they swept into side streets, old "broadway" was lost more completely than before. There have been nights when some lights failed, but the first hour of Dominion Day was the darkest in the longest memory of Nightwatchman Finnie. There wasn't a spark, except the flashing lights of the police, until here and there candles, stored away for such emergencies, flickered in homes where the residents were probably waiting wide-eyed until the lightning had become less an uncomfortable and unwelcome presence.

TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Warren Randles, Rothesay, Kings County, N.B., "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter. So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel fine now, and am recommending the Nerve Food to others."

PETERBORO BOY REPORTED GASSED.

Mr. Aubrey Millard, Cameron street, has received notice that his brother, No. 113030, Trooper Frank Milad, who enlisted with the 8th C. M.R., had been gassed on June 6th, and was confined to a Liverpool hospital. At the time he was gassed he was serving with the 8th Canadian Siege Battery.

T.A.S. Picnic A Success Despite Chill Weather

Many Citizens Attended During the Afternoon and Made the Best of Discouraging Conditions

The weather man treated the Dominion Day picnic impartially, but for all the univiting and unseasonable conditions they were invariably successful, and none more so than the annual outing of St. Peter's T. A. S., to their park on the Otonabee River. The morning attendance was disappointing, but early in the afternoon the boats began to unload crowds at the Park, and until evening the visitors came and went, enjoying themselves despite the cool winds and threatening sky. Dinner and supper, strictly observing the food regulations, were all that was promised by the committee. Not a pound of the 205 pounds of Lake Ontario fish and the 75 pounds of beans was left, and those who took their meals at the grounds instead of at home were highly pleased with the service. The chefs were Messrs. John Trombly, Albert Doris and the Curtin brothers, experienced cooks, whose appetizing meals were all that could be desired.

The programme of vaudeville proved a successful experiment and will doubtless be elaborated in future.

The numbers were as follows:—
Piano selections—Miss M. Gorman.
Step dance—Mr. D. Quinlan.
Vocal solo—Miss Dorothy Garden.
Vocal solo—Mr. Ed. Hanrahan.
Step dance—Mr. MacMurty.
Vocal solo—Miss Lottie Hogan.
Comedy Sketch—"A Coon Rehearsal" by Messrs. V. Morphet, D. Leonard and J. Primeau.

The sketch was a hit that delighted the crowd, and Mr. Morphet's recitation "I'm Happy 'Cause I'm Livin'" was thoroughly enjoyed.

The ladies in charge of the fish pond, refreshment booth and dining room, found their first fears of a quiet and disappointing day routed by the afternoon attendance.

Rev. Father Phelan, was quite grateful this morning that the annual picnic was so successful. It did not compare with many other years, but the results, in view of the unfavorable conditions, were quite satisfactory.

British Labour Is In War To Finish

Will Stick Though Channel Ports Fall, Says Committee.

LONDON, June 29.—The committee in charge of a pro-ally Labor and Socialist demonstration to be held in Trafalgar Square on July 14 appeals to the members of the trade unions of London to attend the demonstration "in order to express sympathy with the countries which have been overrun by the armed might of Prussian militarism, and to let it be known to the democracy of America that, come what may even if Paris should fall and the Channel ports be taken, the people of Great Britain are resolved to support the allied nations to the fullest extent of their energy and power."

The appeal adds: "What would followd peace negotiations, with the Central Powers victorious, can be judged from the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest and that which the new Caucasian Republic has been compelled to sign with the Ottoman forces."

To Pay $25,000 Or Quit Business

Alternative Given to American Profiteer by Food Administration.

WASHINGTON, June 29—The Food Administration announced that the J. Kulla Company, flour dealers of 2 Stone street, New York, has been informed that it must pay $25,000 to the Red Cross or go out of business. The company, it was said, had not indicated the course it intends to pursue. Concerning the charges against the company this official announcement was made:

"After a full investigation it was established that this firm was guilty of seling flour and substitutes at excessive margins of profit, and making sales of flour without proportionate sales of substitutes.

"The investigation disclosed that in one month over three-fourths of the company's transactions showed an excessive profit and that the preceding months were approximately bad. It was established also that in a large number of cases the firm had paid no attention to the rule requiring the sale of substitutes with flour."

15,466 Persons Registered In City And 3772 In Townships

Total For West Peterborough, According to Mr. F. H. Dobbin's Statement Was 19,238—Figures Indicate That Registration Was Practically Complete—More Males Than Females in the Townships.

REGISTRATION RETURNS IN WEST PETERBORO.

IN THE CITY.

Total registered	15,466
Estimate of population	20,640

IN THE TOWNSHIPS.

Total registered	3,772
Estimated population	7,125

TOTAL IN RIDING.

Number registered	19,238
Estimated population	27,765

The above is a summary of the registration returns from the district of West Peterboro, of which Ald. F. H. Dobbin was Registrar. In the main the number of persons registered in proportion to the population is about on an average with the returns from other districts already announced.

VERY CLOSELY ESTIMATED

South Monaghan is grouped with the townships of the County of Peterborough because that township is a part of the Electoral District of West Peterborough. In other respects it has no municipal connection with this county.

It will be observed that all persons under the age of 16 years were not required to register. This provision at once lessens the total of population very materially. In the city it was estimated that nearly 4,000 souls would be comprised in the group whose ages would range from 5 to 16 years. The assessment roll does not take cognizance of all under the age of 5 years. Hence in addition to the above deduction a further reduction was made in the estimated total of nearly 1500, leaving about 15,000 as the possible registration total in the city. The results show that this estimate was about correct.

The total registration in the city is 15,466, which is about 75 per cent. of the total population over 5 years of age. In North Monaghan the registration was not quite one-third of the population of the township on the roll for 1917, while in South Monaghan over three-quarters of the given population registered. Smith registered a little less than one-half; Ennismore about one-half; Harvey over three-quarters and Galway and Cavendish about one-half.

MEN IN MAJORITY.

Looking at the registration in the townships, i is seen that the idea for some time prevalent that more women were in residence than of men is wrong. South Monaghan, for instance, proves up nearly even. North Monaghan has 100 women to the good. In Ennismore there is some difference. Harvey has more men than women. That the men should outnumber the women is reasonable. On a farm there might well be the owner, and his brother and one woman to take charge of the household. On farms of more than ordinary size the proportion of working help would be rightly larger.

The city registration is given in wards for what it is worth. As it stands it has no particular significance. Many who lived in the north went to the south to register. The Centre ward had a larger registration than the population of the ward would total. And so in the country. People came across the river from Otonabee and registered in South Monaghan, it being more convenient to do so. North Monaghan residents living near the city doubtless registered largely in the city.

Hull Woman Has Gained 28 Pounds

Improvement of Mrs. McCann Is Talk of Entire Neighbourhood

"My wife has actually gained twenty-eight pounds by taking Tanlac and her wonderful improvement is the talk of all the neighbourhood," was the remarkable statement made by John McCann of 197 Laval street, Hull, recently. Mr. McCann has lived in Hull all his life and is well known.

"Yes, sir, I can say for a fact," he continued, "my wife hasn't been in such good health before in seven years. She had been in a badly rundown condition for about that long and gradually got worse in spite of all she could do. She had no appetite, seldom ate any breakfast, and very little at any time. She was so nervous she couldn't sleep well, and so weak she could hardly get about the house, much less do any of her work. It seemed like she would almost die at times with sick headaches. She often had dizzy spells and would get so sick and weak she would just have to give up and go to bed. She looked pale and sallow and had fallen off in weight from one hundred and twenty-eight pounds to one hundred and ten.

"I had seen Tanlac so highly recommended that I finally got a bottle for her and I have never seen such a wonderful improvement in anyone. Soon after she commenced taking it she began to pick up and look better. She has taken five bottles now, and she has not only gotten back to her old weight of one hundred and twenty-eight pounds, but she has actually gone ten pounds above that as she now weighs one hundred and thirty-eight. Her appetite is splendid and she's never bothered with nervous headaches or dizziness any more. She does all her housework besides taking care of five children and never complains of feeling tired. We are both simply delighted over the way Tanlac has built her up and we never miss a chance to boost it. Our neighbours have been astounded over the results and they all tell her she looks like a different person."

Tanalc is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

The Great Outdoors

And O the buttercups! that field
O' the cloth of gold, where pennons swam—
Where France set up his lillied shield,
His oriflamb,
And Henry's lion-standard rolled:
What was it to their matchless sheen,
Their million, million drops of gold
Among the green!

There is drowsy contentment in the woods. The brotherhood of oaks, maples and beeches seems to have nodded their heads together dozing beneath the summer sun. The pines and cedars stir with the breeze, sighing placidly, and exhaling a piquant fragrance that expels the soft, warm earthly smells. Behind the screen of foliage the little warblers and their tireless allies wage incessant warfare on the parasites, leaf rollers and other pests, that seem to have been doomed to a sacrificial existence of providing subsistence for the insectiverous birds. But it is a quiet warfare for the songs of May are muted.

In the gardens, the roses are in the full glory of their bloom, pansies blink at the blazing sun, the little ruby throat hums before the lupine's spikes, poising before the open flowers to sip the secreted sweets, and in the orchard the Maryland yellow throat pursues its hunt with a clear frequent call of "witchity, witchity wich."

It is in the meadows, however, that June lavishes its splendours. In a background of vivid green the buttercups and ox-eyed daisies weave rich and rare patterns of gold and white, and the pink fleabane dissolves these primary colours into a beautiful blend of gold and green, and pink and white.

In some fields the daisies have all but monopolized the contrast with the lush grass, and when a strong wind blows they sway and toss in the billowing meadow-like

"Foam that laughs and leaps along the sea."

In another field the buttercups revel alone, spreading extravagantly a veritable cloth of gold, spun by a hand that Persia and what once Assisi could not hope to copy. But when the deep pink shade is added to the web, the effect is incomparably beautiful, whether the meadow rests beneath a sultry sun, or undulates before the summer breeze.

And all the meadows, wide unrolled,
Were green and silver, green and gold,
Where buttercups and daisies spun
Their shining tissues in the sun.

The profusion of beauty that covers the fields in these June days is characteristic of this season, when fecund summer moves on to maturity. There is no cloying sameness. In some fields white and purple clover add to the chromatic scheme, and fill the air with a heavy, almost overpowering, perfume. June clover and new-mown hay are unpurchasable offerings from the mid-summer fields, in which the cattle graze as in Elysian pastures. And swallows skim the moving crests seeming to dip into the daisy spray and splash in the golden kingcup breakers.

All these glories of the great outdoors are just over the hills, a short distance from the city. They are not mythical delights that might be tentatively described in the stories of far travellers; they abound beyond the city. The farmers work in such surroundings in their first harvest, and the swift passing automobiles blow dust clouds upon them. But the meadows bloom on, welcoming those who stop to pay a feeble tribute, and seeming to open their arms for appreciative children, for whom such pure and perfect textures seem to have been woven, luring them to the vitalizing outdoors with rich colours and endless blooms. But the meadows hear no childrens' voices except the farmer lads calling the cattle home with their udders full of milk that perhaps transmutes the golden buttercups into golden "eagles" — with their wings clipped.

MARK STILL DROPS.

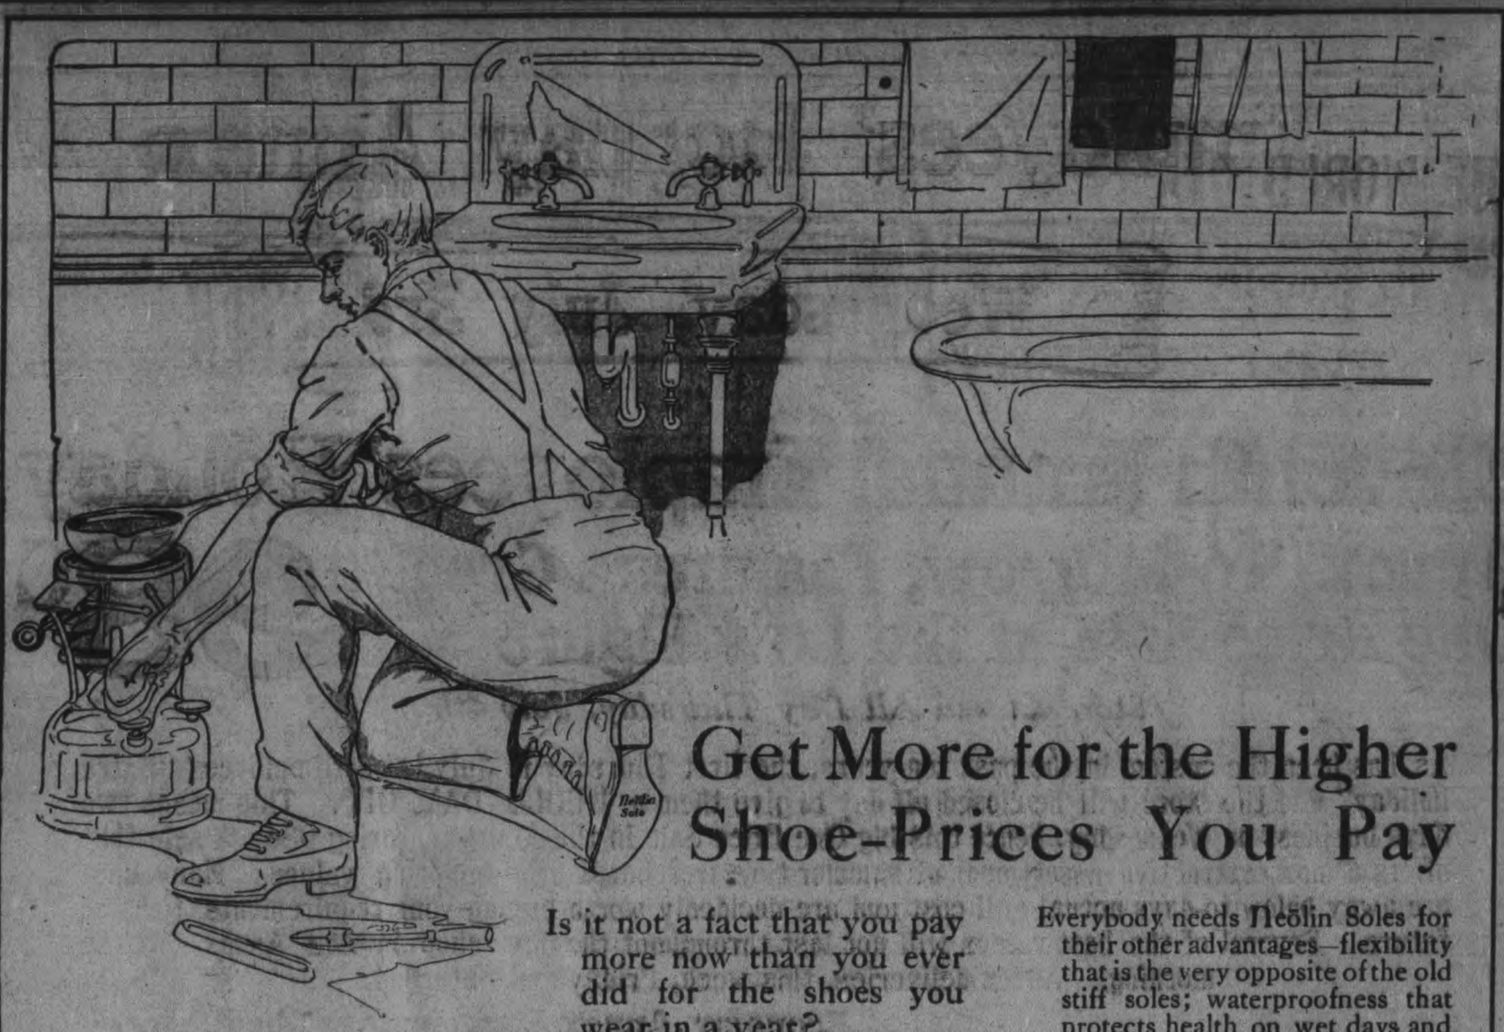
Geneva, June 28. — The German mark is now worth less than the French franc on the Swiss exchanges for the first time in fifteen months.

On the Geneva Bourse allied exchange continues to increase, while those of the Central Powers are declining despite efforts by Berlin and Vienna to raise the value of their exchanges.

The decrease in exchange on the Central Powers began when news of the Austrian defeat on the Piave reached Switzerland.



Get More for the Higher Shoe-Prices You Pay

Is it not a fact that you pay more now than you ever did for the shoes you wear in a year?

You can.

Millions have.

Millions of people, faced with the higher prices of shoes, have analyzed shoe-wear. They have found that shoe-wear largely means sole-wear.

This fact has naturally led to the use of Neōlin Soles.

Above all men, the working man needs these money-saving soles on his shoes.

He needs to get them, too, for the children, who go through soles so quickly.

Everybody needs Neōlin Soles for their other advantages—flexibility that is the very opposite of the old stiff soles; waterproofness that protects health on wet days and holds the shoe in shape.

Neōlin Soles of medium thickness are now found on work-boots. They meet the working man's shoe needs as nothing else ever has. They save money through long wear. They ease feet that must tramp the factory floor, the store, or the city sidewalk all day.

See that your next shoes are Neōlin-soled—ask at your shoe-store. Take your present shoes, and those of the wife and kiddies, and have the repairman equip them with Neōlin full-soles or half-soles.

Neōlin has been imitated in appearance. Make sure you are not disappointed. See that each sole carries the trademark "Neōlin" on the bottom.

Neōlin-soled shoes are in most shoe stores. But you will find them more quickly by looking for this price-ticket in shoe-store windows.

Grocery Market

The regulations just issued by the Food Control Board, with the purpose of conserving the supply of available wheat flour will have a most marked effect on the sale of substitute lines, says this week's Canadian Grocer. Under these regulations the merchant is required to have on stock sufficient supplies to meet all demands, and to sell in the proportion of one pound of substitute flour for every two pounds of wheat or standard flour sold. This will involve a very much heavier stocking of many of these substitute lines than has been the case in the past, and will unquestionably mean quite a drain on present stocks.

Trade is Quieter.

Trade is somewhat quieter, and this is quite to be expected after an active season extending well into the beginning of summer. There is no complaint as to the demand for staple lines and canned goods, dried fruits, rice, tapioca and preserving supplies have been quite active. The sugar supply has so improved as to make a better outlook for the near future. Nut markets are soaring weekly and supplies becoming shorter. Several revisions were made in the price of cereals, most of these of a lowering nature. Rye flour took a decline in sympathy with a lower price asked for competing grades from the States. Among the advances made are those affecting spices, mustard, candied peels, prunes, fruit jars, infant food, soda bicarb, nuts and laundry blue. The greatest trouble is that experienced in getting supplies forward.

The Sugar Market.

The sugar market is not quite as easy as it was last week. Some refiners have fallen somewhat behind on their orders, and as a result there has been a heavier burden thrown on those refiners having stocks to sell. This has resulted in a temporary scarcity. It is not, however, the result of any primary market conditions, stocks of raws arriving with rare regularity. There is no danger of any real scarcity developing at the present, and probably the present situation will be easier again during the week.

Molasses stocks are scarce and show a stronger tone. These conditions are due almost entirely to the transportation situation. Sailing ships are being brought into use in transporting the molasses output of the Barbadoes, these being the only tonnage available.

Quotations on spices show no marked changes during the week, but there is a steadily strengthening feeling in regard to these, owing to scanty stocks. At present the business is strictly of a hand-to-mouth character, no surplus stocks being available.

Peanuts.

There is a report current that peanuts have been removed from the list of embargoed goods. If this report is correct it will be of considerable interest, as good supplies of Japanese and Chinese peanuts are offering at very moderate figures. Other nuts are advancing very sharply. Only those shipments on order prior to the embargo have been licensed, and there is not surety of any further supplies.

The fruit market is active. California deciduous fruit is arriving, mixed cars of apricots, peaches and plums having been received during the week. Canadian strawberries, too, are beginning to arrive on the market.

Tomatoes are arriving from Tennessee in very good condition. Mississippi and Texas tomatoes are about finished. Local stocks are beginning to arrive from the Leamington section, though it will be a week or more before there is a brisk shipment from this source.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

100% USE OF VEGETABLES.

The more general use of vegetables as substitutes cannot be too often reiterated. Their worth is not half appreciated and with the war gardens flourishing apace there is a tendency to be wasteful when such an abundance of garden truck is available.

As a matter of fact, their uses are not exhausted when they have been served as fresh greens, made into salads or boiled according to custom. Much of the sugar and mineral content, so valuable and pleasant to the taste, is generally lost in cooking because women do not study ways and means to conserve it. None of the elements should be wasted. For instance, carrots, corn, peas, beets, are rich in sugar and the water in which they are cooked should be saved for soup. Spinach should always be cooked in its own juice and every spoonful saved. Onion water may be used for graives and soups.

Delicious soup is made by simmering potatoes "diced" with skins left on, peas, onions and seasonings. A thick puree which is combined with a thin cream sauce is made of this composition.

Peapods and the cobs from which uncooked corn has ben cut may be used to advantage in making soup.

ANGLO-AMERICAN WORLD SERIES? AND WHY NOT?

Baseball Is Getting to Be Popular In England—A Big Cure For International Coolness—The Cricket Game

ANGLO—AMERICAN

LONDON, June 29.—World's Series 1922—London Teafighters vs. Com- ey's White Sox.

It reads like a pipe dream, but four ago this war would have nd like a message from the ell call. So strange things may ppen in the next four years.

For instance, John Bull may have a ll club playing for the world's ampionship.

John is really taking an interest the grandolgame this year, learn- all there is to be known about for the first time since Wallie inclothes leaned his knotted war ub against palling persimmon, thus venting the pastime, back in the ys when high society revels were aged in the tree-tops.

Right American and Canadian bal ubs are this season's missionaries laying a full schedule as the Anglo merican League. Charity gets the mediate money proceeds, but the eople promoting this circuit have he ultimate aim of bringing England nd America closer together.

Other Means Used.

Of course this object has been ought many times before. There ave been highbrow essays, summer ours for rural schoolmarms, and utward official handclasps for years nd years. Sons and daughters of he idle rich have done their bit by laying international polo matches nd racing their little yachts across he Atlantic for Tommy Lipton's olid silver growler.

And up to the time we came inte he war the average Englishman and he average Yank understood each other like you understand a Chinese laundry ticket.

Baseball's big success this year looks like the real cure for the international coolness that has puzzled Anglo-American well-wishers since the days of fifty-four-forty-or-fight.

They like our slang over here, they like our movies, our jazz-time songs, and even the "English" styles for men's clothes, fresh from the sweatshops of the U. S. A.

Eight thousand people, half of them Englishmen, clapped their hands and cheered with singular lack of restraint as Admiral Sims stepped into the box at at Highbury football ground, London, May 18, and opened the Anglo-American League season by pitching the first ball to Major-Gen. Biddle, commanding American soldiers in England.

From that moment through eleven wraglesome innings, they heard hundreds of brass-throated doughpies and jacks unravel a vocal programme that brought back memories of the Polo grounds when Tinker and Evers and Chance were earning Charlie Murphy's biggest dividends.

English people can't resist comparing baseball to cricket any more than Americans over here can resist comparing shillings to dollars. Cricket really means more than a game. When an Englishman wants to say another fellow is absolutely square he just says "He plays cricket."

With cricket in his system our English friend thinks baseball a dull game if it's played well. He wants to see lots of action—long hits, much base running and a lot of errors. In other words, his idea of a good ball game is one notion of a bad one he is learning.

BASEBALL

The opposing teams were:—The Office Owls and the Factory Ends. The result was victory for the Owls, as the score of 18 to 8 in their favor indicates.

The batteries were—Factory Ends, Dugan and Lipsett; Office Owls, Legon and Fitzgerald.

	P.	W.	L.	P.
Office Owls	3	2	1	4
Separator Discs.	1	1	0	2
Factory Ends	2	0	2	0

BASEBALL GAME ON SATURDAY.

Saturday morning's game at Riverside between the De Laval and Orientals was one of the best amateur games played in Peterborough for time. Frost and Taylor were the batteries for the Dairymen, and Galbraith and Bergoine for the Orientals. The De Laval were on the big end of the score at the end of the game 8-5.

On the morning of the holiday, the Riversides won after an extra innings by the score of 6 to 4.

Salvation Army Plans Extension In Peterborough

Block of Property Has Been Purchased on Aylmer Street, Opposite Fire Hall

Adjutant McElhiney, acting for the Salvation Army in Peterborough, has completed the purchase of the property at 348 and 350 Aylmer street. The property includes a large lot and two houses. The houses will be removed to make room for an addition to the Temple building which faces on Simcoe street. The erection of a new two-storey building is contemplated. This will run right back on Aylmer street and connect with the Simcoe street property. It will include a swimming pool and other facilities for recreation. The property was purchased from Mr. Robert Reid.

Was Presented With A Check

Rev. J. P. Wilson Concluded His Association With the Active Ministry on Sunday.

At the close of the Sunday morning service in Trinity Methodist Church the retiring pastor, the Rev. J. P. Wilson, D.D., was presented with a substantial check as a tangible expression of regard on the part of the congregation. An able and appropriate address was made by His Honour Judge Hoyeke, who referred to the long service of Mr. Wilson and his retirement from the Active Ministry.

"A Perfect Day" was sung by Mrs. George King at the close of the evening service, and was followed by "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" sung by the congregation.

HENS DROWNED

Mr. I. Richardson, Homewood avenue, was reported to have lost his hens by drowning in Sunday night's storm, and part of his garden was washed away.

Mr. A. MacNab, local G.T.R. station agent, and Mr. Charles McGee, foreman of the freight sheds, are in Montreal to-day attending a conference of G.T.R. officials called in from many parts of the system. It is understood that general questions of improving the service to the public are listed for discussion.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT TO MRS. E. FONTAINE

Mrs. E. Fontaine, Aylmer and Murray streets, suffered a very painful accident on Sunday night. When the electric lights went out owing to the storm, Mrs. Fontaine started downstairs for a few matches to light a candle to be used temporarily. Missing the top step, she fell, breaking her left ankle and dislocating the other one. Dr. W. D. Scott is attending her.

STRUCK ON THE HEAD WITH A BAT

Mr. Leo Aeford was accidentally hit on the head with a baseball bat while watching the game at the Exhibition grounds yesterday. The bat slipped out of the player's hand and struck Mr. Aeford a severe blow. He was removed to his home and to-day is resting easier. No serious results are anticipated.

TRAFFIC WAS HEAVY.

G. T. R. REPORT NO DECLINE IN SALE OF TICKETS FOR THE HOLIDAY.

With all its chill and wet features, guaranteed to dampen the ardour of all but the most enthusiastic pleasure seekers, the holiday traffic from the G.T.R. station was as busy as ever over the week-end. In the baggage department there was an unusually large number of pieces checked out and in, and the number of tickets sold told the story of the crowds that defied the weather, especially in the Stoney Lake district. About 250 travelled the Lakefield spur, and the other lines were equally crowded.

York Road Set Free.

The final step in clearing old York road of its toll gate incumbrances was taken recently and six toll gates between the city line and Hatboro will hereafter cease to vex the users of this important highway. Philadelphia abolished all toll gates within her limits some years ago, but these nuisances still continue to maintain a state of siege about this city except on the Delaware river front, where the ferries perform a similar part. The ferries will remain until the Delaware is bridged, but the toll gates must go, and are going.

Income Tax Here to Stay.

The scope of the income tax has been enlarged and incomes of $1,000 in the case of unmarried persons and $2,000 in the case of married persons are now subject to taxation, an exemption of $200 being made in the latter case for every child under the age of 16. The super-tax on large incomes has been increased and a war surtax added. This makes it probable that the income tax has come to stay.—From the Monthly Commercial Letter of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

The Peterborough Planing mill has secured another contract from the Imperial Munitions Board for the manufacture of fifty thousand shell boxes. THE EDITOR'S FORTUNE.

A country editor out in Missouri recently retired with a comfortable fortune of $50,000. His successor explains that the money was acquired by industry, economy, conscientious effort to give full value, indomitable perseverance, and the death of an uncle who left the editor $49,999.50. —Buffalo Courier.

NEW ENTRANCE TO THE FAIR GROUNDS

Much Appreciated by the Big Crowd Yesterday—Other Improvements Coming

Those who have been in the habit of going to events in the Exhibition Grounds on different occasions throughout the year, and passing in and out of the old rickety entrances, were pleasantly surprised yesterday to see the fine new George St. Entrance erected and ready for use. Owing to the turnstiles going astray in shipment they were not in use. Work is being commenced right away on the Lock St. Entrance which is a duplicate of the one just erected.

Mr. Reg. Turner, who succeeded his father on the Board, is responsible for a number of new ideas that will be seen in operation at the next Fall Fair. Mr. W. H. Barry made a good job of the entrance and in record time.

President Denne has a list of improvements that will be discussed at Thursday night's Board meeting, and if his suggestions go through visitors to the Fair will hardly know the inside of the grounds when they see it again.

Three Fires Over The Holiday

Garage of Mr. D. J. Lundy Partly Destroyed

Over the week end the Fire Brigade were unusually busy, having three calls.

On Saturday at 8.10 in the evening the brigade was called to the garage and barn of Mr. D. J. Lundy, 196 Aylmer street. The roofs of these buildings were burning fiercely and threatening to set fire to Foster's barn which was directly behind but owing to the good work of the firemen, this danger was overted. Three lines of hose were laid containing altogether 750 feet of hose. With great difficulty Mr. Lundy's new car was saved. The damage will be around 100.

Mr. Lundy states that the fire started from a silk duster which was used to dust the car and was saturated with oil. This he believe resulted in spontaneous combustion.

The duster was consumed and the blaze went up the side of the wall to the hay loft.

Warne's Garage

On Sunday morning the brigade was called to extinguish a fire which had started in Warne's garage at the rear of the drug store. The radiator had caught fire but this was put out by the chemicals, Mr. I. C. Levoy however, had his hands badly damaged when he tried to disconnect two wires in the cars. His injuries had to be attended to by a doctor.

There was no damage.

BEST IN THE LONG RUN — FAIR TREATMENT

Why SILVERTOWN Cords Outserve in Comfort and Economy

YOU are conscious of the difference of Silvertown Cords from other tires the instant you ride on them.

They give a smoothly riding ease you have never enjoyed unless you have ridden on tires with the Red Hallmark of Tire Quality—the Red-Double-Diamond—neatly inlaid in the sidewall.

SILVERTOWN SERVICE VALUE CORD TIRES

But the vital difference, which has made the cord tire mean extra and special SERVICE VALUE, lies—

In cable-cord, that tough fusion of cord fibre and rubber (40 per cent rubber), found only in Silvertowns.

Cable-cord, spiral-wrapped—the same construction used in shock-resisting wire-wound big guns—builds up in Silvertowns a tire body, immune to tire fever, and able to absorb the stress of road pounding.

The CORD TIRE means comfort in easy riding, and economy in less gasoline and more mileage.

WINDSOR GERMAN HAS NOT REGISTERED

No Legal Pressure, He Says, Will Compel Him—Gives Officers Hard Tussle.

WINDSOR, June 29. — Admitting that he had not registered, Rudolph Schmid, fifty years old, who is said to be a subject of Germany, was arrested on his farm at Maidstone by Provincial Officers Smith and Hannah.

Schmid who boasted of being a noted wrestler in his young days, gave the officers a hard battle before he was subdued. He declared according to the officers that no amount of pressure by law would compel him to comply with the Registration Act.

Schmid who is a typical Prussian was arraigned in Police Court before Magistrate Miers, and at the request of Crown Attorney Rodd a remand of eight days was allowed to permit the police to investigate Schmid's record. It is said he entered the Dominion since 1914, coming from St. Louis, Mo. He seems well supplied with money.

WEDDING BELLS

MANN—CALDER

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church Carluke, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 26, when Jean Katherine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Calder, was united in marriage to Allan Braden Mann, Peterboro'. Rev. Mr. McCullough conducted the ceremony and the wedding music was played by Miss Naomi Horning, Ancaster. The Church was beautifully decorated with daisies and ferns. The bride, who was given away by her father was lovely in a soft gown of white georgette crepe, with braiding and pearl garniture and her veil arranged in cap effect with lilies of the valley and orange blossoms. She was attended by her sister, Miss Janet B. Calder, in an apricot crepe gown prettily beaded, worn with a hat of black tulle and roses. Mr. Walter Garbutt assisted the groom. After the marriage a reception was held at "Carluke Place," the home of the bride's parents. The house was decorated with a profusion of roses and pansies. After the wedding breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Mann left by motor for Toronto and other points, the bride's travelling suit being sand-colored tricotine, with hat to match. The guests from a distance included the groom's father, Mr. G. W. Mann, and Dr. and Mrs. Mann of Peterboro'; Mrs. Meecham, Alberta; Dr. Robt. Mann, Toronto; and the Misses Mildred and Blanche Mann.

SINN FEIN GET GASOLINE DESPITE IRISH SHORTAGE

Rebels Use Cars, All Abundantly Supplied With Fuel, in Recent Raids

DUBLIN, July 3.—Gasoline is now the most strictly rationed article in Ireland. The use of automobiles for private purposes is hedged about with the most rigid restrictions and elderly women are prosecuted if they go shopping in motor cars, according to new regulations now in effect.

Under these strict regulations regarding the use of gasoline, one of the perpetual mysteries is how the Sinn Feiners are able to get apparently as much as they like without leave or license from the patrol commissioners. In a recent raid for arms on a castle at Baronscourt, the Sinn Feiners arrived in twenty motor cars, all abundantly supplied with gasoline. Th rural police are constantly reporting the confiscation of gasoline. The rural police are cooperated without proper permits.

According to insiders in Dublin, this is explained by the fact that considerable quantities of gasoline have been washed ashore along the Irish coast from torpedoed ships, usually in cans, barrels, or large drums. Legally all such finds are the property of the state, but the state seldom gets it, for the rewards paid to honest fishermen who turn over such treasure to the Government are insignificant, while the fisherman who picks up a drum or two of petrol out of the Atlantic, perhaps at some personal risk, can always dispose of his find surreptitiously at a large price.

Rapid Rise For A Former Resident Of Peterborough

Mr. J. M. R. Fairburn Made Chief C. P. R. Engineer

MONTREAL, June 3.—Mr. J. M. R. Fairbairn has been appointed chief engineer of the C. P. R. system, replacing Mr. J. G. Sullivan, chief engineer, who is retiring to enter private practice, is the announcement by special circular iss ed by Sir Geo. Bury, vice-president, and approved by Lord Shaughnessy.

Too much credit cannot be accorded Mr. Fairbairn, whose rise has been the result of sterling service rendered the company since he joined them in 1895. Mr. Fairbairn was born in Peterboro, 45 years ago. He entered Toronto University, and graduated in 1893. Following a short private practice in British Columbia he joined the C. P. R. as a draughtsman at Winnipeg, which position he held for two years. From tren on his rise has been rapid, being made Resident Engineer at Place Viger, Montreal; Assistant Engineer, Toronto; Assistant Engineer of Maintenance of Way, Montreal; Division Engineer, Toronto and Engineer Maintenance of Way, Montreal. In February, 1911, he was made Assistant Chief Engineer. Now he has risen to the post of Chief Engineer of all C. P. R. lines, which is the highest railway engineering position attainable.

DEPLORES PLACING OF BAN ON UNIONS

Minister of Labour Appeals to Employers to Recognize Men's Rights.

OTTAWA, June 27.— The following statement was given out by Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour.

"Perhaps in larger numbers than ever before, complaints reach the Minister of Labour from working men that their employers forbid, upon penalty of dismissal, their becoming members of any labour organization. Upon investigation such complaints are generally found to have been well founded.

The Minister deeply regrets this attitude on the part of so many employers, believing it to well calculated to produce serious labour disturbances. He maintains that every man must be at perfect liberty to associate himself with his fellow-workers in any legitimate labour organization without thereby subjecting himself to penalties of discriminations of any character. He expresses the hope that employers may accept his attitude in this regard, and that hereafter no just cause for such complaints may arise."

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 20 cars, with 174 cattle, 155 calves, 464 hogs, and 51 sheep and lambs.

There was a holiday aspect to the market yesterday, that is to say there was very little business doing and with little stock on hand to do business with. There were quite a few cattle left over from Monday and to these were added 174 fresh arrivals. With this light offering buyers were not particularly keen to bid up prices for a few medium class butcher cattle, and there was nothing of choice quality to tempt them. Trade was in consequence listless and draggy—prices barely holding steady for the common stuff. Cows of poor quality are weak and easier.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs steady to firm, one or two lots selling 25c up at $18.25.

Lce.-Corp. Paudash Has Medal Presented Here In 1848.

Lce.-Corp. Paudash, D.C.M., of the 21st battalion, who has been spending a few weeks on leave at his home near Peterboro, arrived back in the city today.

Lce.-Corp. Paudash had with him the medal awarded to his great-grandfather, George Paudash, by Queen Victoria. The medal is a special one, and marked "George Paudash Warrior." The bar for Chrysler's Farm is over the medal, and on one side appears an engraving of Queen Victoria, while the other side shows the Queen placing the laurel wreath on the Duke of Wellington. George Paudash served at the head of the Mississagua Indians from 1793-1814. The medal was presented in Kingston in 1848, just seventy years ago, and this is the first time it has come back to the place where it was presented.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ANNOUNCEMENT

FALL WHEAT SEED

IN view of the partial failure of the Fall wheat crop in this Province this year it will be necessary for farmers to make early arrangements for the supply of seed which they will need for Fall sowing. Under these circumstances farmers who have on hand quantities of wheat suitable for Fall seeding are urged to conserve them for this purpose. If there is no demand locally, the information should be supplied to this Department, or to the Local Office of this Department in your County, so that every effort may be made to have an equitable and satisfactory distribution. The need for foodstuffs justifies a large acreage of Fall wheat in this Province again this year, and the co-operation of the farmers in the mobilization and distribution of the available seed supplies is invited.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AN OLD MARRIED WOMAN

CHAPTER CVII.

I had talked bravely to Evelyn, but all the time I had a feeling that she was partly right; that Merton Gray WAS in love with me, as she had said. But I had no intention of admitting this even to Evelyn. I laughed at her for a silly girl, and told her she was mistaken.

That the bearing of Julia Collins toward George tinged that of my own toward Merton Gray I was aware. I was always more free with him, acted more pleased to be with him after I had been made unhappy because of their open liking for each other.

My uneasiness concerning George's relations with Julia Collins grew greater as the fall advanced. We were very gay, and it seemed to me they were together constantly. There was nothing really tangible, that is, nothing save my own fears and jealous imaginings; yet I felt positive that this woman whom George had known so intimately before we were married, and whom her best friend said had been in love with him for years, was a menace to my happiness. That I must bend all my efforts to being like her if I were to compete with her.

The Charm of a Voice.

Julia Collins had a soft, musical voice. George had often spoken of it to me when I became excited and spoke too loudly. Now every time I heard that soft languorous voice purring to him I fairly shuddered.

I not only loved my husband but I WANTED to love him. I had read somewhere that when love is dead it is more often dislike or aversion that springs up in its place than friendship, or even tolerance. That people who lose love out of their lives very often lose a large slice of their character as well.

Often when I read such things as this I would be morbid. I had tried so hard and had accomplished so little. The kindness of the summer seemed now so far away. George was once more the critical, fault-finding mentor. There seemed scarcely a day when I did not displease him in something. When he corrected me, he frequently said it was for my good he did it; but I couldn't feel that it did me any good. I felt I was growing hard and bitter; that all the sweetness was being extracted from my life.

I was in this mood one night when we attended a large reception given by Geraldine Ross. All the way there George had talked of my harsh voice. I had answered him rather quickly when he hurried me as I dressed.

'I suppose you are wishing I had a voice like Mrs. Collins'," I finally said, exasperated.

'I certainly do. It is a pleasure to listen to her speak.'

"A pleasure you indulge in very often."

"After hearing your strident tones no one could blame me."

"Thank you! I will try not to inflict them upon you oftener than is necessary," I returned just as we reached the house. How I had the courage to say such a thing I don't know. But the look he gave me when he assisted me from the car showed he would not easily forget nor forgive my foolish speech.

Merton Gray Sympathizes.

"You Are unhappy to-night!" Merton Gray said without preamble as we stood together. George had devoted himself almost from the moment we arrived, to Julia Collins One could scarcely blame him. I thought bitterly as I looked at her. She was marvelously beautiful, in sheer black and rose, and aside from her beauty there was something compelling about her. "Heady," I heard Bert Ross say to Madge Loring.

"Not exactly," I replied to Merton, trying to speak naturally, and to smile. Both efforts were failures.

"Tell me," he urged drawing me away from those who could hear. What has happened?"

"Nothing—that is, nothing new," although I tried to laugh, there was intense bitterness in my voice.

"Old things are sometimes hard to bear," he said as we sat down in a deserted corner of the room.

"If I were different, I wouldn't care! Most women, you know—of your set, wouldn't!"

"You haven't told me what it is yet."

"Nothing — as I told you save praise of another woman. Praise of her voice, and blame for mine. It is the little things we fuss over, isn't it?" I tried desperately to put a little gayety into my voice.

"Always. And just as always the things we should not allow to annoy us; that is we shouldn't nine times out of ten." Then more seriously: "You of all women I know should not be hurt because another's voice is praised. Anyone who sings as you do certainly should not be hurt over such a trifle."

To-morrow—A Declaration of Love.

Forethought and Good Judgment Used

Travellers show preference for Scenic Route; Busy Men use Night Trains

Nowadays, forethought, and a lively sense of public appreciation play an important part in the construction of a railroad. The Canadian Northern made a happy choice in the selection of its route between Toronto and Ottawa: skirting the shoreline of Lake Ontario and the Bay of Quinte; over the height of land between Napanee and Sydenham; and through Rideau Lakes region, adds zest to the daytime journey in Spring or Summer. Comfortable day and night trains, stopping at principal intermediate stations, have made the route very popular.

MOLLUSKS MAKE GOOD SOUP

Thrown Up on Florida Beaches by the Waves They Are Collected and Sold to Hotels.

Along the Florida beaches a very common and familiar kind of rock is wholly composed of the shells of a small species of mollusk, oval in shape and half an inch long. It is called "coquina," and is hard on the feet if one walks over it without shoes.

In beds below the line of low tide are mollusks of the same kind, alive. Their bivalve shells are pink, blue and of other colors, quite brilliant, so that in places the beaches are beautiful to the eye, great numbers of them being thrown up by the waves along the shore.

Under such circumstances they soon die, of course, leaving their pretty shells to adorn the strand. But there are always plenty of live ones at the water's edge, and these are gathered in quantity at some of the winter resorts by boys who collect them with rakes and carry them in baskets to the hotels for sale.

They are used for soup, being pressed to a pulp in order to extract their juice. The latter, strained and heated, affords a very delicious table beverage known as "coquina broth." It is particularly recommended for invalids and persons with weak digestion.

QUIT SNIFFLING, STOP SNEEZING, CURE YOUR COLD NOW!

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag — when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflamatmion—mtkes the Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—bad droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured me thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial troubles." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $100, and contains two months' treatment; smaller size, 25c and 50c, all druggists and storekeepers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Tommy Atkins, Philologist.

Mr. Thomas Atkins has further enriched the English language with war words and phrases. They may not creep into future dictionaries, remarks London Answers, but they will certainly remain as part of the common language of everyday use. "Narpoo," coined by Tommy from the French "Il n'y a plus," is now our general expression for "nothing doing."

It is safe to assume that the expression "over the top" will become part of our language, to be used when man must be put to the supreme test.

"Anzac" is another coined word that will remain for all time. A "scrounger" for a forager, "backshee" for anything extra in the way of rations, and "Conchy" for the shirker, are hardly likely to be forgotten.

Quarter-Pound Diamond.

One of the world's largest diamonds may come to the United States, as Americans are among those dickering for that superior quality amber-colored stone, weighing 442½ carats—about a quarter of a pound—found recently in the De Toits Pan mine in South Africa. The stone is the most valuable ever found in Griqualand West, although it is not a record as regards weight.

The most famous diamonds in the world are: Cullinan, now called the Star of Africa, part of the British crown jewels, 3,032; Excelsor, 969; Kohinoor, 900; Regent, 410; Orloff, 193, all uncut, and the Great Mogul, 280, cut.

PLAN AIR POSTAL SERVICE

Is Expected by Englishmen to Be One of the First Innovations When Peace Is Declared.

Airplane postal service will be one of the first innovations of peace in England. The problem is already being worked out in detail, even to the cost of postage and hours of collection and delivery. It is also said that within the first few months after peace a trans-atlantic airplane service will be established. Airplane engineers say that the problem of constructing a machine for transatlantic flight has been solved in theory, and machines which would cross the Atlantic could be built to-day if it were not that the long distance busses of war time must also be heavy weight carriers. The most interesting result of these peace plans is that it has been found possible to arrange the collection and delivery of letters between London and Glasgow with such dispatch that a correspondent in London will be able to receive a written answer within the working day. Applied to the middle West, an exchange says, this means that a Kansas City business man will be able to send a document to St. Louis, Chicago, Madison, Minneapolis, Sioux Falls, Omaha, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth, Texarkana or Little Rock when he reaches his office in the morning and receive it back duly signed before he goes home. The estimated postage for this service works out at 8 cents per ounce.

Our Partners in Joys and Sorrows.

A writer says in the American Magazine:

"It is a good phrase we have for describing women, 'partners of our joys and sorrows.' I know not how it may be with other men, but it is thus with me: In the regular routine of life, when nothing much is happening, when the days go by one after the other filled with their monotonous rounds of duties, I can, if necessary, exist for long periods without the company of women. In such days and weeks they are sometimes, to be sure, a pleasing distraction; but they are not food and drink and shelter. I can, if need be, survive. But let success break through the monotony of the daily grind, and I must have a woman to share it; half its sweetness is lost otherwise. And failure without their God-given chatter and unquenchable optimism is utterly intolerable. I say I know not how it may be with other men, but it is thus with me."

The Reason.

"These mountain-climbing records are not trustworthy."

"Why not?"

"Because mountain climbing is a thing which by its nature is never on the level."

Suggestion.

"I wonder how I could prevent baby from sucking his thumb?" asked the adoring young wife, with a coaxing glance at the crusty old bachelor.

"There's one way I thought of," said the crusty aged one.

"What's that? Oh, do tell me, please."

"Muzzle him!"

TO PARADISE BY TALLYHO

WHEN that colossal "thrust from the Pacific" of which geologists tell us, heaved the Rockies into the pre-historic sky to compete with the already time-worn Selkirks, it was evident that the Thruster—whoever he might be—wasn't planning a place for picnic parties. He dropped the scintillant jewel of Lake Louise into one unreachable cup. He dug out a second scour to the east where Paradise Valley now twists its enormous length between the evergreen feet of contemptuous mountains. He threw up the peaks which men term the Weakchemna Range—after the Indian numeral signifying ten—and from their aloof summits decreed that an unknown glacier should grow and crawl and die, leaving the vast scrap-heap that has blocked the valley and made possible that still, solemn, shining mirror of the clouds which its discoverer fittingly named Moraine Lake.

After he had done all this and a million other wonderful and prankish bits of engineering, the mountain builder insulated his achievements by a couple of thousand miles of prairie to the east and twice the length of blue water towards the sunset.

None but the brave deserve the fair, but a great many others get her. Yet if it hadn't been for the restless spirits of the true-brave, the adventurers, the busy transit-men, the succeeding railway builder, and finally, the industrious pickand-shovel artists of both the Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway, most of us would never have heard of Moraine Lake, and none of us who aren't graduate Alpinists would have seen it.

To-day there are a few breath-taking sights reserved for the man of spiked shoes, who wears his heart in his mouth. But most of the wonder-spots are mapped and trailed and even carriage-roaded so that the laziest is luckiest, and the lady who cant even ride, let alone walk, may jog trot right into paradise on the front seat of a tallyho!

It's hard to excursionize at Lake Louise, for the reason that you can't imagine anything lovelier than the view from the hotel verandah. But even that nature-posed-and-painted panorama will be better appreciated if you get away from it for an hour or two.

Climb up the tallyho ladder for the nine mile drive down the valley of the plunging Bow. You needn't worry about hurrying home again. There's a little cabin nestling up among the cold peaks that will give you tea and toast this afternoon and a bed over night if your're fisherman enough to wish to rise betimes for the trout, or artist enough to bear the call of the morning reflections in Moraine Lake, that are packed up and put away by nine o'clock every day.

The Bow Valley is 5,500 feet above sea level and so wide and deep that after one of the infrequent Rocky rains, a whole double rainbow can be seen in it, intact from end to end, tempting the superstitious to jump down from the tallyho and dig for the pot of gold. Battalions of cloud shadows can drill at snow over the faces of the placid mountain across the valley and the near slopes are a florists' heaven of Indian paintbrush. There is the deep scarlet gypsy brush, the rose red brush, the palest pink, the bleached-blonde-tangerine, the snow-white brush. Gather an armful of them if you want to take back a palette-splash of color for your room. A cityful of tourists couldn't denude a single laughing slope.

Here is a rockslide, bare and scoured to desolation, like a long smudge of ruin between the scarlet fields. This is where you must look sharp and whistle if you would be rewarded by the scuttle of a fat grey marmot over the grey stones. Marmots are courageous—or is it curious?—beasties, and seem to enjoy the tourist brand of conversation. To see a scuttler come to attention on his hind legs atop a big flat rock, cocking his squirrel head on one side as he listens and perhaps replies to your whistling, is to watch a most friendly sight. Nobody who hadn't a German soul would dream of throwing a stone at him.

At last the road leaves the Bow Valley, turning sharply to the right, and the scenery drops its neighborliness. The Tower of Babel, Mt. Babel and Mt. Fay throw their white heads up against the blue. There is a loneliness of long vigil, an aloofness from the world of men. No one needs to tell the tiny tallyhoful of people to stop their pleasant chatter. The curtain has gone up on the grim creation-drama and talk stops automatically.

At last you round the turn into the fissure between the mountains. Ten of them there are, and at their feet the little blue lake. It's really a mile from where you get out of your carriage to the bottom of those six thousand foot peaks that swing into the air carrying aloft great glaciers and huge snow crowns and the black escarpments of bare rock that are too steep for snow. But the clear atmosphere minimizes the distance, and the colossal vertical scale dwarfs the horizontal stretch of the still water.

Somehow you're glad to take refuge from the immensities in the cosy little tea house. There is a concreteness in toast and a comfortableness in the human size of man-made things that is welcome to the awed soul of you.

I haven't stayed overnight at the Camp. But it's a dream of mine that I shall one day see Queen Cassiopea swing her chair to rest on Mt. Little, with the Great Bear, near neighbor to her. I shall sit by the midnight miracle of this divine crystal, clear of the trees, face to the mountains, head up to the stars. And if I am ever to know the why of this little life of mine—and the why of the paintbrush, and the marmot, and the glacier, and God—I shall hear it then.

'With great Respec yore
"Frien liza rankin."

Lavinia read the letter over and over again. She could make nothing of it but a jumble of words all but illegibly written. Not a comma, not a period. She glanced at the name: liza rankin, and light came to her. The meaning of the letter became clear. Her throat contracted with an uncomfortable ache and tears hid the package in her lap at which she fumbled with unseeing eyes.

It was roughly and insecurely tied and she wondered how it had come intact through the mails. As the thought flashed through her mind a smaller package dropped upon the floor. With an exclamation she picked up yards of beautifully fine and intricate tatting. Examining the contents of the larger bundle, she found it contained several sets of table mats with crocheted borders and coarse, home-spun linen centers.

Her mind went back to the summer just past and the several summer before when she had helped spin the cloth from flax raised in the little clearing about the cabin. If she has been asked she could not have told how she had heard of the little home in the Tennessee mountains across the border from Virginia, but each summer thereafter had found her a visitor, and she and Eliza Rankin had become fast friends.

She had helped Eliza make her wedding dress; had returned to the mountain for the wedding, taking with her from her own store of furniture enough to make comfortable the tiny two-room log house that was to be Eliza's future home. She had been with her when the child was born; had been with her when, dry-eyed, the grief-stricken mother had laid the still little form in its crib for the last time, and it was in the rough little cabin that Lavinia came under the influence that altered the course of her own life when she raised her head from her spinning and met the keen, questioning gray eyes of the mountain doctor who had stopped for a moment to ask for a drink of milk.

She met him often in her wanderings about the mountain, but aside from the pleasure of an occasional meeting she had given him no thought until she raised her head that day and her eyes were held by the dominant gray ones of the man standing in the doorway.

She felt as if he was reading her very soul. Filled with resentment, the angry color flooded her face under his merciless gaze. Indignantly she straightened in her chair. Then, to her everlasting shame, she left the spinning wheel and walked directly into his arms.

She left the mountain the next day. There was a long wait at Bristol before the arrival of the north-bound train, but almost as it came into sight Doctor Cochran crossed the platform to her side.

"Eliza told me you had gone. Why?" he had asked abruptly.

She had looked at him coolly, critically. A big, awkward but powerfully built man, coarsely clothed with his blue homespun shirt open at the throat and sleeves pushed carelessly back from his muscular arms. Her very silence brought to him a realization of her thought.

"Oh! That's it! A mountain man is not good enough! You want the fine clothes, the suavity and convention to which you are accustomed. You can have them if you want. I do not doubt it. But whoever he be he will never have what you have given to the mountaineer."

She had risen and faced him. "How dare you—"

He had laughed roughly in interruption. "Dare? I dare anything, my dear young lady, and I tell you plainly that in that half hour in Eliza Rankin's cabin you gave me what you will never give another man, and that was your soul," and turning on his heel he left her as the train pulled into the station.

She heard from him once, months later. He wrote that he had volunteered and must see her before he left for France. The note was unanswered. He did not come, and as the days passed she knew her day of reckoning was upon her; that she had let him go to his work thinking her heartless.

It all came back as she looked at the work in her lap and as she let the beautiful tatting slip over her fingers her resolution was taken.

Naturally she met opposition when she told her family she was going to the mountain for a brief stay, but she went on about the carrying out of her plan and blessed the aunt who left her a small legacy to do with as she would. Knowing that the railroads were congested by the movement of troops, she hired a motortruck to carry food and told the chauffeur she was going with him across the width of Virginia. His expression spoke volumes and when out of hearing uttered words not intended for a woman's ears.

She persuaded a married friend to accompany her. This she regretted later on, for the cold was intense and there was tire trouble. To her it meant delay, but her friend could see nothing in the trip but her own folly in yielding to Lavinia's wishes.

"I will leave you at Hot Springs and go alone," Lavinia told her at last. "It was really too much to ask of you."

"I will keep on until we reach a railroad," Mrs. Howard answered shortly. "When we come to that bond with civilization I will leave you to your own devices. What on earth put such an idea into your head. Couldn't you have sent the things by freight?"

"Eliza and the others need food, and this is the quickest way to get it to them," Lavinia answered.

Fortunately her chauffeur was a Virginian and had come from the section of the state to which she was going. He had known the Rankins and Wades. "We played together when we was kids," he told her. "It'll go hard with the women in the mountains with their men gone." For a moment he looked troubled. "I s'pose you wonder why a husky feller like me is a stay-at-home. I ain't no slacker. I has a wife an' five kids an' the orfercer tol' me to stay at home an' take kyar of 'em."

Never in her life before had Lavinia been so conscious of the comforts of fire as when she entered the log cabin an hour later, stiff and shivering. But it wasn't much of a fire, just a handful of sticks upon which Eliza threw a few pine cones that blazed up at once. Standing before it, Lavinia looked about. There was but the one room. Side by side in one corner stood two beds covered with gay patchwork quilts. Four bright eyes peered at her from the farthest one. From the nearer came a slight moan.

"I did not know anyone was sick, Eliza."

"Liz wore jes' po'ly when I writ, miss, honey. She give up las' nigh'. I put the chilrun in bed to keep warm. Moll is out tryin' to git wood. Miss, honey, I shorely think the Lord dun sent you."

"There must be someone who can get wood for you," Lavinia said. "Where is Jake Fox? He is too old to be called."

For a moment Eliza did not answer. "He's a-haulin' for money an' we alls didn' have none."

The mountain woman drew back. "I ain't beggin', honey."

"Of course not. I expect you to pay it back. But now I am cold and hungry and we will talk about it after a while," and throwing aside her wraps, she went over to speak to Lizzie Crawford.

For a week she watched beside that bed in the corner, resting between times in a big chair before the fire. At the end of that time as she was bending over the bed the door was thrown open and a hearty voice said:

"I came back to take a look around before I left for France, Eliza; heard Lizzie was sick and came over to see what was the matter." The voice stopped short. "You!"

For a second of time Lavinia thought she would suffocate with the beating of her heart, then she said quietly: "I heard they were in trouble, so I came."

The man's hand was not quite steady as he reached over and laid his fingers upon Lizzie's wrist. "There is no fever. I think—" He caught sight of Lavinia's eyes and turned abruptly away.

Her gaze followed him, then rested upon the compass quilt, the figure of which she began to trace absently with her finger. She had thought him in France, now that he was here there were things she must say to him and they would take courage.

He interrupted her thought. "Come here," he said peremptorily. "I must see your eyes again. They gave me your soul once. Convention and training hid them from sight. I am wondering if it was forever."

There was just an instant of pause, her eyes held by his as she went toward him and again, as that first time, she walked directly into his arms.

Making Sure.

"I will show my love not by words, but by deeds."

"I think, dear, you had better show the deeds to our lawyer."—Baltimore American.

"Mon Vieux, Prends du Fer Nuxate"

This is what you hear "Over There." Even in France they say

"Take Nuxated Iron Old Pal"

As a tonic, strength and blood builder probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. It has been highly endorsed and used by such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Presidential Cabinet Official (Secretary of the Treasury), United States Judge Atkinson of the Court of Claims of Washington; Judge Wm. L. Chambers, Commissioner of the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation, formerly Chief Justice of the International Court, Samoa; former United States Senator and Vice Presidential Nominee Charles A. Towne of Minnesota; former U. S. Senator Richard Rolland Kenney of Delaware, at present Assistant Judge Advocate General U. S. Army; General John L. Clem (Retired), the drummer boy of Shiloh, who was Sergeant in the U. S. Army when only twelve years of age; General David Stuart Gordon (Retired), hero of the battle of Gettysburg; physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it. Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital says there are thousands of men and women who need a strength and blood builder but do not know what to take. In his opinion there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for enriching the blood and helping to increase the strength and endurance of men and women who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strenuous strain of the great business competition of the day.

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron which was used by former members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and other prominent people with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Shell Shocked Nerves

Shattered nerves are the source of greatest suffering to many a returned soldier. The doctor can give something to relieve physical pain, but when the nervous system breaks down and you are sleepless, nervous and mentally worried, real cure only comes when the exhausted nerve cells are nourished back to health and vigor by such restorative, upbuilding treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

IT IS RUMOURED THAT PEACE TERMS WERE MENTIONED AT CONFERENCE

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, July 3.—In connection with the return of Sir George Cave from The Hague, it was rumoured to-day that peace terms were mentioned at the Anglo-German Conference on the exchange of prisoners in that city. There is no confirmation.

Cave, who is Secretary for Home Affairs, headed the British delegation at the conference.

Baron Rhondda Achieved A Task That Was Regarded As Almost Impossible

He Put the United Kingdom of Great Britain on Rations And Won Widespread Gratitude.

CRISIS AVERTED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, July 3. — Viscount Rhondda (David Alfred Thomas), British Food Controller, died this morning of pleurisy aged 63.

Rhondda died at his home in Llanwern Park, Wales. He had suffered from a rheumatic fever for several years, brought on by jumping into cold water to rescue a child.

Viscount Rhondda was the man who put England and most of the United Kingdom of Great Britain on rations and won the gratitude even of the people whose food supplies he regulated. Before he achieved the task it was generally regarded as all but impossible.

Food was running short in the United Kingdom in June, 1917, when Baron Rhondda was appointed Food Controller for Great Britain. The man who, as David Thomas, had been managing director of the great Cambrian Coal Combine, apparently undertook the task which many thought impossible. "I have a suspicion," he told friends, "that Lloyd George conscripted me for this almost impossible job, because he knew I had the hide of a rhinoceros."

Profits Controlled.

By fixing prices he put into effect a policy of controlling the profits of food from producers down to the retailers. Before undertaking the task Rhondda had in 1915 organized the British munitions buying in the United States and Canada, and put it on a business basis.

Born at Adare, Wales, March 26, 1856, David A. Thomas was the son of a colliery owner, and succeeded to his father's business. He became head of the Cambrian Combine, which controlled many mines producing steam coal used by the British Navy. In 1882 he married Sybil Haig, of Penithon, and they had one daughter.

MORE MEN COULD BE TAKEN CARE OF BY THE AUTHORITIES

Military Authorities Are Prepared To Handle Over Two Hundred Men A Day.

Special to the Examiner:

MONTREAL, July 3.—It was stated at military headquarters that the returns of men reporting for overseas duty under the Military Service Act were much less than had been expected, especially since the discussion arising after the recent statements by Col. Machin. It was stated by Lieut.-Col. Pinche, A.D.O.C., that the number of men reporting for duty was far less than could be taken care of, which was somewhat of a disappointment to the military authorities, who have nothing to do with the calling out of men, but only with the training and equipping of the men after they have reported for duty.

"We are prepared to take care of at least 200 men per day," said Lieut.-Col. Pinche. "That, however, is a matter in the hands of the Registrar, who has complete charge of the calling out of the draftees.

More Men Wanted.

"The number of men reporting for duty, or submitted to the military authorities, is much less than we can handle, especially since the battalions went into camp at Valcartier. It is hoped that before long more men will be secured, so that the opportunity may be taken of the chance to train them at Valcartier."

It was intimated by the military authorities that no statement as to the numbers of men taken on under the Military Service Act would be issued at present. It was stated at the headquarters of the Registrar that many more men are now being called out than for some time past, and full lists were being furnished the military authorities. It was stated by the Deputy-Registrar that it was not considered advisable at present to publish the numbers.

ITALIANS ADVANCE

New Gains On An Eight-Mile Front.

Special to the Examiner:

Bread By-Law Was Passed By Council

A by-law regulating bakeshops was passed by the Council last night. It requires cleanliness throughout the shop, and in all the handling of bread within a factory, also demands sanitary surroundings, isolation from stables, screens on the windows, and also gives permission to the Medical Officer of Health, Sanitary Inspector and Bread Inspector to make visits of inspection whenever they decide to do so.

Alderman Edgar suggested that since so much trouble is taken to keep the bread pure and clean in the factory, it might be advisable to have it wrapped before leaving the shop, and thus escape the drivers' hands and the dust of the streets when delivered; but Alderman Langford feared that this would occasion another advance in price to consumers.

Frank Jenne Says:

But there is another advantage—the summer suit is most inexpensive and saves your heavier suit for autumn and winter. Don't swelter in a heavy suit, see the summer suits at my shop from $15.00 up. "Come to me."

Forty-Five Men Were Killed By An Explosion

The "T. N. T." Plant of Semet-Solvay Company Was Partly Wiped Out.

Canadian Press:

SYRACUSE, N.Y., July 3.—Forty-five men were killed in the explosion of the T.N.T. plant of the Semet-Solvay Company at Splitrock, just west of this city, last night. Forty-two bodies have been recovered at eight o'clock. Three more are in the ruins. The injured number at least eighty. Many injured are expected to die. At least half of the great munitions plant was wiped out by fire and explosion. The property damage will exceed one million.

The explosion, which occurred at 9.30 last night, shook the entire city, and sent hundreds into panic.

Within a mile or more of Splitrock, scores rushed from their homes to get out of the danger zone. At least fifteen buildings of the great establishment were wiped out. A fire preceded the explosion by forty-five minutes or more. Many of those killed or injured suffered while fighting the fire. When the first started hundreds of workmen left. Six city policemen are dead.

The entire night was a night of terror for many after the big explosion. A general exodus followed the blast Besides fleeing workmen, many families moved away from the scene. Some pushed wheelbarrows containing their children and few household goods. In the nearer zone women were in hysterics fleeing along the roads and streets of the city. Daylight brought a realization of the full horror of the disaster.

Besides the buildings of the plant, small homes of workmen about the hillside and in the valley were wrecked. Many people in these houses had narrow escapes.

Cause of the Fire.

According to a statement of E. L. Pierce, Vice-President of Semet-Solvay Company, the fire started in one of the towers of the T.N.T. plants. The cause has not been ascertained. Three T.N.T. plants one nitric acid plant the office and laboratory and boiler house were destroyed. While there were rumours of incendiarism and also that the fire was started by German spies, this theory had nothing to confirm it, although an investigation will be made. Sixty-two bodies have been recovered and still more are missing.

Fire Chief Urges Council To Raze 3 Hunter St. Houses

In a letter to the Council last night Fire Chief Grange condemned three houses on Hunter street east and urged that they be razed. The houses are Numbers 48, 50 and 52, and the Chief declares that they are a fire menace to the neighbourhood and should be removed. No. 48 is owned by Miss Swanston, who is willing that it be torn down. The two other houses are owned by Mr. O'Brien. One room of No. 48 is occupied, Mr. O'Brien lives on the first floor of 50, and the upstairs is used, and No. 52 is his blacksmith shop. Chief Grange declared that these houses were unfit for habitation and are moreover a menace to the safety of the community. The Chief's communication will be discussed in committee.

BELLS WILL RING

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, July 3. — The Allies' gratitude for America's participation in the war will be uniquely and effectively demonstrated in to-morrow's celebraton of the fourth of July throughout England, Scotland, France and Italy.

In France it will be a national fete day. President Poincare and members of the two Chambers will hold a special review of American and Allied troops in the Place D'Iena. A big reception will be held in the evening.

In Italy.

The leading Italian cities will celebrate with special functions. The Government Buildings and many business places in London will display the Stars and Stripes alongside the Union Jack. There will be scores of appropriate events. Chief among them will be the Army-Navy baseball game at Chelsea Park in the afternoon. King George will attend and probably will throw out the first ball to the umpire.

Seats for the game were sold out long ago. It is expected the capacity of 22,000 will be taxed.

At Westminster.

A great Anglo-American fellowship meeting will be held in the Central Hall, Westminster, in the morning. Viscount Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States, will preside, and Winston Churchill, Minister of Munitions, will be the principal speaker. Other speakers will be Gen. Diddie and Admiral Sims, commanders of the American military and Naval forces here. Resolutions will be adopted and greetings cabled to President Wilson and the people of the United States, expressing profound satisfaction of the great English-speaking nations, who for the first time are fighting side by side in the cause of justice and liberty.

It is planned to have the bells of St. Paul's and and of the churches throughout the country ring at five p.m., London time, coincidently with the similar ringing of bells at noon in the United States.

RESTAURANT HOURS ON SUNDAY REMAIN AS COUNCIL FIXE...

A petition bearing 190 signatures and supported by Mr. Daniel O'Connell's well ordered address, failed to move the Council from their former decision closing the restaurants on Sunday except during specified meal hours.

Alderman Taylor and Alderman Saunders moved that no action be taken in regard to the petition. Alderman Jones and Alderman Worth offered an amendment that the restaurants be permitted to remain open on an agreement that they would not sell ice cream on Sundays. There were two other supporters of the amendment.

Alderman Weir incidentally remarked that the fixed meal hour would not work a serious hardship on tourists who, he said, could stop at Millbrook and get a meal outside those hours.

City Solicitor Gordon said he knew of no possible way by which an exception of the restaurants could be made. The ice cream parlours hold eating house licenses, and could sell ice cream as a food providing it were served with cake.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3RD, 1918.

THE BLUE LAW REMAINS.

Peterboro will have to do without restaurant accommodation on Sunday The blue law regulations passed some weeks ago, will not be rescinded by the City Council, in spite of the largely signed petition that was presented at last night's meeting. The citizens will have to make the best of the situation and visitors to Peterboro are warned that unless they can manage to reach here on Sunday during regular meal hours at the hotels they had better bring their rations with them. There is no more to be said, except to admire the logic of one alderman who argued that the restricted hours would not be a hardship to tourists, who could stop at Millbrook and have a meal before coming to Peterboro. Why this selfish stand? If it is wrong to sell refreshments in Peterboro on Sunday, why encourage Millbrook to sin? Like the restaurants, however, the matter is now closed, and the aldermen can congratulate themselves that they have removed for some hours at least the temptation to indulge in a plate of ice cream on a hot Sunday or cup of hot coffee on a winter Sabbath. The parks for the present will remain open on Sunday, and gasoline may still be purchased—probably in the belief that if it is sinful to feed a hungry man on Sunday the next best thing to do is to sell him enough gasoline to move on to a town where the sale of a meal or even a little ice-cream is not considered a crime.

THE LATEST ATROCITY.

The sinking of the Canadian hospital ship Llandovery Castle, and the murder of Canadian doctors and nurses, show that the Germans have not yet reached their limit in callous, deliberate, cowardly slaughter. There is no possible justification or defence for this latest atrocity—the excuse that the hospital ship was carrying eight American aviators is a subterfuge worthy of the Hun.

The Llandovery Castle had been in the service of the Canadian Government, carrying wounded and sick Canadian soldiers from England to Canada. She was returning from this country after bringing a shipload of wounded, when she was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine, 70 miles from the Irish coast, and sunk in ten minutes. Of the 258 persons on board, including 60 men of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, and 14 female nurses, only 24 survived the attack.

There was no possibility of the Germans having made a mistake—the British Admiralty's graphic story of the disaster shows clearly that the sinking of the ship was deliberate. "The Llandovery Castle," says the report, "steaming on her course at some fourteen knots, showed the usual navigation and regulation hospital ship lights Under the over-cast sky she was plain to see and could not be mistaken for anything but what she was—a ship immune by every law of war and peace from attack or molestation."

The Hun has shown, however, that no ship is immune from attack. No hospital, whether on sea or land, is safe; no Canadian nurse is sacred; wounded, women, children, doctors, the Hun murderer does not care what his target is as long as he is killing. The story of this last outrage is almost too horrible to believe. Not content with sinking the hospital ship the submarine commander steered his pirate craft through the wreckage and rammed one boat full of survivors. A Canadian sergeant, who managed to climb on to the deck of the submarine, in the hope of being rescued, was hurled back into the sea by a German officer. A boat containing twelve Canadian nursing sisters, was capsized and no attempt made by the pirates to save any of the unfortunate women.

A sinister and disturbing feature about the outrage, is the indication that the German submarine commander had been warned of the coming of the Llandovery Castle in some manner from this continent. The questions he asked about eight American aviators sailing on the hospital ship, indicated the receipt of information, inasmuch as eight medical officers were to have taken passage on the Llandovery Castle, one deciding not to sail at the last moment. It is evident that the spy who sent on the news of the sailing of the hospital ship had mistaken the medical officers for officers of the Aviation Corps, and had reported accordingly.

That there will have to be other protection provided for hospital ships than the mere carrying of the Red Cross, the atrocity of last Thursday clearly shows. The Hun would just as soon shoot at the Red Cross as at a cathedral, and from now on hospital ships should be closely guarded. Horrible as the sinking of the Llandovery Castle was the calamity would have been infinitely worse if the ship had been sunk on her way to Canada, carrying hundreds of wounded soldiers.

CANADIANS ARE READY

With a new and perhaps still more formidable German drive expected on the west front, an offensive that may this time involve the Canadian forces in its sweeps, an article in the Toronto Globe undoubtedly written by Mr. Stewart Lyon, who has had a long experience in France as correspondent of the Canadian Press, is reassuring in its confidence in the fighting qualities of the Canadian troops and in its information as to the strength of the forces under the command of Sir Arthur Currie.

The Globe says:

The Corps on a pinch should have no difficulty in sending sixty thousand infantry into action. In October, 1917, before the battle of Passchendaele, the last important action in which General Currie's men have been engaged, the Corps was somewhat over strength with perhaps fifty thousand infantry in the line. The losses in the series of fiercely-contested advances up the Passchendaele Ridge were the most serious the Corps has ever sustained in a like time. From October 24 to November 13, a period of scarcely three weeks, the total casualties were slightly over twenty-five thousand. They were not, of course, all sustained by the infantry. All branches of the service — Artillery, Army Service, Signal Corps, Medicals, suffered—but it may be assumed that the infantry casualties totalled at least twenty thousand. Fortunately the bulk of the wounds were from rifle or machine gun fire instead of shell splinters and healed quickly. Probably half of the twenty thousand men hit are back on duty.

The reinforcement depots in England and France had their resources severely tested after the brief Flanders campaign in filling up the ranks, but the Corps was rapidly brought to strength, and the men now pouring into the overseas depots from Canada must have relieved the anxiety of General Turner and the officers whose duty it is to supply trained men for the front when General Currie requires them.

The Corps must have at its command from thirty to forty forty thousand well-trained infantry reinforcements, and almost as many more who still need two or three months of intensive practice in bombing, bayonet fighting, and at the rifle ranges before they can be put in the line safely. The Canadians in France need, therefore, have no fear that during the present season their ranks will remain depleted should there be need for heavy drafts. They have had the good fortune up to the present time to be out of the sweep of the German attacks and have had a fairly quiet season. A portion of the front south of Arras, besides their old line south of Lens, has been in their keeping. The region south of Arras is scarcely less important than the ridge of Vimy and it is not likely that the enemy will include it in his next great attack. The Canadians on the Neuville-Vitasse sector can be trusted to stand like a rock against the enemy's hammer strokes, and even to anticipate them if permitted to do so. Officers who have returned from the front recently say that the Canadian Corps was never in better condition physically and that the officers and men await with serenity the renewal of the struggle.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Blue Devils were so tired yesterday morning, that they asked to be excused from the remainder of their programme in Toronto. Perhaps Mayor Church's speech in French upset them.

"You cannot use arguments with wild beasts; the only thing to do is to destroy all of them." Such is Chancellor Bonar Law's reference to the murder of Canadian nurses and doctors by the Huns in the sinking of the Llandovery Castle.

A TIMELY WARNING.

The Mail and Empire, one of the Government's chief journalistic supporters in Ontario, speaks from the book when it issues the following warning:

"The chairman of the Food Board will come in for a storm that will surprise him if he allows the prices of wheat substitutes to be inflated by profiteering. A firm hand on all branches of the trade is expected by the people of Canada."

The Mail and Empire has not underestimated the situation. The new order of the Food Board, unless corrected by action that will prevent undue profits for those who deal in wheat substitutes, will lead to the consumer being bled again. The price of wheat has been fixed, but so far there has been no move on the part of the government to prevent the price of the substitutes which must be used in place of wheat, from soaring skyward. Mr. Thompson, chairman of the Food Board, has promised that such action will be taken, but on the same day as he made his promise, cornmeal flour jumped to $11.50 a barrel. Promises will not keep the prices down, and the Canadian people are awaiting something more substantial in the prevention of profiteering. Every loyal citizen is willing to use substitutes if it will help to feed our allies—but no citizen wishes to fill the pockets of profiteers in his effort to conserve food for shipment.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The decision given by the Appelate Division of the Supreme Court of Alberta that Norman Earl Lewis, a draftee whose exemption was cancelled by order-in-Council is illegally detained as a soldier in the 1st Alberta Depot Battalion, and is entitled to his freedom, is of tremendous importance and will place the government in a very awkward position if it is sustained by the Supreme Court of Canada, to whom it is being appealed.

The issue involved is whether the Governor-in-Council, or in other words the Cabinet, has the power to alter or amend laws without the consent of Parliament. Lewis, the draftee in question, is a farmer's son, and was given total exemption under the Military Service Act as a farmer. The order cancelling exemptions of the men between 20 and 22 affected him and he was ordered to report for service in the army. R. B. Bennett, K.C., ex-M.P., applied to the Supreme Court of Alberta for an order, along the lines of a writ of habeas corpus, declaring Lewis to be illegally held and has been successful in his application. His argument was that under the British North America Act, the Governor-in-Council has no power unless expressly given by the Parliament of Canada to alter existing laws. Parliament having passed an Act which gave tribunals power to grant total exemptions, Mr. Bennett contended that it was illegal to cancel such exemption by order-in-Council.

His view was upheld by the majority judgment of the Court, and Mr. Justice Beck, in delivering his decision, touched the vital feature of the case in the following words:

"It will be an astounding proposition if Parliament, after having spent many weeks in a discussion of the Military Service Act, which, perhaps more than any other bill, was the occasion of such fierce antagonism, both within and without Parliament, deliberately, by the insertion of a common phrase, to wit, that 'Nothing in this act shall limit the powers of the Governor-in-Council under the War Measures Act, 1914,' it would be astonishing, I repeat, had Parliament left it open to the Governor-in-Council to revoke in whole, or even in part, an act, the passing of which had so stirred the people of Canada."

The finding affects thousands of men whose exemptions were cancelled under the order-in-Council—many of whom are already overseas.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Canada will be awaited with intense interest, although it is expected that the matter will go still further and may have to be decided by the Privy Council.

KILLING THE RUMOUR MONGERS

(London Morning Post)

Nothing but harm can come of repeating gossip about the war; and much harm is actually done by it. We do not say that the injury is intentional; but rather call to mind a pretty little moral axiom about more evil being wrought by want of head than want of heart. If we must dig for motives, then, ladies and gentlemen, we would say that we should probably find vanity at the bottom. Let us, however, reflect that the issue of the war mainly depends upon the cohesion of the Allies; and a little grit may put out of action a very great machine. There is one safe rule in time of war, which is to shut your mouth and keep it shut. Another useful maxim is promply to demand evidence for any given statement, and if the evidence is not produced, politely to decline to accept the statement; even, if circumstances permit, giving the lie direct. It clears the air.

Four Rifles Have Disappeared From the Collegiate Institute

The Military Authorities Estimate the Loss at One Hundred Dollars—Regular Monthly Meeting of the School Board—Resignations Received.

At last night's meeting of the Board of Education a letter was received from Lieut.-Col. George A. Gillespie, respecting four rifles which have disappeared from the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. "Col. Gillespie, in part says that the Board is liable for the return of these rifles, or they will have to be paid for as they are military stores. One hundred dollars was the price named for the four rifles. Chairman Eastwood said that Cadet Instructor Jamieson had told him of the loss of the four rifles some months ago, but said he did not know where to begin to recover them.

A letter was also read from Mr. Jamieson reporting the loss of the rifles, and asking that he not be made liable.

"I do not think that Mr. Jamieson should be penalized for the loss of these rifles when the Board does no supply a suitable place for them. The gun room at the Collegiate is accessible to almost anybody," said Mr Fowler.

The matter was finally postponed to a later meeting by the Board, as no proposal seemed to receive the approbation of the whole Board.

HAD SUFFERED FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS

Has Never Found Anything in Canada or England to Equal Tanlac

"I have taken all kinds of medicines, both in this country and in England, and I just want to say right here and now that I have never found anything to equal Tanlac," said William Thwaites, who resides at 9 Cameron Place, Toronto.

"I have had stomach trouble of the worst sort for eighteen years," he continued, "and during that time I was a constant sufferer. Before I came to Canada, eleven years ago, I was treated in some of the best hospitals in England, and have tried everything I ever heard of. And ever since I have been over here I have been trying to get rid of my trouble, but it seemed that the more I tried the worse I got. My stomach was in such a bad condition that in the month of February alone I was off from my work for more than two weeks and my appetite was all gone and I had almost forgotten what it was to sit down and enjoy a good hearty meal and not suffer; no one who has not gone through the same ordeal knows. I could not eat a bite of breakfast, and you can imagine how I felt. One morning I reported for work, but I found I was just so weak and "all in" that it was impossible for me to do anything and it was two weeks before I was able to go back to work. At lunch time I would eat a few mouthfuls, but everything would go against me, and I suffered from gas, bloating and pain. I did not sleep on account of my stomach and would get up in the morning feeling half dead.

"Now this is only a partial statement of the way I suffered during the 18 years. It would take too long to tell it all. My colour was bad and unhealthy looking. I lost thirty pounds in weight and had no life or energy about me. I tried medicine until I was sick and tired of it, but one night when in town I happened to see some Tanlac in the drug store window, and bought a bottle, and the clerk if it didn't help me he would surely hear from me. Well, before I had finished that first bottle I could tell it was doing me good, and have taken four bottles now. To make a long story short I am now feeling like a new man. I have not missed a day's work since I started taking it, and I am getting stronger and better all the time. I have a good appetite, eat just anything I like, and never have a touch of indigestion, and breakfast is now one of the heartiest meals. My skin is clearing up, my weight is increasing all the time and the boys all tell me that I am looking like a different man. I can hardly find words to express my gratitude for what it has done for me, and I wouldn't begrudge paying dollars a bottle for it. If any friend would like to talk to me I will be glad about it I will be only too glad to tell them about the wonderful benefits they have gotten from Tanlac.

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co, Ltd.; in Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Westwood by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by Pringle & Son.

...L. Sarginson notified the Coun...st night that, although he had ...ned the City Engineer's permis...to remove two dead trees from ...e the street line on Sherbrooke ..., between Aylmer and George ...a he was fined $60 and costs ...ne 7th, on a charge of having ...ed shade trees. Mr. Sarginson ...he did not cut down the trees ...March, 1918, and did so in full ...that he had the city's sanction, ...gh the City Engineer's approval. ...lying to Ald. Dobbin's question, ...Engineer Parsons stated that he ...have authorized Mr. Sarginson ...move the trees, but he could not ...mber having done so, nor the oc...n.

Sarginson stated that one of the ...was in front of Mr. Alex. Pat...n's house, and the other opposite ...dividing property line.

Parsons— I may order the re...l of any dead trees on city pro...

G. N. Gordon—Judge Huycke ...from the evidence that they ...not dead.

Sarginson—They were dead.

Dobbin—Why did you cut them ...nt of a neighbour's property.

Sarginson—I wanted the wood.

...or Duncan—You didn't tell the Engineer they were not in front ...r property.

Saunders—It's a lot to pay for two dead trees.

Ald. Langford— If the Judge said they were dead, what can we do?

Mr. Sarginson clearly recalled having first asked Street Commissioner Evans for permission to remove the trees. Mr. Evans directed him to the City Engineer, and Mr. Sarginson said he asked Mr. Parsons in the yard at the City Hall. Mr. Parsons drove down to Sherbrooke street and authorized him to remove the trees. It was in September last year, and there were no leaves on those trees, Mr. Sarginson averred.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre—We have to give Mr. Sarginson the benefit of the doubt.

Mr. Parsons—I do not say that I didn't tell Mr. Sarginson to remove them, but I do say that I can't recall it.

Mayor Duncan—If we pay $60, it has to come out of somebody's salary

Mr. Sarginson— I don't think it should come out of mine.

On motion of Ald. Dobbin and Jones, Mr. Sarginson's letter was referred to the Board of Works.

GEORGE STREET CHOIR OUTING

Monday the choir of George St. Methodist Church held its annual outing and picnic, proceeding down the Otonabee by motor boat and steam launch to Thompson's Landing. Forty-four members and friends were present, and in spite of the slightly inclement weather, had the usual very enjoyable time. On arrival at Thompson's Landing, the choristers wended their way to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Finney where dinner awaited them. The after-dinner hours were spent in sports and games.

Leaving Thompson's Landing the choir returned to Wallace's Point for a picnic tea. Here an appropriate feature of the day's outing took place when the choir members expressed their kindly feeling toward Miss Flossie Jackson who is leaving the city, by presenting her with a hymn book and the following address:

Dear Miss Jackson,—Some writer has said, "Old tunes are sweetest, old friends are truest." In this gathering to-day, consisting as it does of choir members, these words seem particularly appropriate, especially in view of the fact that you, one of our tried and truest of friends, are about to sever your connection with our organization and our city.

In the years that have so quickly slipped away from us, you have made many real friends—and not only made them, but retained them. Perhaps you have never realized that the ability to do as you have done is a genuine gift. One of our best authors has expressed that thought in these words: "Blest are they who have the gift of making friends for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but above all the power of going out of oneself and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another. He who would have friends must show himself friendly. "Friendship is the scarlet thread let down from the windows of heaven to bind human hearts together."

While in our midst you have ever proved yourself to be a helper. By your unassuming manner you have taught us the truth of what Longfellow has clothed in the following language: "The talent of success is nothing more than doing well what you can do and doing whatever you do without thought of fame."

And now the time for parting has come. When we re-assemble as a full choir after the holiday season and look for you in your accustomed place, we will find you not. Perhaps a stranger whose friendship we still must prove, will occupy your seat. But let us assure you that you will not soon be forgotten.

We would not have you leave us without some expression of good will, so have chosen the accompanying small gift which we trust will help to keep you in constant remembrance of the happy days that you have spent in the George St. Methodist Choir in Peterborough. "There is no real separation though apart, twixt friend and friend." In bidding farewell, may we assure you that,

"This we are wishing sweetly for thee,
That full of sunshine to-day may be;
And through the coming days whate'er betide,
God still may keep thee close by his side."

With every good wish for your future welfare. Signed on behalf of the choir,

W. H. Cunningham,
Minnie Higgins,
Roxie M. McKee,
J. H. Renwick.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

K. C. Initiation In Lindsay On Monday

Lindsay was the Mecca on Monday of between three and four hundred members of the Knights of Columbus from all parts of the district, and as far east as Montreal, the occasion being the exemplification of degrees under the auspices of Peterborough, Orillia, Barrie, Penetang and Lindsay Councils.

The Knights opened the day's ceremonies by attending High Mass in St. Mary's Church, when His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, of Peterborough, preached an eloquent sermon, emphasizing the great opportunities for service as well as duties which every true Knight could perform in the extension of God's Kingdom on earth. At the conclusion of the Mass the Knights marched to the Town Hall when the first degree was performed by the Orillia team. In the afternoon the second degree was performed by Lindsay team, assisted by J. F. Power, Toronto. The third degree was exemplified by State Deputy L. J. Murray, of Renfrew, in association with District Deputy R. A. Jeffrey, of Arnprior, and assisted by Joseph O'Brien and the Montreal team.

NEW THEATRE FOR PETERBOROUGH

Unless present plans miscarry, Peterborough will be linked up with the Griffith theatre circuit between now and fall. A portion of a large building that will soon assume material form in this city, will be the home of this vaudeville and motion picture enterprise.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Sometimes plants need a little doctoring just as human beings do. They have a tendency to catch diseases, which cause them to wilt and die. Occasionally the outside evidence of disease is lacking and the plants die quickly; others again dry up and die by slow degrees. To the first class belong the tomato, cucumber and muskmelon and to the later the potato and bean.

The wilt diseases are caused by bacteria which work inside the plant and clog it up so that it crokes. The only remedy is to pull up the wilted plants and burn them. Before pulling them up, however, you should be quite sure that the wilting is not caused by dry weather or by a worm in the stem of the plant near the ground.

The other diseases are called fungus diseases. They are really caused by tiny invisible plants which are parasites living up the larger plants. They show up in the form of discolored spots or portions of leaves or stems, which die and dry off. These diseases can only be prevented or controlled by spraying.

BIG DEPUTATION FROM TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL SEEK SHARE OF COAL DELIVERIES

Were Told That Fuel Commissioner Edgar Has No Authority to Allot Coal Received By Dealers—Mayor Declares Council Is Making Every Effort to Obtain Adequate Reserve For Next Winter.

COUNCIL'S POWER RESTRICTED

The Trades and Labour Council presented an impressive deputation at the regular meeting of the City Council last night in support of the most anxious plea they have yet made for the Council's intervention in the distribution of coal. Their spokesman declared that while large orders were filled for some citizens the smaller orders of many working men had not been accepted by the retail fuel merchants. Hence, in view of the signs of an impending shortage of coal they demanded that some means should be found by which the distribution this summer should be equalized or partioned among the citizens on the basis of their common needs, instead of on a seeming basis of their respective wealth and influence.

The deputation filled the benches and overflowed into the hall leading to the Council chamber. In its numbers and earnestness it left no room for doubt of the Labour men's deep concern in the coal supply for next winter. Dominion Day's unseasonable chill probably inspired their interest, but beyond that was the fact that the Labour Council had emphasized upon local unions the desirability of making as powerful an impression as possible in the dual question of coal supply and distribution.

Mr. Alex. Murray, the first speaker for the deputation, rapped the Council indiscriminately for presumed neglect and loose handling of the fuel situation, and Ald. Edgar, as the local administrator, received an extra measure of criticism.

Mayor Duncan toward the close of the meeting, protested that the Labour men did not know the difficulties the Council had to overcome. "If you knew," he said "you would not have spoken quite as strongly. Mr. Murray doesn't know the conditions. Send him to the Council next year, and let him learn what we are up against. Mr. J. J. Hartley was in the Council and knows what we have to contend with."

"I am trying to do your business and to do it right, and I am sure that when the year is up you'll find everything alright," said His Worship.

Mr. Murray's Address.

Mr. Murray alleged that Ald. Edgar, fuel commissioner, had expressed his sympathy with the fuel dealers, and when asked to meet the Labour Council, hadn't the common courtesy to acknowledge the invitation.

"He seems to want to bide apart from the working men," said Mr. Murray. "He may have had a career in the Council, but he will have to depend on the coal merchants. He receives no remuneration, but evidently what he loses on the banana he makes up on the peanut."

Mr. Murary then paid his attention to the Fire, Water and Light committee who he said has set out not to compete with the dealers. Moreover working men could not get their orders accepted.

"We are willing to pay 100 cents on the dollar for our coal and we want our share of it, but unless a man has a hole in the sidewalk for a chute to his cellar he has to pay 25 cents a ton extra."

Mr. M. L. Campbell.

"You can see we are in earnest" said Mr. Campbell of the Machinists' Union. The poor people should receive first consideration for they usually suffer the worst. Mr. Campbell recalled last year's troubles, the long queues at the coal yards the time lost by men who had to lay off until they drew home a few bags of coal.

"We think it is the Fuel Commissioner's duty to control the distribution of coal. If that is not his business then he has no business."

Rev. Canon Davidson.

Rev. Canon Davidson arrived while Mr. Campbell was speaking, and stated that he had just been deputed by the Great War Veterans' Association to represent them and to urge upon the Council the gravity with which the Veterans regarded the fuel situation. "We feel that the citizens should be saved from the indignity and danger of standing in long queues in mid-winter waiting with handsleighs to get coal. This is a time when the Council's best statesmanship should be used."

Next winter may bring unparalleled scarcity of fuel, Canon Davidson said, and every effort should be put forth to meet it.

"I have no doubt but that the fuel merchant feels a sorrowful responsibility when he has to refuse coal. He exercises a right to provide his customers first. We leave this with you as to how it is to be met."

Canon Davidson spoke of the responsibility upon the Fuel Commissioner. He deserved the support of the citizens. It was necessary that he should see that hoarding was not permitted. If the dealers and the city could not secure enough coal, the Council should bring in wood and sell it at the lowest possible price.

"We believe the Council is trying to do the right thing, and we will try to help you do it."

Canon Davidson stated that the Veterans felt very strongly in this matter. They were anxious for next winter's supplies, and placed their trust in the Council to see to it that every means would be used to meet the threatened shortage.

Alderman Edgar.

Replying to Mr. Murray, Alderman Edgar said he believed that so long as the dealers could get coal the city should not compete with them any more than it should enter into competition with dry goods merchants because dry goods have become dear during the war. The Council holds that its duty is to obtain a reserve for the citizens in the event of the dealers failing to supply the demand.

"The duty of the Commissioner," Alderman Edgar said quietly and without evidence of resentment, "is to keep a record of the coal sold by the dealers so that I may know where the coal is going. It is my intention to do the right thing as far as I know how. The Trades and Labour Council seem afraid they are not getting a fair deal. They are being treated by me as fairly as anybody. Peoule come to me trping to get coal. My duties will not permit me to do so. Every man has a right to get 70 per cent. of his requirements. And if his needs are not more than six tons he is entitled to purchase all that amount. I have no authority to say where the dealers shall deliver coal so long as there is no hoarding as the law defines it."

Alderman Dobbin.

Alderman Dobbin, chairman of the City's Fuel Committee, asked the delegation how many of them had read the fuel regulations. Five or six hands appeared in the gallery. "Unless you have read them you can get no idea of the Commissioner's duties. His function is simply to register the sales of coal. His hands are absolutely tied. He has no more power to regulate the distribution of coal than to regulate the distribution of hardware or anything else."

Buying For Soldiers' Homes.

"I took in $480 to-day to buy coal for the wives and mothers of soldiers, and I can assure Major Davidson and the War Veterans that the dependents of the men overseas will be taken care of. We are looking after 600 or 700 families and they will get all the fuel they need."

Alderman Dobbin said that the returned men could not be looked after in this way for seven hundred more families would be added to the list.

Bringing In Wood.

Referring to the city's wood purchases, Alderman Dobbin asserted that the Council would increase the cost by buying wood that was destined for the city anyway.

A member of the deputation made the very significant statement that while dealers brought in this wood they held it for high prices.

Another member asked Alderman Dobbin whether the Council would sell its reserve of run of the mine coal at a price less than the dealers charged.

"We will sell it at cost," Alderman Dobbin replied.

Another questioner said—"Can you give us any satisfaction now, Mr. Mayor?"

Mayor Duncan—If we could control the price we would be glad to do so, but the Government haven't given us the authority. I feel a great responsibility rests on my shoulders in this matter, and that the citizens are looking to me. I cannot say that the dealers shall serve you all at once, but the city is bringing a reserve and we hope to have enough that there will be no repetition of last winter's distress. Last year the people did not rush to buy coal until October, this year they are flocking with their orders now, and there may be a more general distribution later in the summer.

Mr. T. Tooms reinforced the case of the Labour Council and Great War Veterans in a witty speech that included the practical suggestion that when manufacturers buy soft coal for their factories they should put in an order for some cars of hard coal for their employees. He chided the Labour men with not having their own representatives in the Council.

"Next time we may have," Mr. Murray interjected.

You pay the same war tax on a pound of cheap, poor tea that you pay on Red Rose. In other words you pay 10¢ war tax on a cheap tea which will make perhaps 150 cups to the pound and you pay the same 10¢ tax on a pound of Red Rose which easily makes about 250 cups.

You will find today more value, more economy, more real satisfaction in Red Rose Tea than ever before.

It is truly a war time tea.

Mutiny Among Austrian Troops

(Special to The Examiner.)

GENEVA, July 3.—Several regiments of Austro-Hungarian soldiers quartered in Prague and Gratz mutinied when their bread ration was eliminated, according to the Prague Tageblatt.

The mutineers announced they had enough cartridges to shoot their officers, whereupon the bread ration was re-established and the revolt ended.

The spirit of mutiny, due to the food shortage, is spreading throughout the country, even affecting the troops on the Italian front, the newspaper said.

THE FUNERAL WILL BE HERD TO-MORROW

Miss Ellen Graham, who expired on the street yesterday will be buried tomorrow in Little Lake cemetery at 2.30 p.m. She had been an inmate of the Protestant Home for nine years, and was a constant member of St. Paul's church. Her heart had been failing for some time, and Dr. J. H. Eastwood had been attending her. Yesterday she said that she felt better and went out to visit a friend. The Smith street hill was too much for her, and she expired just as she reached the top.

A MEETING OF UNUSUAL INTEREST

A meeting of unusual interest was held last Thursday, June 27th, at the home of Mrs. W. K. Payne, 108 Dufferin street, when the Mark St. Ladies' Aid and the Missionary Society held a joint session.

The important feature of the occasion was the report from the branch meeting recently held in Picton, given by our delegate, Mrs. (Rev.) Whattam, who by her faithful presentation of the various addresses and papers brought to our attention very vividly the great need as well as the privilege of being a worker for the missionary cause. As a result of her inspiring words the society will enter this year's work with renewed activity.

Miss Kemp rendered an appropriate solo, after which a pleasant social hour was spent.

For years I was a great sufferer from this distressing ailment and can say that three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. You may use this letter for the benefit of others.

SILVER TUBE TAKEN FROM A BOY'S LUNG

A copy of the Evening Express of Los Angeles, Cal., contains a despatch of interest to many Peterborough citizens. At Glendale, Cal., doctors removed a silver tube from the lungs of Master George Milburn, who is a grandson of Mrs. G. L. Stevens, 208 McDonnel street. Mrs. Stevens received word from her daughter to-day that the little patient is recovering.

The news item says:

Glendale, June 25.— George Milborn, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Milburn, of Glendale is rapidly recovering, following an operation of a peculiar nature.

Forced for several years to breathe through a silver tube in his throat, a few days ago part of the tube broke and an inch and one-half of the silver fell into the child's lungs.

An operation performed by Drs. T. C. Young, of Glendale and Goodfellow of Los Angeles, was successful in removing the object.

The operation is the fifteenth performed on the boy. A growth in the larynx has caused the trouble, it is said.

NO FEARS ARE ENTERTAINED BY THE AUTHORITIES IN CONNECTION WITH DRAFTEES

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 3.—While a special session of the Supreme Court is to be held to decide the support from the judgment of the Alberta Supreme Court in the Lewis case, no fears are entertained by the authorities as to the result of the appeal. There is to be absolutely no cessation in the working of the Act and the Order-in-Council passed subsequent to it. In fact, it would appear that the finding of the Court has not even succeeded in immediately freeing Lewis from custody. The Order-in-Council which Mr. R. B. Bennett claims cannot supercede the Military Service Act was passed under the provisions of the War Measures Act.

Wide Powers.

This Act grants wide powers to the Governor in Council and enables the Government to do almost anything which the exigencies of the war may warrant. In the Military Service Act itself there is a specific provision to the effect that nothing in that Act shall detract from the powers of the Government in Council given under the War Measures Act. It may be contended that the purpose of the latter measure was to permit action when Parliament is not in session, but there is no provision to that effect at all. Moreover, it is pointed out that the resolution on which the Order-in-Council was based was actually approved by both Houses of Parliament, and that therefore it really was the force of statute. Should the Supreme Court, however, uphold the finding of the Alberta Tribunal, it will be necessary to have Parliamentary enactment confirm the Government's action. In that event an early session would be inevitable. An early session in any case would seem to be likely, since the powers of the Military Service Act to secure men will shortly be exhausted when the hundred thousand mark has been reached.

South African New Member Of War Veterans

Seventeen new members were admitted at the regular meeting at the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, in the club rooms last night. Among the new comrades was a native of Johannesburg, South Africa, in the person of Walter Wayne, now a resident of Peterborough. He enlisted with the 4th South African Horse in August, 1914, and fought in German East Africa for fifteen months, being finally discharged suffering from shock and fever. Another new member is Capt. Edward Wood, son of the late Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, who saw service in France and at Salonika with the Royal Army Medical Corps.

Last night's meeting took a ballot on the resolution and amendments in regard to the status of associate members as introduced at the Provincial Convention. The resolution provided that associate members, that is men who served in other wars of Great Britain and her colonies, or who had enlisted in the C.E.F., and had been discharged before leaving Canada, should be given full privileges of the Association and have the same status as members who had gone overseas. An amendment provided that in the case of drafted men they must have seen service at the front before being eligible, and an amendment to the amendment gave associate members the privileges except of holding the position of president or secretary-treasurer. The latter proved the most popular, 21 members voting for it, while three voted for the resolution, two for the amendment, and two voted against all three.

Comrade Moscrop was added to the Entertainment Committee. The latter reported a balance of over $50 from the last moonlight excursion, and a small balance from the refreshment booth at the Exhibition Grounds.

Comrades Wood, Perks and Ringer were appointed a committee to arrange for assisting the Playgrounds Association in their canvass for funds to carry on the work.

A discussion on the coal situation was a feature, and Comrade Canon Davidson was selected to represent the Veterans before the Council. A report of his visit to that body appears in another column.

GASOLINE TANKS REMAIN UNTIL SIX MONTHS AFTER PEACE

Council Responds to Plea of Garage Men and Reconsiders Former Decision

The gasoline pumps got a new lease of life last night when the council decided to allow them to remain on the streets until six months after the declaration of peace. At the last regular meeting they were ordered to be removed within six months after June 3, 1918, and new applications to instal pumps were refused.

The applicants at that meeting were Messrs. J. J. Duffus and Robert Hicks. This action was regarded as drastic and inconsiderate by the garage proprietors who a short time ago waited on the Committee of the Whole requesting the Council to give them a longer period to continue in their present dispensing stations and to prepare for removal.

Last night Ald. Worth moved, seconded by Ald. Jones, that the pumps be tolerated on the streets until after the war, and upon Ald. Edgar's suggestion for a more definite period, changed the time limit to six months after the declaration of peace. In the meantime if Mr. Hicks or Mr. Duffus are willing to gamble on the provision fixed by the council they may instal pumps on the street, but must dig them up when the specified time expires.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre moved an amendment, seconded by Ald. Langford, that the time be fixed at two years from the present. The amendment was defeated and the motion carried.

GAVE THE EMPLOYEES A PLEASANT OUTING

Last evening Mr. Dickson Hall, of the Richard Hall and Son, dry goods store, took the employees of the store to Centreville, where they participated in a strawberry festival that was being held at that place. It required seven automobiles to carry the entire party. After supper the motor trip was continued and later in the evening a few sports were indulged in, after which the party returned home. The employees of the big store appreciate the kindness of Mr. Hall, who bore the entire cost of the outing.

COUNCIL GRANT $100.

Assistance to Exhibition Board For Dominion Day Events.

The Council last night, on a motion by Ald. Jones, seconded by Ald. Worth, granted $100 to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition's Dominion Day enterprise, including the cost of the new entrance.

"They want something every time they meet," was Ald. Edgar's comment.

MR. J. WEARING WAS IN WOODSTOCK

Mr. Joseph Wearing has returned from Woodstock where he delivered an address Monday on "The Day of Opportunity" to the students and professors of Woodstock College. There were also present a large number of Baptist young people from London, Stratford, Ingersoll and other towns in that section of the province.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre Objected To Extra Cost Of Sewers

Referring to a clause in the report of the Board of Works showing that the cost of building the sewers on Princess, Prince and Romaine streets was estimated at $4,707.73, or 31 per cent. more than last year's estimate by the City Engineer, Ald. A. A. McIntyre last night criticized the continuance of the work. He asserted that Mr. Parsons would not guarantee that the ultimate cost would not exceed the estimate. Further, he alleged that the work was held up last year because the foreman was of the wrong "colour," and that he had not received the assistance from the City Engineer to which he was entitled as foreman.

Ald. McIntyre—Ald. Dobbin said we could get it done cheaper if we would wait.

Ald. Dobbin—So we will, if we wait.

Ald. Worth—Is this work absolutely necessary?

"Yes it is," Ald. Saunders declared.

Ald. Worth — It seems a fearful price.

Ald. McIntyre said that the City Engineer had thrown away more than his salary by recommending that work.

Ald. Dobbin—If we put it off before, it is all the more reason why we should put it off again with this increase.

Mayor Duncan—We might build the sewer on Prince street, and keep track of the price.

Ald. McIntyre—I would like to ask the engineer what he has done in the last month.

Mr. Parsons stated that Martin Neary was placed in charge of the work last fall. He had completed the sewer on Parnell street, and thought that he could get along the same way on Princess street. But he ran into water, and a steam hammer was bought for him when he found the need of steel sheeting.

Ald. Edgar— When Martin Neary was bossing the work the men were not kept working. I was down on several occasions and there were one or two men working and five or six doing nothing. I thought it was lax management.

Ald. A. McIntyre replied that he could mention the unemployment of men on the outfall sewer when it was being built.

Mayor Duncan — I had nothing against the foreman last year, and no objection to him continuing this year.

Ald. A. McIntyre —It makes no difference to me who does it, but why go ahead with this extra cost.

Ald. Langford observed that a foreman on a piece of work should get every facility from those above him, and not come along with aids when it was too late.

Ald. Worth recalled that the work was discontinued because it was proving too costly. He didn't know who was looking after it.

The report of the Board was carried, but Ald. McIntyre stated that he protested to proceeding under the increased expenditure.

OUTING FOR CHILDREN AT THE SHELTER.

St. John's Sunday School teachers, scholars and many parents and other members of the congregation sailed to Bewdley yesterday per steamer Stoney Lake, and report a very successful day. Canon Davidson and Mr. R. J. Devey, the superintendent, devoted themselves to ensure a happy day for all and their efforts were heartily appreciated. Mrs. Conway and Mrs. Devey ran the booth, which was well patronized. Lunch and racing pleasantly passed away the time at Bewdley, and it was a happy party singing the National Anthem, which reached the wharf soon after 7 p.m.

Mrs. Read brought along the children of the Shelter as the guests of the School and the Girls' Auxiliary, and they were kindly motored to the boat in the morning by Mr. G. N. Gordon and Mr. Art Johnson.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:
The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

ORIENTALS WIN AN EXCITING GAME FROM DE LAVAL BY 8-7

In an exciting game that was in doubt until the last man was out, the Orientals defeated the De Laval outfit in a Twilight League game last night by 8 runs to 7. Orientals took an early lead and were ahead 4 to 1 at the close of the second, but the De Laval gang kept hammering along until they overhauled the youngsters finishing the fifth 5 to 4 in front. However, the Orientals came back with a big quartette of counters in the sixth and although the losers got two of them back they could not get up on even terms again.

De Laval out hit the Orientals 2 to 1; getting sixteen solid smashes to eight by the winners, while Sharpe the losing twirder struck out thirteen men. However his support was very poor with men on bases, while on the other hand the winners contributed some nice fielding in the pinches, two double plays in the fifth and six innings, saving the situation. McNelly helped a lot to win his own game by his fine fielding. He gathered in English's fast grass cutter with the bases loaded in the sixth and threw Sharpe out at the plate and Bergoine's quick throw at first nailed the batter, the double killing saving a bad situation. Again in the eight a speedy play by McNeely prevented the score being tied when after Lipsett and English had both singled with two out, he nabbed Neary's roller and got Lipsett at the plate with a perfect peg to Bergoine. Foley was the hero of the other double, grabbing a fast grounder from Taylor and after stepping on second, forcing Fitzgerald, shot the ball to Tudhope in time to get Taylor. These three plays saved the day for the Orientals.

The batting of Dugan for De Laval and Bergoine for the Orientals was a feature. Both got four hits out of four times up and all the drives were clean. Geo. MacDonald, first baseman for the De Laval got a nasty smash in the face from a foul tip while at bat in the seventh and had to retire from the game, Neary finishing his turn at bat while Fitzgerald went to first base and Neary to right field.

It was the Oriental fist victory and the third consecutive defeat for De Laval.

Polarine
FRICTION REDUCING MOTOR OIL
"Makes a good car better"

For Piston Rings

A piston ring "seal" maintains the power of your engine for bucking steep grades, for racing at top speed and for loafing along on high. When the oil film between the piston rings and cylinder walls has the correct body and lubricating qualities it holds compression tight, keeps your engine running quietly, makes your motor responsive to the slightest shift of the throttle.

IS YOUR CAR A GOOD CLIMBER?

Almost any car makes a good showing along smooth pavements and up gentle grades. But to take stiff grades on high, to get a flying start when you open the throttle, to get most miles and most power out of every gallon of gas, requires piston rings made gas-tight with an oil of the right body and lubricating quality—an oil that forms a seal between piston rings and cylinder walls, that minimizes wear, that helps the gas to give full value in dependable power.

Polarine
has just the right body to form this gas-tight seal between the piston rings and cylinder walls. It does not break down or lose its lubricating qualities under intense heat. It doesn't gum in summer nor congeal in winter. It overcomes friction and lessens carbon trouble—lengthens the motor's useful life and keeps it in prime condition the year round.

Polarine is made in two grades—Polarine and Polarine Heavy. It is supplied in one-half, one and four gallon sealed cans, also in 12½ gallon steel kegs, barrels and half-barrels. There are also Polarine oils and greases for effective transmission and differential lubrication.

GRAIN MARKET

Light cash offerings, readily absorbed for export interests, together with some short covering, explain the early strength of the markets for corn and oats. CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 72 cars, with 709 cattle, 424 calves, 2,144 hogs, and 344 sheep and lambs.

There is a fair trade and good demand for anything with weight and quality in the butcher cattle class. The bulk of the receipts, however, are of inferior quality and prices barely hold steady, while decidedly common quality is easier and lower. At the lower prices there was a fair clean-up of all offerings.

Sheep and lambs are steady to firm.

Calves steady.

Hogs firmer and 25c. higher than last week.

WILL HEAD STAMP SALE.

Sir Herbert Ames To Take Charge When They Appear After Next Victory Loan.

OTTAWA, July 4.—It is understood that Sir Herbert Ames has been asked to take charge of the campaign for the sale of War Savings stamps throughout Canada.

It is not likely that the campaign for the sale of the War Savings Stamps will be launched until after the next Victory Loan is floated, about October 1. It is felt that the sale of the War Stamps might interfere with the loan. This is said to have been the experience of the United States.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A DECLARATION OF LOVE

CHAPTER CVIII.

"Haven't you heard that a singer seldom has a good speaking voice?" again I tried to put at least naturalness into my voice.

"Yes, but it does not apply in your case. May I make a guess?"

"As to what?"

"It was Julia Collins whose voice was praised. Am I right?"

"Yes. I could not deny it if I would. It is too patent." I could not help glancing across the room where George was bending over the "lovely Julia." "And really she has a wonderful voice. I think I never have heard a more musical one."

"You are very generous. Helen—" he stopped a moment, then in a low, intense voice he went on, "I love you." His quiet earnestness was very convincing. "Will you—do you care for me? I may be a rotter to tell you this; to ask you to care for me. But will you be kind and if you are unhappy with Howard,—let me make you happy?"

"Oh, Mr. Gray!" I commenced, then I stopped. I had perhaps given him reason to say things to me; things to which I had no right to listen. But—what kind of things was George saying to Julia Collins? His attitude had been that of a lover all the evening.

Playing With Fire.

That I was deliberately playing with fire, and that I might be burned never entered my head. That when I gave room to the thought that George's actions excused anything I might do I was on dangerous ground did not occur to me. Strangely enough I did not resent what Merton had said, save that I resented the fact that George by his neglect had given him the opportunity.

"You like me, I know it," he went on in the same quiet, convincing tone. "You have shown plainly that you do. It is but a step, dear, from liking to loving, — I will be very good to you," he waited.

"Oh, I am so sorry! I never thought that you cared that way!" then I flushed crimson as I remembered Evelyn's declaration that he was madly in love with me.

"I know. You are a loyal little soul. But why not take your happiness now while you are young? Why wait until you are all worn out with the struggle? You look so unhappy to-night. It breaks my heart."

I wonder if anyone can conceive how such sympathetic talk appealed to me? My heart was sore and sick. I had been morbidly unhappy for days. That he popular handsome, talented, should be heartbroken because of me seemed almost impossible, at the same time it healed my hurt. Had I given up to my emotions I should have thrown myself into his arms and said:

"Take me! No one else wants me."

It is perhaps fortunate that we were where such a course was impossible. No matter how unhappy I was conventions had to be respected. I think Merton read what was going on in my mind. He rose and stood before me.

"I must leave you. It won't do for me to monopolize you. I will see you to-morrow afternoon. Until then remember, dear, that I love you, that I want you; and that I will make you happy if it is in the power of man to do so." Then without a word he moved away just as Madge Loring called out:

"You should be ashamed to be so greedy. Mr. Gray hasn't spoken to me this evening.

"I will not only speak but dance with you now if you will honour me," he said drawing her hand through his arm.

I was so thankful I did not have to speak. I knew he had acted as he had to save me the necessity. How wondrously kind and thoughtful he was. How could I help caring for him?

On the way home George talked very little. I was too busy with my thoughts to resent it as I usually did. He asked me if I had enjoyed myself.

"Fairly well," I had replied.

"I felt a bit bored myself," he returned.

I started to say that he had not ACTED bored, but bit my lip and kept still. I had no right to say anything to him. Had I not just listened to a declaration of love from Merton Gray.

I went immediately to bed, pleading weariness. George read as he always did no matter how late it was. But although I left him to go to bed, I did not sleep. Merton was coming to-morrow to again tell me he cared for me, to urge me to go away with him. What should I tell him? How could I decide? I closed my eyes when George came up and pretended to be asleep, but I lay awake the entire night trying to think what to do. Should I take my happiness where I found it — or thought I had found it; or should I go on living as I now was? To-morrow would soon be here and I must have an answer ready. So I thought as I lay staring up at the ceiling.

To-morrow—A Momentous Decision.

"Live in a Worry invites death in a hurry." Worry wastes nerve force at a tremendous rate. The more exhausted the greater the tendency to worry.

As the nerves are strengthened you forget to worry and find yourself resting and sleeping naturally.

BASKET ON A STRING.

One of Italy's War Appliances That Does Fine Work.

"Jolly good work I call that for a 'basket on a string'," was the way a visiting British officer characterized an exploit of the Italians in the course of which—in lieu of any other way of doing it—they had shot the end of a cable from a gun across a flood-swollen river and thus made it possible to rig up a teleferica for rushing over some badly needed reinforcements.

The Italians' conduct of their Alpine campaign must remain a classic of mountain warfare — something which has never been approached in the past and may never be equalled in the future.

Perhaps the most spectacular exploit ever carried out from a teleferica was that by which a troublesome nest of Austrian machine gunners were cleared off one of the pinnacles of the great M. Massif in the fall of 1916. The situation was irritating enough for the Italians even when the activities of the enemy were confined only to observation, but when he took to bringing up a machine gun and peppering—almost from its rear—the headquarters of an Alpini battalion which held an important pass 3,000 feet below, it became well-nigh intolerable. What happened was related to me some months later, when I asked the major of this battalion how it chanced that the roof of the officers' mess in which we were dining was armored with sheets of steel.

"Against machine-gun bullets," was the reply; "there was a time—of accursed memory — in which he used to bring a gun out on a little splinter of rock, not 1,500 metres from here in an air line, and spray the whole of our little terrace with 'dum-dums.'

"We were working day and night," he continued, "to excavate a gun cavern, the fire from which would make that troublesome position untenable for the Austrians. In the meantime we had to stick it out as best we could. At this juncture Captain X. came in.

"'What is to prevent my rigging up a machine gun in a teleferica basket?' he said, 'covering it—with myself and a man to help—under a piece of canvas as if it was an ordinary load of gear, letting it be run down until I am well in the rear of the Austrians, and turning loose?'

"If I hadn't been seeing more or less red myself, and if our position had not become really serious, I would probably never have listened to the mad proposal. As it was, I entered into it heart and soul. We reckoned the slope of the cable, and hung the platform of the machine gun at an agle which would make it easy to elevate and range on the Austrian position above. Then—as a happy afterthought—we bent a sheet of bullet-proof steel for a shield on the exposed side, erected a low platform on which the gun would rest securely and—the first and last armored teleferica was complete.

"We had to do a bit of 'trimming' to put her on an even keel, after which she rode smoothly and evenly. With X. and his assistant couched low on either side of the gun, and a black tarpaulin thrown loosely over the whole, she looked like an ordinary load of junk going down for repairs. When X. 'unmasked' and opened up we could even follow the line of brown dust spurts on the face of the cliff as the bullets ranged upward toward their mark. And that was about all there was to it. The fire of the two Austrian machine guns ceased instantly, and never resumed. Probably the gunners were killed before they had a chance even to turn round their guns and reply to the sudden attack from the air."
—Lewis R. Freeman in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

And Spain, Too!

Although neutral Spain may not be in the war, the Spaniards are certainly in it. The French have been perfectly well aware that hundreds of Spaniards joined the Foreign Legion, at the beginning of the war; so that Paris was not taken the least by surprise when 300 Spanish soldiers paraded in French uniform to receive decorations for valor. The Spanish colony patriotically welcomed them with fiery speeches, while the French loaded them with medals. Three received the reward of the Legion of Honor, and scores the Croix Militaire and the Croix de Guerre. Since, from a strictly legal point of view, the Spanish legionaries have imperiled their nation's neutrality, it will be interesting to know what Berlin will have to say about it; or rather about the 56 sinkings of Spanish ships and the 56 protests made by Spain, which "friendly" Germany has consistently ignored.—Christian Science Monitor.

Meerschaum Houses.

Several houses in a Spanish town are built of meerschaum, a coarse variety of which is mined in the neighborhood.

The Less Waste The Better The Service

"SLOW" telephone accounts -- the accounts on which repeated efforts to collect must be made -- result in waste of time and labor.

¶ Most telephone users pay their bills promptly and the labor and time of collecting them are reasonable.

¶ But some subscribers overlook their bills or neglect to pay them promptly, and the work of collecting such accounts is laborious and time-wasting.

¶ The elimination of waste in the telephone business means better telephone service. When we can do away with any waste time or labor that may be involved in furnishing service, we can put an equal amount of time and labor into the service itself to the benefit of all telephone users.

¶ Help us, by the prompt payment of accounts, to avoid waste time and labor and to concentrate on the enormous amount of necessary work that war-time conditions demand.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

DUST MULCH.

The surface of the ground in your war garden should never be allowed to become so hard that a crust is formed. Regular stirring of the top soil creates a perfect dust mulch which is invaluable if you want successful growth. Ordinary dust mulch may be supplemented by the mulch of manure or lawn clippings which serves to keep down the small weeds and retain the soil moisture. It is doubtful if the heavier mulch is always beneficial to plants in cool locations. It keeps the ground rather cold, with the result that the invigorating influence of the sun's rays is excluded from the surface roots, and growth is retarded.

The condition of your mulch depends very largely on how you water your garden. Before the ground is entirely dried out after rain the soil should be stirred and during periods of drought it should be gone over at least once a week. Perhaps the thirstiest of all the plants is the cabbage, which needs continual watering.

For home-made camphorated oil take 1 o. turpentine, 1 oz. sweet oil, take 1 oz turpentine, 1 oz. sweet oil into small pieces ,put into a bottle with turpentine and sweet oil, and shake well until dissolved. It is then ready for use.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

What's in a Name?

By JULIA NANCE

Harbeson entered the apartment house, stepped up to the young man sitting at the telephone desk and asked to be announced to Miss Vinton.

"Which Vinton, there are two families of that name here, one on the third and one on the fifth floor."

Harbeson said he did not know, but that he was expected and suggested that the telephone man ask one of the two if Miss Vinton was expecting a visitor called Harbeson. The message was sent and a reply received to tell the gentleman to come up. This settled the matter and entering the elevator he was taken to the fifth floor, where he found a young lady dressed in mourning waiting for him in the drawing room.

Edward Harbeson and James Vinton were classmates and chums at college. When they were graduated Vinton sailed; without visiting his home, for Europe. Harbeson was to study a profession in the city where Vinton lived and Vinton invited him to call upon his sister, promising to write her that he was coming.

"I am delighted to meet the sister of a friend of mine," was Harbeson's opening remark.

The young lady seemed embarrassed and it is questionable if these conventional words made any impression on her. She pointed to a seat for the guest and took one near it for herself.

"I suppose" she said, "that we may as well proceed to the object of your call at once. Of course I have no recollection of you though I have been told that we were playmates when we were children. It seems to me that the only sensible thing for us to do is to get acquainted, without any mention of your father's wish. Time will show whether it will seem best that we carry it out."

Harbeson was thrown flat aback by this formal address. Instead of saying "Miss Vinton, I have not the slightest idea what you are talking about," he said "very true," took out his handkerchief, drew it nervously across his lips, put it back in his pocket, and asked:

"However, I think that we had better start with a mutual understanding of just what my father's wish is. It would be very stupid of us to spend a lot of time under a misunderstanding."

"Very well, state the case."

This was not what Harbeson had counted on, but he was equal to the occasion.

"A very hurried and meager statement of the case has been given me, and——"

"Have you not seen your father's will?"

"I have not." He might have added, "my father has nothing to bequeath and I don't think he has made a will."

"Well, since you prefer it I will state the case. Your father and mother being separated when you were a little boy, and you having been awarded to your mother, your father adopted me, and brought me up. I supposed I would meet you at his funeral but was told you could not be found. When his will was opened it was discovered that he left his property to you and me jointly and desired—"

"You mean he desired that we should enjoy his property together as man and wife."

"I believe so" was the scarce audible response.

"Have you any idea how much my father left?"

"I have been told that it produces an income of three thousand a year."

There was a brief pause after which Harbeson said: "Whatever happens between you and me I will say this; every cent of this property and income shall be yours."

The young lady looked up at him with surprise and admiration. "At any rate," she said—"you are a very unusual man."

"Not at all," replied Harbeson, "but I feel myself unworthy of such a lovely girl."

The situation had reached this stage when there was a ring at the telephone, and the man at the desk below announced Mr. Humiston. Harbeson heard it and the truth flashed upon him. The two names were sufficiently alike to cause any mistake. But Harbeson was game, he sat apparently unconcerned.

"Are you sure you are Tom Humiston?" she asked hardly knowing what she said.

"I am sure that I am Ned Harbeson. Can it be possible that you have made a mistake?"

"Oh, horrors what a blunder. How stupid of me."

"No harm done I assure you. It was quite natural, the two names being so much alike."

Harbeson bowed himself out and met Mr. Humiston coming up.

"I can cut that fellow out," he muttered, "and no great credit to me to do it. At any rate I'm going to try."

Later he wrote a note of apology to Miss Vinton, abusing himself for acting like a dishonorable man; but he had been sorely tempted by his admiration for her. She replied that his offer to give up his share of his supposed inheritance showed him to be the kind of man whom any girl would delight to have for a friend.

Harbeson made good his resolve to cut the other fellow out.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

Japanese to Visit China.

A delegation of members of the Japanese House of Representatives will soon visit China, Manchuria and parts of Siberia to observe conditions. Harbin and Vladivostock are among the places at which they will call. The projected visit is occasioning some interest because of the possibility of Japan eventually being forced to send an army into Eastern Siberia should Japanese interests be in peril.

OBJECT OF AIR RAIDS

FRENCH AUTHORITY SPEAKS OF GERMAN MIND.

The War Lords Believe That a Victory Can Be Won by Killing Civilians and Thus Terrorizing Their Opponents — Effect of Policy Is Not What They Expected.

M. GEORGES PRADE, one of the real authorities on aero matters and long known to motor engineers in Canada for his lucid observations on the internal combustion motor, has printed a remarkable expose of aviation as a war measure in Le Journal.

He says: "The repeated aerial bombardments which the Germans have hazarded on Paris certainly form a part of a morale offensive which is easy to divine. The first Prussian avion which flew over Paris on August 29, 1914, threw out proclamations which were couched thus: 'Parisians, surrender. The German army is at your gates. We have already beaten the Russians in a decisive battle before Tannenberg.' This was all.

"The launching of the death-dealing fleet of aerial torpedoes these last days was simply a continuance of the same policy of sowing terror. During three years those whom we may call moderate—everything being relative—those of the party who avow economics as the principal plank of their platform, who see only in the present war an opportunity of gaining material advantages after the war, have been able to hold back the folly of homicide on the part of the General Staff in Germany. And they have had some success, realizing that such attacks as have been made on Paris and London will be more disastrous for them in the future than a military defeat, also that it is impossible by such methods to obtain a durable peace where contiguous peoples nurture a hate against each other.

"Finally the voice of this party was stifled by an insistent General Staff less considerate of the future than of the blackmail of intimidation of the present. No one, not even the last Pomeranian on earth, is the least affected by the claim that these attacks are in the nature of reprisal on the morrow of their twentieth attack on Paris and the 103rd on London.

"Such an attitude is to take us for Bolsheviki or Austrians on the morrow of Sadowa. All their mentality is revealed in the impudence of their affirmations. What, indeed, will it serve them to talk of peace when by the negation of its principles of the rights of men and of franchise they run in advance all moral bases?

"Six years ago, just after the general manoeuvres in Germany, a series of articles appeared in the Paris press entitled, 'We and They.' In these articles was projected the first cry of alarm heard in France to signal the vast progressive strides which were being taken by German aviation. These articles prophesied, too, that the next war would be atrocious because of this new aerial arm. They were prophecies which were received with incredulity on all hands.

"The massacre of civilians has always been a part of the German method of war. The triple problem presented itself in these early days of aviation — work, science and industry — and Germany never for a moment let up on one or another of these elements of advancement. They inaugurated flying by night, bombarding trials and trials of heavy-duty motors, all of which were endowed with the Grand Prize of the Emperor.

"We know sufficiently to-day just what the German system of bombardment by avions amounts to; it has been described in detail and broadcast, so there is no excuse for anyone ignoring it. With facts and figures we have discussed the two principal types — Gothas and Friedrichshaven. Each of these types has been evolved from within itself, has simply grown in size and efficiency; the latter, which was originally a reduced model of a Gotha, has become, as we know from the example which we brought down at Compiegne, a four-place super-Gotha (with pilot, bomber, machine gunner and probably a special guide who knows the topography of Paris.

"The Germans have equally employed in these late attacks avions of a smaller model, such as the D. W. F., called 'two-purpose' planes—bombardment and scouting.

"It is to be remarked that their last two raids on Paris began early in the evening. This was because of the desirability of getting away from their airdromes during the twilight period in order that their fires and signals might not be seen and thus designate that particular locality as a point for immediate counter-attack. If is true that they have to make use of these same luminous signals on their return, and this is one of the opportunities which French aviators have had of attacking with precision these airdromes and their returning birds of prey.

"I am very conservative as to methods of defence. The task is a difficult one, but we have gone about it with method, intelligence and courage almost superhuman. As to counsel which might be given to the Parisian public, it can be summed up in a few short words: Avoid all false bravery, even indifference. It is no emotion of bravery to expose one's self to danger if there is no patriotic end to be served.

"A poilu who is in the line of fire of a shell or a bullet because he is holding a post which prevents a German soldier from passing is brave; a civilian who carelessly gets himself killed by a bomb when it is not necessary is simply foolish. The problem still remains as to just what may be the object of the Germans in these attacks. To discourage the arriere, the rearguard, by killing as many innocent as possible? The question is there."

Was Called Up.

M. Bergson lives in a quiet corner of Paris in a little house of silent and discreet appearance. The neighbors know him well, by sight at least, but they do not know what kind of work this grave, thoughtful and rather reserved man is doing. They were then not a little surprised, a few weeks ago, to see him come out in a beautiful green uniform with embroidered collar, cocked hat and a sword dangling at his side. "Hullo," said a concierge, "the little old un from opposite has been called up; and about time." M. Bergson, as all the world knows, except his neighbors, was officially received as a member of the illustrious French Academy recently.

Baboons and Oysters.

A liking for oysters is supposed to indicate a somewhat advanced gustatory taste, and yet, according to a book entitled "Monkeyfolk In South Africa," by F. W. Fitzsimons, baboons share this predilection with gormands. Shellfish of all kinds are welcome food to them, and troops of baboons often make excursions to the seaside to get these salty delicacies, opening the shells either with their strong teeth or by striking them on the rocks.

"Woman Hath Her Reasons, Which Reason Cannot Know"

Ask a woman why she prefers Lipton's Tea, and the probability is she will answer "because" and let it go at that.

There are, however, cogent reasons for this preference.

The first is that Lipton's is the only Tea sold in Canada the quality and flavor of which is guaranteed.

We guarantee it because we grow it on our own plantations. We know the quality of our leaf, and we blend it, and pack it ourselves.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S COAT DRESS.

The clever thing about this pattern is that it may be used either as a coat or as a dress. It opens at centre front and is belted in at the natural waistline. A pointed tailor collar rolls slightly at the neck. The long sleeves have deep flare cuffs of the contrasting material to match the collar. The front and back sections of the coat are in panel effect, with the sides curving gracefully around to the underarm seams to form pockets. If a dress is desired the material chosen may be gingham, linen, pongee or serge. A coat could be made of checked wool velour, serge, wool poplin or gabardine.

The girl's coat dress pattern No. 8784 is cut in six sizes—4 to 14 years. As on the figure the eight year size requires 2½ yards 36 inch, 2 yards 44 inch or 1⅝ yards 54 inch material, with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction. This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents

FIRESHIPS IN SEA FIGHTS.

And the Floating Volcanoes That Were Called "Infernals."

Nothing in the thrilling narratives of many old sea fights appeals more strongly to the modern imagination than the doings of the fireships.

The idea of using incendiary vessels for the destruction of a hostile fleet was of great antiquity. They are said to have been employed at the siege of Tyre in 333 B. C. and again by the Rhodians about a century and a half later. By the English, however, they were first used in 1370, and two centuries later had come to be looked upon as a legitimate naval weapon, their attacks being regarded and dreaded in much the same way as are those of the torpedo craft and submarines at the present time.

The explosion vessels, or "infernals," invented by the Italian engineer Giani belli were the most formidable. The designer procured two vessels of about eighty tons each and laid along their bottom a foundation of brickwork. Upon this he erected a marble chamber with five foot walls containing 3,000 tons of gunpowder, while on the top of this chamber was a six foot layer of gravestones placed edgewise. A marble roof rose over these, and upon it was piled a quantity of round shot, chain shot, millstones, blocks of stone, iron shod beams and anything heavy which would cause the explosion to take a lateral effect. The effect of this floating volcano was appalling, for the masses of stone and shot, disintegrated and flung skyward by the explosive, fell and destroyed any vessels, buildings or men in the vicinity.

Three years later the Spanish armada before Calais was attacked by fireships prepared by the English. Eight vessels were selected, and so great was the haste that not even their guns or stores were removed. They were ignited and launched and with the wind and tide in their favor advanced straight for the center of the anchored armada. Ship fouled ship amid the cries of terror and the crash of falling spars, and, though the Spaniards finally succeeded in getting to sea, the fireship attack completely disorganized and demoralized them and helped largely to make the eventual battle of Gravelines the success it was.

The most recent and at the same time one of the most interesting fireship exploits which ever took place was that carried out against the French fleet in Basque Roads in 1809 by Lord Cochrane. His explosion vessel, intended to destroy the boom behind which lay the French fleet, was a truly awful contrivance. Cochrane piloted the vessel and lit the train at the last moment, and on the evidence of a French captain whose ship was close by it did its work well, for the air was filled with shells, grenades and blazing debris, while the explosion tore a huge rent in the boom.—London Globe.

Ship on Girl's Back Bar to Society.

A ship on a girl's back is a bar to her entrance into society, according to State Senator Alfred J. Gilchrist, of New York city. The senator declares that a Brooklyn girl is barred from society because, when ten years old, a ship was tattooed on the girl's back. She cannot wear a fashionable, low-neck dress because of the spreading sails across the ocean on her back. The senator, therefore, asks for a law imposing a fine of $500 for any one who mars a young woman's beauty.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by most druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

"Laugh and grow fat," is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing.

BIG BLOW IMPENDING ON THE WESTERN FRONT

FRENCH ADVANCE ON A THREE MILE FRONT

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Several Hundred Germans Captured by the British and French Forces—Line Straightened Out.

FRENCH ADVANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, July 4. — (Official) — British troops this morning delivered an attack in the region east of Amiens, capturing the Village of Hamel, northeast of Villers-Bretonneux, and advancing the line in this region to a depth of more than a mile.

THE STATEMENT READS.

"This morning we carried out a successful operation between Villers-Bretonneux and the Somme. The Village of Hamel has been captured and our line has been advanced to an average depth of 2,000 yards. Hostile artillery has been active in the Robecq and St. Janscapelle sectors."

BRITISH GAIN.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 4.—Australian troops who attacked the German lines northeast of Villers-Bretonneux on the Somme front this morning, beside taking Hamel village, are said to have battled their way forward beyond Hamel and Vair Woods, between Hamel and Villers-Bretonneux.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, July 4.—(Official)—French troops last night attacked the German lines on a front of a mile and a quarter in the neighbourhood of Autreches, northwest of Soissons, and pushed into enemy territory for a distance of nearly half a mile. Later the French delivered another attack in the same region between Autreches and Moulin-Sous-Toutvent giving them further gains of territory.

The entire operation netted French gain of ground on a front of more than three miles to a maximum depth of approximately three-fifths of a mile. The French took 1,006 prisoners.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

North of Montdidier, between Montdidier and the Oise, and on the right bank of the Meuse the French carried out several raids bringing back prisoners.

Between the Oise and the Aisne at 7:30 o'clock last night French troops attacked the German lines west of Autreches on a front of two kilometres (1¼ miles) and made an advance of about 800 metres. Later in the evening a new attack was made in the same region between Autreches and Moulin-Sous-Toutvent at a moment when the Germans were preparing a counter attack. The French made a further gain of ground. The entire advance, which extended on a front of five kilometres (3.1 miles) reached a depth of 1,200 metres at certain points.

The number of unwounded prisoners taken in the course of these actions is 1,066, including 18 officers. One of our battalions alone took more than 300 prisoners.

PLOT WAS FRUSTRATED

(By Jos. Shaplen.)

(United Press Service.)

STOCKHOLM, July 4.—Frustration of a plot by the Germans to proclaim a dictator of Poland who would be subservient to the Kaiser, is reported by anti-German Polish newspapers received here to-day.

The pro-German Activist Party was behind the plot, which centred at Warsaw. It was planned to arrest the Polish Council of Regents, the immediate governing body of Poland, and to place in their stead a dictator who would be the tool of Germany. The plot indicates Germany is seeking to destroy even such mild aspirations toward self government in Poland as are represented by the Bourgesie Council of Regents.

MILITARY AUTOCRACY MUST BE DESTROYED SAYS THE PRESIDENT UNITED STATES

There Can be No Thought of Peace Until the Task is Accomplished, Declares President Wilson in a Stirring Address to Diplomats of Allied Nations.

THE GERMAN PEACE OFFENSIVE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, July 4.—At the Independence Day gathering at Mount Vernont, the home and tomb of George Washington, President Wilson to-day addressed a small gathering of officials and diplomats of the Allied nations. But he spoke to the world, and he spoke a logical sequel to his "force without stint or limit" declaration of several weeks ago. Unreservedly the President declared that there could be no thought of peace which did not mean the destruction of military autocracy or its reduction to virtual impotence.

A reign of law, based on the consent of the governed and sustained by organized opinion of mankind, was the way he summarized in a single sentence the objects of humanity in the word war.

PEACE TREATIES.

Whether the President was addressing his remarks directly to the recent speech of the German Foreign Secretary Von Kuehlmann, or to foreshadows of a renewed German peace offensive, or whether he merely took the occasion of the celebration of American Independence to emphasize to the world the aims of the nation, can only be divined. He did not deal with the progress of the war or any particular phase of it, but he spoke eloquently of the attitude toward Germany's so-called peace treaties in the east by grouping the people of Russia "for the moment unorganized and helpless" among the peoples of the world standing against the enemies of liberty.

THE MEDAILLE MILITAIRE WON BY ASPHODEL BOY

Sergt. Percy Edward Andrews, Son of Mr. and Mrs. David Andrews, Who Live Near Norwood, Decorated by French Government for Valor at Battle of Zillebeke in June, 1916—A Belated Recognition by Home Folks.

WAS HIGHLY HONORED.

THE MEDAILLE MILITAIRE

The French Military Medal was introduced in 1852. It is awarded to private soldiers and non-commissioned officers who have distinguished themselves or rendered long and meritorious services. It carries a yearly pension of 100 francs, and has been granted occasionally to officers.

The Medaille Militaire, the French military medal, equivalent to Britain's Victoria Cross, was won by Sergeant Percy Edward Andrews, of Asphodel Township, at the battle of Zillebeke in the Ypres salient on June 2nd, 1916. Last night before a crowd of Norwood and other East Peterborough citizens, Sergeant Andrews received from the hands of His Honour Judge Huycke the parchment certificate, the warrant of his decoration, from the French Legion of Honour. It is significant that the number of Sergeant Andrews' brevet (certificate) is 3339. In other words, since the medal was struck in 1852, the number of persons whom France had found worthy of receiving it was only 3339, and the 3339th Medaille Miiitaire was destined for a Peterborough County boy whom Norwood claims as its own.

These few facts may convey some idea, wholly inadequate, of the renown that has come to Sergeant Andrews, and reflexly to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Andrews, who live three miles north of Norwood, and to his native County of Peterborough.

A Modest Hero.

Of all the men who have returned to Canada, "bearing their blushing honours," perhaps not one has come home so quietly as Sergeant Andrews. A few weeks ago Norwood tendered a reception to some of her boys who have recently come back. Sergeant Andrews was persuaded to attend, but he made no reference to the decoration he had received, and the committee of the patriotic village were unaware of it. Sergeant Andrews was publicly decorated in Hyde Park, London, on July 2nd, 1917, but it was only this year that the certificate of the Legion of Honour was sent to him. Judge Huycke referred to these circumstances last night although he gleaned the information from sources other than the young Sergeant. When the certificate was received in England, Sergeant Andrews was in Canada, having been sent home for discharge as the result of wounds he suffered subsequent to the occasion when the Medaille was pinned on his breast. The certificate was forwarded

STORIES HAVE BEEN DENIED.

No Ships Sunk in the Vicinity of Halifax

Canadian Press:

HUGE PARADE IN NEW YORK

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, July 4.— More than 100,000 men and women, representatives of thirty-four nationalities, were in line to-day behind the contingent of American fighting men in the greatest Independence Day parade and pageant ever witnessed in New York city. A limit of 110,000 had to be enforced in order that all of the paraders might pass the reviewing stand before nightfall. There were one hundred and fifty bands.

PEACE REGARDED AS ONLY TEMPORARY

Roumanians Look to President Wilson to Redress the Wrongs of This Stricken Country.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LUCERNE, Switzerland, July 4.—Roumania regards the peace with the Central Empires as only temporary and relies upon the Allies, particularly America, to revise it.

This declaration was made here today by Tache Jonescue, leader of the anti-German element in Roumania, who just arrived from that country. He said this view is shared by 25 per cent. of the Roumanian people.

Confidence in President Wilson's determiantion and power to redress the wrongs of Roumania, is almost a creed with the Roumanians, he said.

OBSERVED THE FOURTH

Celebrations Were Held in Many Places—Big Guns Are Turning Up on the West.

A FATEFUL FOURTH

(By William Philip Simms.

(United Press Service.)

WITH BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 4.—On the eve of possibly the biggest battle of the war, with the ominous rumble of guns tuning up for Hindenburg's next drive against the defenders of democracy, British, French and Belgians united with the Americans to-day in the celebration of the most fateful Fourth of July since the United States was born.

Opposite, the Kaiser's ever-growing reserves have been resting for weeks, while Hindenburg and Ludendorff are preparing to strike.

General Opinion.

Prisoners declare the general opinion of the German troops is that the next blow will end the war. Some say the war will end this month, others that it will end in August, September or October. All have been given the impression that peace will come by the end of summer.

To-day, as the Allies observed the Fourth, celebrations were held in various places and ways.

KNOX SUNDAY SCHOOL EXCURSION

Pleasant Trip Was Made to Hiawatha—The Prize Winners.

Under most favourable conditions of weather, the annual excursion of Knox Sunday school was duly honoured yesterday. There was a good turn-out and the 'Stoney Lake' transported its load of happy children and grown-ups to and from the picturesque village of Hiawatha without mishap or striking incident.

After dinner sports were held, prominent among which was a game of baseball between the "Ins" and the "Outs." Needless to say the "Ins" were at bat most of the time and the "Outs" in the field, otherwise the score would not have been so lop-sided.

Next in order came the races. The winners were as follows:

The Prize Winners.

Boys' race, 1 to 5—1 Gordon Hardy.

The booth did a rousing business, the ability of Constable and Carpenter as salesmen being equalled only by the appetite of the purchasers. The receipts for the day will leave a nice balance on the right side.

MORALE IS DECLINING

Large Numbers of German Troops Are Falling Into the Hands of the Allies.

A GOOD SIGN.

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

(United Press Service.)

NEW YORK, July 4.—A decline in the morale of the German troops is strongly suggested by the large numbers of prisoners that are falling into the hands of the Allies as the result of minor operations.

The French captured more than 1,600 prisoners in last night's attack east of Compiegne, the Americans took more than five hundred prisoners at Vaux, and the British captured over 400 Germans a week ago east of Dieppe Forest. In addition there have been a number of very recent bags of 100 to 200 captives. It is now usual, in fact, for the Allies to pick up prisoners almost at will.

Resistance Lower.

The Germans are showing less powers of resistance by these surrenders than at any time since Von Hindenburg's spring offensive began. This does not mean that General Foch would be justified at the present moment in engaging in a major offensive before America is fully prepared to participate. The growing tendency to cry "Kamerade" on the part of the Germans however, is a good augury for the future. It indicates that in defensive warfare, the newer units of Von Hindenburg's army are not standing up with the same stubborness as did the older divisions.

War Weariness.

War Weariness seems to be creeping into the German ranks. This would be a mutual result of the failure of Von Hindenburg to gain any decisive objective following the ferocious exposure of his troops to slaughter. Von Kuehlman's recent utterance that peace cannot be won on the battle field, may very well also be responsible for the decline in the German morale. The surrender of Germans by the hundreds in local operations, means beyond all doubt that once the Allies begin their own offensive on a major scale, the German capitulations will grow to an unprecedented scale

Hindenburg's Failure.

It has always been the belief of students of German psychology that once the German army became convinced it couldn't win the war, its fighting efficiency would sink under the despondency of defensive combats. There is reason to believe the army has begun to suspect Hindenburg's failure.

World Happenings

Canadian Press:

MOSCOW, July 4.— A sanguinary battle is reported at Yekaterinoslav between the German Ukrainian White Guards and peasants. The latter number 200,000 and are equipped with artillery and machine guns.

Factories in that region, it is said, are closing because the workmen are enlisting in the Guerillas Corps.

CONFERENCE TO-DAY.

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA July 4.—With a view to settling the differences between fifty thousand railway shopmen, mechanics, repairers, etc., and Canadian railways, there was an important conference this morning between representatives of both sides and members of the government. Representatives of Federated Trades were first taken into consultation, after which the Railway War Board met the Government committee. Prospects of a settlement are regarded as good.

A Later Despatch

(By William Phillip Simms.)

(United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July .— (3 O'clock Despatch.)—The Allied attack early today was supported by a number of tanks.

As this cable is fyled, the attacking forces have attained all their objectives in the region of Morlancourt, on a front of 1,200 yards.

They have advanced to a depth of four hundred yards and have brought back 450 prisoners.

A BIG INCREASE IN AMERICAN NAVAL FORCES IN EUROPEAN WATERS

Three Times the Present Number of Destroyers Will Soon be Operating in the War Zone.

SUBMARINE WARFARE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 4.—American naval forces, comprising 250 vessels and 43,000 men, are now in European waters, operating in all areas from the White Sea to the Adriatic, Admiral Sims declared to-day in a speech at the Anglo-American fellowship meeting.

Gen. Biddle, who also spoke, declared that "we have ten million just like the soldiers marching to-day in various British cities, who can be brought over when needed.

During the coming year three times the present number of destroyers will be fighting with the Allies," said Sims. "More than 150 submarine chasers will soon be in the war zone. Half of them are here now.

Submarine Campaign.

"The submarine campaign has been met by the Allies sinking submarines faster than they can be built, and building merchant ships faster than they can be sunk. The submarine warfare undoubtedly will be continued to the end, but it can't win the war.

The significance of this celebration is that it surely touches all the hearts in America to-day, and henceforth its observance will commemorate not only our independence but the emancipation of all English-speaking peoples from all that is tending to keep them from a real knowledge and understanding of each other."

Ten Million Men.

Biddle said in part: "Our soldiers are now stationed all over England and Scotland. Some of them are staying only a few days, while others are receiving several months' training. Everywhere they have found the same friendliness and generosity. Cities, associations and individuals rival each other to do ther best for the American hospitals. Beautiful homes and parks have been put at our disposition. All of us feel deeply to-day's countrywide celebration.

"We have ten million men just like the soldiers marching to-day in various British cities, who can well be brought over when needed.

"America is in the war to stay and to fight to the finish for democracy."

GERMAN FORCES LAND IN FINLAND

Special to The Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, July 4.—German forces in Finland have been increased to 50,000 and the invasion of Careli and the seizure of Murmonry decided upon, according to dispatches from the Finnish correspondent of the Nyadagligt Allehanda here. Heavy detachments of these troops already are crossing the border, he added.

Submarines Will Be Despatched By Next Year

Charles M. Schwab Delivers Inspiring Address to America's Army of Shipbuilders.

(Special to The Examiner.)

BETHLEHEM SHIPYARDS, San Francisco, July 4.—Declaring that if American ship workers hold to the pace they are now setting, the U-boats will be beaten "by next year," Chas. M. Schwab, Director-General of the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation, to-day exhorted America's 300,000 shipbuilders to throw their utmist strength to their ask.

In an inspiring Independence Day address to the workers, Schwab said the credit of winning the war "will be shared equally by the workmen of America and the fighters of America.

"You are performing a very necessary and a very patriotic service," he said. "It will go farther perhaps toward winning the war than any other service short of the fighting in France. While giving one's life for one's country, of course, is the susacrifice, yet the highest duty is to serve where your government tells you to serve."

Funeral Took Place in Hamilton

MEMORIAL SERVICE WILL BE HELD IN MURRAY ST. CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY EVENING.

At the request of Peterboro friends, and in view of the fact that the death of Mr. R. C. Read, on Sunday last, took place at Niagara Falls and the funeral at Hamilton, it has been decided that the evening service on Sunday next, at the Murray Street Baptist Church, shall be of a memorial character.

The late Mr. Read was a deacon of the church, the teacher of the young men's class, and also chairman of the Finance Committee.

The body was laid to rest yesterday in the Hamilton cemetery, the pallbearers being H. G. Weber, L. J. Pettit, Dr. Scott, Thomas Distin, R. E. Harding and C. B. Routley. The pastor of the Murray street church conducted the service.

FEEDING THE MILLBROOK EDITOR

(Millbrook Mirror.)

Mrs. John Byers had new potatoes from her garden on June 29th. The "Mirror" had the pleasure of sampling them, thanks to the kindness of Mrs. Byers. We pronounce them to be choice and of a good size.

Rev. W. H. Higgs, who also has one of the best and earliest gardens in town, had new potatoes on the 29th of June.

There may be others who have had earlier potatoes—if so speak.

Just when going to press we received a telephone message from Mr. H. Mulligan saying he had new potatoes on June 27th, and is using them since.

Peterboro Soldier Was in One of Hospitals Bombed by Huns

Private Stanley Hartley Relates Some of His Experiences at the Front—Sad Scenes.

Mrs. D. Hartley, 144 Hunter street, has received the following letter from her son, Pte. Stanley Hartley, who was in one of the hospitals that was bombed by the Germans:

France, June 9, 1918.

Dear Mother,—We have had lovely weather here for the last month or more. Some of the new drafts from Canada have arrived here and I have met some I know. There is a great deal of very hard fighting going on over here. This year will see the finish of it, too. It is too bad to see the French women and children getting driven out of their homes when the Germans make a drive. Their homes are nothing but ruins when they come back. Many of them get killed before they get a chance to get out. They are moved back to cities out of range of the big guns, but then they get bombed at night I helped an old lady to carry her things when they were compelled to leave one of these towns. As far as I could understand she told me that she had three little girls and a boy killed when a shell fell in their barn where the children were playing. The Huns have something to pay for after this war. You see some sad cases out here. It makes you feel as if you would not go home if you had the chance until you finish the Huns. I was looking over some of our boys' graves not long ago on a well known battle front. It sure makes you hate the Huns. Our troops have been up against four and five men to one in these battles. I suppose you saw in the newspapers about the Huns bombing our wounded and nurses in the hospitals behind the lines. I was in one of the hospitals at the time and it would make you hate the name of a German the rest of your life. I think Peterborough would look good to me. There must be quite a change in the old place now. So now I must close. I will not write again until I hear from you or Grace. When you write put my old address, 2nd Bn., C Company, B.E.F., France, but not Army Post Office. Hoping to hear from you before long, I remain.

Your loving son,

STANLEY.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JULY 4TH, 1918.

SOMETHING WRONG HERE.

A few days ago Col. Machin, of the Military Service Branch of the Department of Justice, in a sensational interview, made the charge that the reason that more men had not been called out for service in Quebec was because the military authorities were not ready to take care of the recruits. Col. Machin said there were 11,000 men in the province ready to be called. Now, Lieut.-Col. Pinoche, of Military Headquarters, Montreal, comes back with the statement that the number of men reporting for overseas duty under the Military Service Act is much less than was expected and less than can be accommodated by the military authorities. The government should explain the two diametrically opposite statements. There is something wrong somewhere. It is certain that the number of men being placed in the army from the province of Quebec is not yet as large as it should be. The Department of Justice, which is responsible for calling out the men for service says it has been unable to order recruits to report because the military authorities were unable to handle them; the Department of Militia, which is responsible for the training and equipping of the draftees after they have reported, say that they are handicapped because the number of men called out by the Department of Justice is much less than could be taken care of.

The people of Canada are waiting for an explanation. Both sides cannot be correct in their statements— in the meantime the only clear fact about the situation seems to be that Quebec is not providing enough men. Ontario has so far supplied approximately 28,000 under the Military Service Act; Quebec has only furnished 8,000 so far. The blame for the one-sided condition of affairs can no longer be laid at the doors of the people of Quebec; they are apparently loyally obeying the law. The fault lies either with the Department of Justice or the Department of Militia; each blame the other. Will some one in authority at Ottawa investigate at once and find out where the trouble lies.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

Canadians everywhere will rejoice with their neighbours to the south of the international boundary in their celebration to-day of the United States national holiday. Although the occasion is the aniversary of the signing of the declaration which separated the American colonies from England, it is a singular evidence of the close relationship in feleing and sentiment between the two nations that has grown steadily since the beginning of the war that the Fourth is to be publicly observed in Great Britain. His Majesty King George attended a baseball game between U.S. Army and Navy teams; the Stars and Stripes is flying is all parts of England to-day, and special services are being held in English churches, while a great Anglo-American fellowship meeting took place at Westminster Hall.

The United States deserves congratulations to-day on the second Fourth of July since America's entrance into the war. Although many difficulties have had to be surmounted our neighbours have done many big things in the year that has passed. One million United States troops have been sent overseas, and others are rapidly following, and hundreds of thousands more young men are in training. America's troops at the front have had their baptism of fire, and the story of Santigny, Seicheprey and Chateau Thierry is a story that revealed to the world the splendid fighting qualities of the United States soldier. In supplying munitions and food stuffs to the Allies America has done magnificent work. Our neighbors have helped to beat the German submarine campaign, not only by the splendid work of the United States navy, but by the surprisingly great output of the United States ship-building plants. In the past six months one million tons of shiping have been launched in American yards, and this fine showing promises to be surpassed in the coming year.

It is fitting that throughout all the Allied countries America's national festival is being observed to-day. The United States has achieved many things for the Allied cause in the past twelve months, and the exploits of the past are a most hopeful one for the future.

The Ottawa Journal-Press aptly describes Independence Day as "an epochal mark in world history, the mark of the complete rapprochement between England and the United States," while the British-American, published in Chicago, refers to the occasion in the following happy terms:

In 1918, with their armies camping together on the fields of a common struggle for liberty, Britons and Americans will observe the great day of old-time triumph and disaster with mutual enthusiasm. The British King, whose tyrannical predecessor forced his colonial subjects into rebellion and made possible this Commonwealth, will attend London's celebration, and there will be many others in various parts of the British Isles. In some places, the people will hold Thanksgiving services, and, while it is doubtful if they will sing the "Star Spangled Banner," they will more than likely join in the joyful chorus of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Nothing that the war has brought about is more to humanity's advantage than this linking together of the two great democratic nations. The broad Atlantic will continue to divide us, but nothing else; notwithstanding the thousands of miles of ocean we shall be in closer unity, concord and fraternity than any other peoples. The Kaiser and his long line of criminal colleagues of many different breeds and tongues, have done their best and worst to make Britannia and Columbia deadly enemies. They have miserably failed. Republic and Empire, each the most powerful and most enlightened under Heaven, join hands and hearts on this July 4 with a fervour and loyalty that shall grow stronger with the coming years of universal Freedom.

SAVING THE CHILDREN.

Basing its remarks on the death of a youngster who sustained fatal injuries in an attempt to board a moving motor car, the London Adcertizer suggests that some attention should be paid to the instruction of children at school as to the danger of this practice and other similar habits. Says the Advertizer:

Perhaps the public school curriculum is full to overflowing now, but it does seem that a few hours each month might be devoted to teaching the youngsters the necessity of abstraining from dangerous habits on the streets and of taking all possible care of their lives and limbs. It might be worth while neglecting some of the present set studies for this more essential one. The responsibility rests on the minister of education, the inspectors and the teachers and is shared, in at least equal part, by the parents of the city.

Our contemporary's point is well taken. There is need of such instruction in Peterborough, where children will persist in trying to catch rides on motor cars and waggons, and where they are taking daily chances of being killed or badly injured. The street is not the proper playground for little ones, and fortunately the efforts of the Playgrounds Association render it unnecessary for children to have to depend on the road as a place for recreation.

The Advertizer points out to drivers of all kinds of vehicles that they too have a responsibility in connection with protecting the children. "Many drivers are good-natured and fond of kiddies and do not like to refuse the venturesome, who jump on their vehicles, the fun of a ride," says our contempopory. "At the same time they are missing an opportunity to do some valuable missionary work. If each one would stop when hce sees a boy attempting to board the moving car or waggon and tell him firmly that he must stay off, the youngsters would learn to stop their reckless efforts in time."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Latest German report on the sinking of the Llandovery Castle is that the hospital ship was sent to the bottom by a mine. This statement is more ridiculous than the claim that the steamer was carrying American aviators.

THE FIFTH GEORGE.

(New York Times.)

If Thackery were alive, his pen would trace with that simplicity which was the highest art, the story of the Fifth George eating buckwheat cakes with his Queen in the American canteen in his capital. How brief and tactful the notice of their coming: "The King and Queen desire to call at the Eagle Hut, and will be there in a few minutes." Unannounced, they drive up, little George in his snug uniform, and carrying his faithful stick, almost a measure of himself; Mary, a size larger, motherly, plain, wholesome, unfashionable in her dress, simple in her manner, looking like any other decent Englishwoman who had four well-brought-up boys and a girl a copy of herself.

They climb the steps into a hall, where the soldiers and sailors, British, Canadian, American, are playing games, writing letters, singing camp songs, eating with the sauce of hunger, feeling at home in a sympathetic atmosphere—a free-and-easy place of many sounds and laughter, of liberty and equality. George and Mary are ordinary visitors, come to disturb no one, to mingle with all, to be friendly. No distinction with them; and, above all, no ceremony. They want to eat an American dish and sit down with the boys at one of the big tables covered with oilcloth "Buckwheat cakes is the best thing we have," says the host, a little flustered by the visit. And buckwheat cakes it was, with New England maple syrup. George and Mary clear their plates with gusto, vote the unfamiliar griddle cakes delicious, and then go the rounds of kitchens and dormitories, departing like people who had had a good time.

It was the most natural thing for George, every inch a democrat, to do. On the Fourth of July (will George III turn in his grave) the King is to "pitch out" the first baseball in a game between American teams. Arlie Latham, one of our most unabashed diamond heroes, has been coaching George in the right delivery and probably the King is a bit nervous about his performance. He is certainly more concerned than Arlie Latham, a king of baseball comedians, and always a complete stranger to embarrassment.

"We kings must stick together," said Charles of Austria to a royal pal in the same boat the other day. George of England has another version: "We democrats must stick together," and he means what he says. His days are spent in doing his bit, like one of his subjects, which should really read fellow-citizens. A busy King is George. He is seen everywhere and at all times of day and night; in camps and hospitals, "over there" as well as in England; sometimes in munition factories; at reviews, at receptions to soldiers of the Allies, at any function where his presence and a kindly word may count. He loves a hero as much as anyone; likes to talk to Tommy Atkins, and has a great desire to be hospitable to the fighting men from overseas. Heart and soul he is in the war all day long. He does not want to be reminded of his German forbears. John Bull is George's ideal of a human man. Perhaps he has a slight preference for the navy, in which he was brought up, over the army; but he would never show it. In the navy George was taught equality and how to be a man, and he has never felt like a traditional king since he assumed the crown. Pat O'Brien of Momence, Ill., the aviator who escaped from German captivity, says that George, to whom he told the story of his adventures by request, is one of the most democratic men he ever met; which must be true, for Pat talked to George without a hitch for an hour and a quarter and was never more at ease in his life.

Edward VII was born to be a royal statesman and negotiate alliances on the Continent which should prove the safeguard of the British Empire. It is just as certain that George the Sailor Prince was born to show that a King can be a genuine democrat and lover of liberty in the great war to preserve the British Empire and to save the world from autocracy and odious Kultur.

Bobby's Idea.

In a family where Bobby, the eight-year-old, was an intense admirer of his father, a dyspeptic diner came to dinner.

When the duck was being carved the father said to the visitor:

"What part do you prefer?"

"I never eat duck, thank you," came the reply.

The hostess had some cold roast chicken brought in and offered.

"No, thank you," said the man, "I never eat chicken."

Some cold roast beef was next brought in.

"No, thank you, I never eat roast beef," came the reply.

By this time the host was visibly nonplussed what next to offer his guest. Bobby was quick to see it. His temper had risen at what he considered a slight upon his father.

A Long Pedigree.

Sir William Lever, the well known soap manufacturer, once remarked that when he got his baronetcy, the college of heralds had no difficulty about his pedigree.

"All they had to do," he said, "was to take away the 'L' in front of my name and the 'ever' at the end, and there it was! Ever!"—London Answers.

So Say We All.

"What kind of music suits your taste?"

"Well, I'm not particular. I like it either rare or well done."—Lippincott's.

GRAPE JUICE

(Hamilton Spectator.)

Are not the ladies—doubtless with the best intention in the world—overdoing it somewhat with their temperance propaganda? When unfermented grape-juice is put under the ban, in order to avoid the appearance of evil, things are going pretty far. Presumably it is its name which is objectionable; the grape and the wine, it is true have certain Bacchanalian associations. But why dispense with a refreshing and wholesome beverage on this score? What's in a name? Grape juice by any other name would taste as well. Let it be called, say, anti-booze," and in this way, while still retaining a pleasant and perfectly harmless drink, the great temperance cause would get further advertisement.

OF COURSE WATER IS MEANT

(London Advertizer.)

Mrs. Thurston, who presided at a meeting of the W. C. T. U. at Hamilton, said she thought the union should avoid The Appearance of Evil, and warned the ladies to be very careful regarding grape juice, probably because of its resemblance in color to wine.

Yet, with every courteous impulse we would remind Mrs. T. that she has been seen to drink copiously of a liquid that Looked Very Much Like Gin.

The Sap of Spring.

When the sap of spring is bursting the fetters of winter the general human heart beats high. A few of us philosophers receive amid the rich but sober tints of autumn a happiness that we would not exchange for any other season, but we are a minority, and small. The head of one of the most important departments at Washington, who thinks about the processes of mankind, has a theory that makes a regular curve of the relation of the seasons to the appetite for war. As the buds open, every nation thinks it is on the edge of victory. This curve rises for a while, begins to decline in the summer and gets well down in the autumn. The period therefore, when statesmen, if they had decided to make peace, could do it most easily, is from the days of goldenrod and autumn browns to just before the greening of the buds. The story of coal, a tragic story to the poor, helps this curve, but there is in it much of sheer poetry, independent of more solid things.—Norman Hapgood in Leslie's.

GUARD SHOT ONCE

And He Admits That the Mules Did the Rest.

Things Happened So Rapidly That Holdup Men Really Didn't Have a Chance to Take Aim, While Team Made a Record.

Even today in the Sierra Nevadas where little mining camps send out gold dust by stage to be carried from the nearest railway station to the San Francisco mint a shotgun messenger rides with the driver if there is a gold shipment in the box. The barrel of the gun is shortened for the sake of convenience in handling in close quarters, and its efficiency for its particular work is not lessened, as it is used only to quiet a robber who has suddenly appeared close by the side of the treasure stage with the laconic command, "Throw down the box!"

The messenger, as he is called where he is known, never guard or gun man, carries his gun across his knees where danger seems light, or lightly in his hands passing through bad spots. His job is to shoot anyone so careless as to step out from behind a tree or rock to the side of the stage, and shoot before the intruder gets the drop. Mountain folk who want to take a stage between stations make themselves conspicuous in the middle of the road before the stage rolls into sight. That is the safe way.

If a messenger fails to see a robber before the latter has him covered the box is thrown down—usually. There was one instance where the rule was not followed, which old stage drivers in the Sierra Nevadas tell about today. On a stage out from Bodie was a shipment of bullion consigned to the Carson mint. The messenger was alert, his sawed-off shotgun lightly balanced in his hands passing the danger spots, or resting on his knees where the cover seemed to be too thin to conceal a robber by the side of the road.

On one good stretch the messenger gripped his gun between his knees while both hands sought in the pockets of his heavy coat for the makings. The unexpected happened; out of a patch of straggly sage brush two men leaped, one to the bridle of the off leader mule, one to the off side of the stage. They had the drop on both messenger and driver.

The messenger thought one-quarter of a second—he was precise in telling that part of the story—and then without having to invite a bullet by moving his gun or hand, he pulled the trigger of the right barrel. So many things happened in the remaining three-quarters of the first second after the command that they make a long and lovely story as one listens to an old driver tell it today.

The short of the story is that the shot shredded the ears of the leaders, and generally speaking those mules did the rest. The six mules bounded ahead, startled and indignant. The robber at the bridle was kicked in rapid succession by the off leader, off swing and off wheeler, so his pistol aim was not good, and the robber at the stage wheel was run over by the rear wheels, and his aim was not good. The six mules, the driver has sworn to this, did the next mile in four minutes flat, and there was no time when more than two stage wheels were on the road at the same time.

"It was sure some lucky escape," the messenger admitted, "but I never truly made up with them lead mules. They never seemed to relish me after that little sawed-off spoke to them. Touchy sort of critters, mules is, anyhow."

ONLY CHANGE IN MACHINERY

Hand Knitting Now Done In Exactly the Same Manner as It Was Many Centuries Ago.

There are a few touches of humor in the countryside revival of knitting, such as the over-large and the envious feminine group about the lady who, with practiced skill, deftly turns the heel of a sock, but behind it all is a fine display of service, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. When you see a sweater or muffler in process of evolution it may interest you to know that the work is being done just about as it was when the art was in its infancy. There have been great improvements in knitting machinery, however, and the first of them was directly due to a somewhat common malady—unreciprocated love.

The Rev. William Lee of Cambridge university, as the story goes, was deeply smitten with a maiden of his native town, Woodborough, Nottinghamshire, but in spite of his ardent wooing could make no impression. The fair one calmly kept on with her knitting, then the common occupation of English women.

In revenge Reverend William swore he'd invent a machine which would destroy the market for hand work. He kept his word, but Queen Elizabeth refused to grant a patent and to give her financial support because too many of her subjects would be deprived of their means of livelihood. So the inventor took his machine to France. This story may be entirely fanciful, but in 1589 William Lee did revolutionize hosiery making by producing the knitting frame or stocking frame. American names in the list of those who have labored to perfect knitting machinery are W. C. Gist, Almet Reid and Griswold.

Dropped Within Reach.

"Do you like your eggs dropped?"

"You bet. I was delighted when they came down twenty cents."

"New Quebec" Shows Its Spirit

THERE are many hopeful signs at the present time in connection with the military draft in Quebec. The political newspapers now speak hopefully of "A New Quebec," and a sermon by the parish priest of Terrebonne, in which he advised his flock to submit to the military law and go to the support of Britain and France has been the object of special mention throughout the Dominion. Simultaneously, wide publicity has been given to the words of Sir Horace Archambault when addressing the students of the Roman Catholic Laval University at Quebec. Sir Horace announced that the faculty would regard certain oral examinations as having been passed, in order that the students might follow their comrades to the battle front. He knew that a number of them were anxious to get away, and, reminding them that the eyes of the world were on French Canada, he ventured the prophecy that the province would have no reason to blush on account of the young men before him. It is worthy of note that the students cheered for the King, as they marched off to the barracks. Similar scenes have occurred at other educational institutions in the French province, and exhortations to the people to do their duty by Canada, the Empire, and civilization have been general. There is every likelihood, therefore, that, in response to the amended Military Service Act, the young men of Quebec will prove worthy of their gallant comrades in the 22nd French-Canadian Battalion, which has won for itself an excellent reputation on the Western front.

It is interesting to note that this change in the attitude of French-Canadians toward the law of compulsory service has been indorsed by a section of the French-Canadian press. The well-known Montreal paper, La Patrie, taking up the cry, raised by the Unionist newspapers, of "A New Quebec," makes the remarkable statement that if at the beginning of the war the Federal authorities had taken the means to suppress those who preached sedition and sowed the seeds of hatred to England, there would have been no cause to-day to speak of "A New Quebec," and no friction between the two elements of the population. No excuse, it protests, would then have been possible for the assertion that the Province of Quebec was not doing its duty, and that the French-Canadians were slackers. It concludes with the cheery assurance that "the Canadiens will make as good soldiers as their fellow-citizens of the English province, and they will know how to fight gallantly."

Notwithstanding the fact that, according to L'Evenement, "around the Vatican there are very influential enemies of England, France, and who have their correspondents at Montreal and Quebec," the French-Canadians generally have changed their outward attitude toward compulsory service. However little the military policy of Canada may be to their liking, they have wisely decided to accept the inevitable and bow to the popular will. In a democracy, it is the will of the majority that should prevail. Toward this end the marked abatement of the French-Canadian Nationalist propaganda must have considerably helped. The French-Canadians have usually shown an ingrained respect for law and authority when left to themselves, and it is a most encouraging sign, which will be greeted with satisfaction throughout the Dominion and beyond the seas, that some of their leaders have voluntarily come forward and impressed upon all the obligation of obedience to the state. What French Canada is evidently realizing now, in common with the English-speaking provinces, is the urgent duty which devolves upon every individual in the nation. It wanted but an appeal to the Canadien's more solid qualities and his deeper currents of feeling to bring the consciousness of that duty to the fore.

Romance Hung on Wire.

Young Cupid pirouetted for some time back and forth on the telephone wire from the Military Hospitals Command at No. 1 Queen's Park to the Central Military Convalescent Hospital in Toronto. Sergt. G. D. Allen, the orderly sergeant at the latter place, had daily to converse, and often argue with Miss Hazel Constable in the Daily Orders Department, M.H.C.C., but neither of the young people knew each other.

But in these heated arguments lay the beginning of the romance. One day Sergt. Allen came in person to adjust a difficulty. A few weeks ago the orderly sergeant and the daily orders stenographer were married, and Sergt. Allen has given up the idea of returning to his home in England, as he heretofore had intended to do. He is a veteran, and is still under treatment for illness contracted while on active service.

May Issue From Canada.

The possibility that the new postal zone law might make it profitable for American magazine publishers to issue their periodicals from Canadian soil has been suggested by Charles Johnson Post, director of the Publishers' Advisory Board. The board appointed a committee to study the Canadian postal laws in connection with the postal treaty between the United States and Canada, which does not bring Canadian periodicals under the effect of the new zoning regulations which were put into the revenue law.

Ladies of the Playgrounds Association Met Labor Men

For the first time in their history as an organization the members of the Trades Council last night received a deputation of ladies, Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mrs. A. Mowat appearing before them on behalf of the Playgrounds Association. The ladies were accompanied by President Roberts and W. George Henderson of the Association.

Mrs. Mowat explained how the work of the association could be extended if more funds were available to secure the services of additional supervision. The gentlemen on the delegation also made short addresses, both giving accounts of the work of such associations in the United States.

When the delegation withdrew the members of the council unanimously expressed the opinion that no delegation ever heard in Labour Hall had expressed the case in hand as clearly and ably as had Mesdames Mowat and Morris in their addresses. It was financial considerations alone that prevented the Council from making a grant to the association, but nearly all of the members will contribute, and every man of them is interested in the movement.

The coal question was discussed again and Delegate M. L. Campbell was selected to attend the coming meeting of Fuel Commissioner Edgar with the dealers.

A resolution was unanimously adopted protesting against honorary titles in Canada and expressing disappointment with Capt. Burnham for failing to vote against that custom when the question was up in Parliament at the recent session.

A Waterproof Match.

An inventor who is said to have once won a large prize from the Belgian Government for inventing a non-phosphorous safety match, has recently developed a match which, he claims, is waterproof, wind proof, and also foolproof. After tests made by United States authorities, orders have been placed for a quantity of these matches, which will be especially serviceable in lighting signal rockets, certain types of bombs, and on shipboard in bad weather. Water does not harm them and in the face of a strong wind they will burn for five seconds at least. As soon as a blaze is extinguished the ash is cool, and the burned match can be thrown anywhere without danger of starting a fire. Because of this feature the new article is called foolproof.

The Late Mrs. Campbell.

Deceased lady had been all that a wife could be to her husband during their happy married life. Mrs. Campbell was loved by all who knew her. When in health and strength she assisted in all patriotic work. She was a devout Christian lady and a kind neighbour.

Two sons, Thomas A. at home, and Lieut. Arthur Campbell, who was recently wounded, and now convalescing in England, and one daughter, Miss Margaret Campbell, one brother Mr. John Walsh of Bartlettsville, Okla., and two sisters, Mrs. Henry Fee, of Vancouver, Wash. and Mrs. Isaac Eyres of eL Mars, Iowa, are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate mother and sister.

The funeral to St. Paul's cemetery on Thursday was largely attended. Rev. W. H. Higgs conducted the services at the house, assisted by Rev. Capt. Spencer. Mr. Higgs spoke in highest terms of the splendid Christian virtues of Mrs. Campbell and of her abiding faith in her Saviour. He had visited her on several occasions during her illness, and never heard her complain, although she suffered a great deal at times. She was pleased that she had a son fighting for the Empire and felt that he was only doing his duty, and although she would have been delighted to have had him come before she departed this life, she was confident that she would see her family in the better land. Rev. Capt. Spencer also spoke feelingly and appreciatively of the deceased and took charge of the services at the grave. Many beautiful floral tributes were placed on the casket by loving friends.

The pallbearers were six nephews, viz., Messrs. Herbert, Harry and Ormond Ball, Fred Campbell, Alfred and Wilbert Walsh.

SERGT.-MAJOR MILLS LEAVES FOR OVERSEAS

Lieut.-Col. J. Mills of this city has received word that his son, Samuel V. Mills, who has been promoted to the rank of Sergt.-Major, has reached an Atlantic Port on his way overseas. He formerly held a commission in the 57th Regiment, but reverted to the rank of private in the 135th Battalion in order to get overseas. He was retained in Canada for instructional purposes and in this connection completed a course in Toronto in bayonet and physical work. He subsequently contracted a bad case of rheumatism and his desire to get over to France received another set back.

ed to Canada and Sergeant Andrews was summoned to Kingston to receive it from some high Canadian official, but at that time, a few weeks ago, he was too ill to leave home. Hence, the parchment was sent by registered post to his home, and his deed and the honour France had paid him seemed doomed to oblivion in his own country and among his own people. However, the recent developments leaked out. Reeve Squire and other gentlemen, among them Judge Huycke, decided that there should be some public recognition of this Peterborough boy's gallantry, and their efforts were realized in the splendid meeting in the Norwood Town Hall last night.

It is learned that Sergeant Andrews was most reluctant to appear at this reception. Reeve Squire urged him, and his father and his uncle, Mr. James Andrews, persuaded him to attend; but it was almost nine o'clock when he arrived, just as the Norwood committee were growing uneasy and anxious.

A Fine Type.

Sergeant Andrews is thirty-one years old. He enlisted in 1914 in the 10th Battalion at Empress, a small place in Alberta, and left Calgary for Valcartier in the first months of the war. He went to France with the first Canadian contingent, and after that there is a hiatus until June, 1916, for Sergeant Andrews, Judge Huycke said, is the most reticent soldier he had ever met.

It is not soldierly he maintains to discuss what he did. Only after considerable questioning, Judge Huycke said, did he extract the information that it was at Zillebeke that Sergeant Andrews won the Medaille Militaire. This was a cue sufficient to the Judge who well remembered June, 1916, and it was from letters and despatches describing those critical days of the fiercest fighting that he was able to review the importance of the great defense and counter stroke the Canadians made at that time.

Of medium height, slim and lithe, Sergeant Andrews gives the impression of great energy rather than of strength. Modest and retiring as he is, he was quite self-possessed when he made a brief speech of reply to Judge Huycke. "A hero and one of nature's gentlemen," His Honour said of him, and there was no rhetoric in the reference.

Dr. Ford, of Norwood, called the meeting to order, and after the presentation of a ring to Captain Neilson, of the 93rd Battalion, by the 40th Northumberland Regt. Chapter of the I.O.W.E., by Mrs. B. Squire, Sergeant Andrews was called to receive the framed parchment of the Legion of Honour. Rev. N. H. Noble translated the French inscription as follows:

The French Republic
Military Medal

For Valor and Good Conduct.

In the name of the President of the Republic, the Grand Chancellor of the National Order of the Legion of Honour has delivered the present certificate to Sergeant Percy Edward Andrews, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion, Decorated with the Military Medal by a decree of the 2nd of July, 1917.

Signed

Judge Huycke's Address.

"This should be, and no doubt is, a proud evening for the citizens of Norwood and its vicinity," were Judge Huycke's opening words. "I don't think there has ever been so much sorrow in the world as to-day, but there is the obverse side. There has never been so much heroism in the old world, nor so much pride in the gallantry of her sons. If we have been proud of our men who have fought and died in the great war over yonder, there comes an exaltation of pride when we realize that your boy returns home honoured in such a signal way as Sergeant Percy Edward Andrews. There should not be a person in the county who is not filled with pride and elation with the distinction Sergeant Andrews has won."

Judge Huycke mentioned the difficulty with which he had obtained the bare facts from the young man. "I am proud to know him and I look forward ot knowing him better in the future." Continuing, His Honour recalled the battle of Zillebeke. "Sergeant Andrews won his honours there on June 2nd, 1916, and if ever there was a day or an hour in which the future of the world and of Christianity hung in the balance, it was during those days. If ever the scales of the war went down it was on that 2nd of June. Before daybreak came a hellish fusilade of shells, bombs, mortars and other concentrated fire by which the enemy sought to force their way through. It was not many miles in that Ypres salient to the Channel ports. If the Germans had got there where would England be to-day? Thank God they didn't. Many of our boys were wounded and killed, but a stand was made, thanks to the bravery of such boys as we have here in Sergeant Andrews. The enemy didn't go far. That Canadian stand continued until the 15th of June, when every acre of ground was recovered. It was due to the valour and heroism of your boys and my boys that the way to the coast was blocked.

Led His Men.

Sergeant Andrews was not wounded, but all his officers had fallen around him. It was then when the line was shaken that he stood in the breach, rallied his man and held the ground though the hosts of hell came against them.

"You are here to do honour to Sergeant Andrews, but you are not the first. He has been honoured in England and in Canada, but he has not been honoured in Canada as he should have been."

Judge Huycke remarked that it was characteristic of the French nation to resognize the gallant deeds not only of her sons, but also of the men of other lands who had rendered her surpassing service. The French Government heard of Sergeant Andrews' work at Zillebeke, and a resolution was passed by the Legion of Honour awarding him the military medal. Later he was paraded and with all the impressiveness of the formal presentation Sergeant Andrews was decorated.

"The name of Andrews should be honoured in this county as it never was before, for no person has brought greater honour to it." Judge Huycke recalled the story associated with Napoleon's assertion "Nothing is too good for a French soldier." France recognized Sergeant Andrews' deeds of heroism and was not slow to show it; and the message comes to-night that nothing is too good for our brave Canadian soldier.

The certificate of the Legion is here, but the name of Andrews is written in the archives of fame in Paris. When future generations read the names of the men whom France has cited as her greatest the name of Percy Edward Andrews, Norwood, Ontario, Canada, will be there enrolled with the others. Are we proud of him? I am proud indeed to be here, to stand before him and to greet him as one of nature's heroes and gentlemen. He has been highly honoured. You canot honour him sufficiently all the days of his life. When I meet him, I shall be proud to take off my hat to him, as to one whose presence I am not worthy to stand."

Presenting the framed certificate to Sergeant Andrews Judge Huycke said: "I take great pride and pleasure in handing you this certificate, and hope that those who come after you will be as proud of you as they ought to be."

Sergeant Andrews.

Sergeant Andrews was given an ovation when he began a brief reply. "It is impossible for me to say anything," he remarked in a soft low voice. "I didn't realize the value of the medal when it was pinned on my breast; but if I had a houseful of them I wouldn't take them all for the lives of the poor boys who are gone. Though many were not decorated, I believe they had earned and deserved decorations. No matter who the soldier was that was through those battles he deserves all the honour you can give him. I want to say that I do not feel above any soldier because of what I received, for I feel that the men who were through that game deserve the best honour you can give them. Only a few of us got these. It looks a little like the prizes we used to get in popcorn bags, but it takes me back to that battlefield, and whether I won it or not, I don't know, but they gave it to me."

Sergeant Andrews spoke with what seemed a preoccupation as if he was back with the boys who fell at Zillebeke, and as if they owned a share in the decoration that was awarded to him.

"I am glad to be able to say that I have come home alive, and my prayer is that all the boys over there now may come back safe. I hope the day is not far distant when I may look at this certificate with the world at peace."

There was not a reference to the action in which he won the Medaille. Sergeant Andrews effaced himself from his remarks, as completely as thoughts of himself were obviously absent from his mind. And this trait deepened the unconscious appeal with which his manner and presence affected the audience. Even without the honour France conferred upon him, he is a splendid type if Canadian manhood, and worthy of the encomiums paid him last night.

Other Speakers.

Short addresses were also made by Mr. F. D. Kerr, who congratulated Captain Neilson and Sergeant Andrews, and also referred to George Aboud, a Havelock Assyrian, back from France, who could not be located for last night's meeting; Mr. G. W. Hatton, Mr. J. B. Pearse, Mr. R. I. Stuart, Mr. Jas. L. Thompson, M.P.P.; Rev. A. Mansell Irwin, and others.

Selections by the Norwood band under the direction of Mr. A. Brault, interspersed the addresses. Their playing was warmly praised by Mr. Hatton who incidentally mentioned their selections in his address.

Master S. Williams sang two numbers very acceptably.

Dr. Ford, one of Norwood's oldest citizens, proved a capital chairman. He said he was substituting for Reeve Squire who encourages the town band by himself playing one of the horns.

The meeting was closed with the National Anthem and cheers for Sergeant Andrews and Captain Neilson.

LAWN SOCIAL AT FAIRVIEW.

Local Speakers Were Present — The Receipts.

A large crowd attended Fairview Methodist church last night on the occasion of a supper and lawn social under the auspices of the local Red Cross Society. The weather was somewhat uncertain, but it caused no inconvenience. The supper and entertainment was furnished in the large closed shed, which was decorated and lighted very suitably. A patriotic address was delivered by Mr. Joseph Wearing of Peterborough and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., and Rev. Mr. Cruikshank all gave short, appropriate speeches.

Music was rendered by Rev. Mr. McKee, Mrs. Clayton Telford and others. The proceeds amounted to $125. Rev. Mr. McKee closes his pastorate in Smith this week.

EGGS THAT ARE NOT SOLD BY WEIGHT

Mrs. G. W. Nicholls, of Otonabee, brought an egg into the "Examiner" to-day that weighed nearly 8 ounces. The shell is somewhat softer than the usual hen's egg, and it is but imperfectly formed. Mrs. Nicholls has a flock of White Wyandottes and has had many eggs weighing a quarter of a pound, but none as large as this one.

Miles Urges An American Armed Force For Russia

Military Instructors Could Raise Vast Force For Allies, He Declares in Letter—American Military Expert Addresses Communication to Member of United States Senate.

WOULD HASTEN THE WAR'S END

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 29. — With events in Russia racing toward a climax the attitude of the United States toward that unfortunate nation is an all absorbing topic whenever army and navy men meet. The concensus of these fighing men is that help should be extended from this side of the water.

Among the prominent exponents of the movement to send armed forces to Russia's aid is Lieutenant General Nelson A Miles, retired. This became known when it was learned he had written the following letter to United States' Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois:

"We owe that nation and pepole a great debt of gratitude that should no longer remain unpaid. They are entitled to our deepest sympathy. They have placed more men in the field during this greatest of all wars and suffered a larger number of casualties than any other country. That country, with a population of one hundred and eighty millions of people, has a physical strength of thirty-six millions of strong, brave men capable of bearing arms. To permit them to go out of the theatre of war will be a most serious misfortune, if not a disastrous and fatal error.

"As we are now sending an army of approximately two millions of men to the support of France, England and Italy and billions of money, we should give strong material support to Russia. It is the greatest man power nation, and we need not send a large army there, but for every one hundred thousand or one million Russians we put into the field there we save the enormous expense of transporting that number of our men to the field, returning them after the war and supporting them for thirty or forty years on the pension roll after the war is over; at the same time we keep a corresponding number of our men in our own industries at home.

Send Russian-Americans.

"It is, therefore, most earnestly recommended that we send a sufficient force to that country, that shall be the nucleus or skeleton of a powerful army. The force should be selected with great care, composed of efficient American officers and sergeants, recruited as fast as possible from districts of our country occupied by the Russian race; men who have served in the Russian army, or descendants of Russian ancestry and who speak the Russian language. Our nation is the only one of the Allies in condition to accomplish this most important object. A body of twenty-five thousand men would be capable of being expanded into an army of a half million of men, or a force of fifty thousand men could be expanded into an army of one million and every officer and non-commissioned officer, from the highest general down to the junior sergeant, would be of those going from this country.

"What we pay one soldier would equal the pay of twenty-eight Russian soldiers. Hence the economy of this proposition.

"The importance of time: Undoubtedly before this force could reach Vladivostok the status of the Russian government will be decided, the character of that government must, and undoubtedly will, be determined by the Russian people. A proclamation should be issued that the American government, with its allies, is moving to the protection and support of the people of Russia, that they are not actuated by the lust of conquest or acquisition of territory, but that they come bearing the banners of liberty and liberal civil government to the liberty loving people of Russia, and call upon all classes to unite with the forces of the United States and our allies against the common enemy of civilization.

Would Hasten Wars End.

"As the question of transporting a strong body of troops and war material is an important problem, it is well to consider the fact that our government is now building a large of ships on the Pacific Coast, at San Francisco, Cal.; Portland, Ore.; Seattle, Wash., and other points. A sufficient number of these could be utilized to transport all the troops and the large amount of war material required for this military enterprise. Additional ships can be purchased. Such a measure should have the approval and support of the allied powers and ample funds to insure complete success.

"In urging prompt action in behalf of Aussia we but add our voice to the appeal of all others who have been in Russia and the manifest sentiment of the American people and press, and with action taken in her behalf not only for the altruistic motives, but to prevent indefinite prolongation of this most destructive and deplorable of all wars. The inexhaustible natural resources of field and mine in Russia, which Germany is fast organizing for her own use, and the men there whom she will soon force to fight for her, will far exceed in potential strength for the Central Powers the potential strength of the United States to the Allies."

GUNNER GERALD GRAHAM

Word has been received by Mrs. R. Graham, 675 Stewart Street, that her son Gunner Gerald D. Graham, 300,411, has received a gunshot wound in the face and neck. He is the third son of Mrs. Graham, and has one brother, Pte. M. C. Graham also in France. Gunner Graham is in the hospital at Boulogne. He was a member of the 33rd Battery.

GAVE UP GEMS FOR SOLDIER-SON PHOTO

Mother Was Glad to Restore the Jewels for Picture

BAGS WERE MIXED.

New York Woman Had Just Returned From Camp Upton.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Mrs. J. Harrison Thompson, of Chicago, and Mrs. Jane Riley, of New York, sat side by side in the waiting room of the Pennsylvania terminal here. Each had a small black bag.

In Mrs. Thompson's bag were $25,000 in Government bonds, $6,500 in cash, and all kinds of diamond jewellery. It inventoried $71,000 altogether. In Mrs. Riley's bag were a photograph of her son Dennis in a soldier's uniform, a purse containing eight cents and the remnants of a lunch.

When the Pennsylvania Limited was called Mrs. Thompson picked up a black bag and started for the gate. About the same time Mrs. Riley, having rested after her trip to Camp Upton, picked up a black bag and started for Seventh Avenue. When Mrs. Thompson reached the gate she opened the bag to take out her tickets.

"My diamonds," she shrieked.

Station employees quickly mobilized. A little amateur sleuthing led them to Mrs. Riley, walking wearily toward Seventh Avenue. She was indignant when asked to open the bag she carried, but complied with the request.

"Oh, where is my Denny's picture?" she cried.

Explanations followed, each woman was given a receipt by the stationmaster and Mrs. Thompson caught her train.

"What are diamonds compared with Denny's picture?" demanded Mrs. Riley as she handed a street car conductor five of the eight cents in her shabby purse.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

GRACE NOTES.

Queen Victoria was a pupil of Czerny. Mendelssohn also supervised a part of her musical education.

In the olden days when Jerusalem flourished as a city music was a prominent feature in the life of the Jews.

—:—

If we are going to make musicians of boys and girls, why not interest them first in music and then suggest that they learn to express music on some instrument?

—:—

A "Sarabande" is a slow dance of Spanish origin in which the second beat is long. The melody of the sarabande often has a melancholy coloring.

—:—

Never put yourself in the position that when company comes you have to apologize for the piano keys being sticky or unclean—or for the piano's needing to be tuned.

—:—

There is an old saying "bad men have no songs." The constantly increasing interest in music among the masses of this continent is a tremendous influence for improving the national life in our country and that of our neighbours

—:—

Sometimes popular taste is basically sounder than that of the highly educated. A greatly cultivated taste often leads to the admiring of musical complexity and mere cleverness to the exclusion of simplicity and a natural enjoyment. Never let musical development run away with you in that way.

Choral societies should combine to erect a Handel Memorial, says a Glasgow paper, for he has saved more situations in the choral world than all the other composers put together. When in doubt, difficulty or danger, Handel's "Messiah" is the thing — there is always an audience for it, and an interested audience at that.'

"When along in February I get stale from too much serious music," says Pierre Key, music critic on the New York World, "there is nothing that will swing me back into form like so called popular music. I think the proof of the value of popular music is the extent to which it is figuring in this war. Men go over the top singing a song and in training camps light music is giving added zest to our potential fighters."

MUSIC MAKES PEOPLE LAW-ABIDING.

Does music keep people out of jail? It has often been said in print that music was brought into the world to uplift and beautify our hundrum mechanical lives. A public school principal regrets that his teachers are only giving one and a half hours a week to the study of music. He regrets this because he says through music and its educational value young people become better citizens, more useful members of society, and more efficient servants of the State.

But now a man comes forward and submits figures to show that musicians give the jails a wide berth. Out of somewhere about 150,000 professional musicians in the U. S. it s said there are only 15 in the nine largest penitentiaries throughout the republic. This makes a good showing when the corresponding figures are considered—39 out of only 57,000 bankers in these penitentiaries; 33 out of 115,000 lawyers; 22 out of 150,000 physicians, and 6 out of 35,000 painters or artists. It begins to look as if music keeps you out of jail, or at least helps to.

MUSIC AS NECESSARY AS FOOD.

Music is the universal language, the most widespread form of entertainment in the world. The savage hardly knows why it pleases him, but it is as necessary to him as eating. In our modern civilization music marks its devotees with a culture given only in a lesser degree by the other arts. Its charm to the learned or the ignorant is not ephemeral, but is as enduring as the human race itself. It appeals equally to the mind, the imagination and the emotions. It is a science as well as an art. To understand and appreciate it, to teach it to one's children, is a duy everyone owes to his own happiness. Music to-day is not a luxury; it is a necessity for every one of us.

SINGING HINTS.

Self consciousness is the one thing not wanted or needed in singing.

He who can entirely forget his body will sing greatly.

It is not the voice that needs to be changed, but a person's false beliefs about voice.

Hope, faith and courage are three necessary qualities about singing.

The only reason there are singers to-day is that the spirit of singing is so strong within their minds that all the material, mortal, man made methods of singing cannot quench their desire to sing. Such persons will sing in spite of methods.

Beware of false teachers.

Any thought which makes singing more difficult than singing must be cast out.

Until you mentally become master of your voice it will constantly play you false.

Ignore teachers who talk about "scientific methods" of singing.

WORLD NEEDS MUSIC.

"Should the struggle be unhappily prolonged it is clear that the nations' new needs must increasingly curtail its old pleasures. Music, however, cannot be shelved as an old pleasure," says a writer in the London Times. "It is well known that in the present campaign in France the indomitable spirit of one English officer saved hundreds of dead-tired men from capture chiefly by means of a toy drum (which he bought and played himself) and a penny whistle which was played) in turn by two dragoons till the men were marched ten miles into safety. With a donation for soldiers' concerts, kindly sent the other day from a man at general headquarters in France, came the remark: "It is like going without food to be for eight months without music." In a letter which reached me recently another man writes: My grandson, who came home seriously wounded and went to the front again yesterday, said that it (i.e., a certain concert) had bucked him up for the rest of the war. These are slender instances, perhaps, but they might be multiplied; and a straw will show which way the stream flows.

"Two facts are made clear about music at the moment: There is a new vitality discernible in the art itself and there is a new and increasingly urgent need for it. When a nation does no more than rise and stretch itself an increased circulation may be felt. The music of this stage may be no more than that of a gigantic yawn. But when the mind of the nation realizes that a huge task is thrust upon it, the energising processes are apparent in every vital department. These processes music shares to a preeminent degree probably because of its communicative nature. It is not only vital in itself; it is actually a vitalizing force. And the simple truth seems to be that an awakened nation will always choose to sing at its work and will be the happier and the more efficient for it."

WERE MORE PRISONERS THAN ATTACKING TROOPS

Italian Victory Added Thirty Per Cent. to Fighting Strength of Men Who Drove Austros Back—French and Italian Troops Take Part in Attack.

ENEMY SUFFERED HEAVY LOSSES

(Special to Examiner.)

Rome, July 4 — French and Italian troops carried out big raids on the Asiago Plateau, taking some prisoners.

By the capture of two heights between Valbella and Valfrenzela, the Italians have again got command of the whole of this series of hills, east of Asiago plateau, and between that region and the Brenta Valley.

The latest success effectually interferes with any serious menace in this direction, which was always possible so long as Valbella height was in their possession.

The chief features of the action were the entire superiority of the Italians over the Austrian artillery. The latter seemed incapable of either accurate counter-battery work or of interfering seriously with the movement of troops or stores on the lines of communications.

The prisoners are almost entirely composed of Germans, Austrians and Hungarians. Our attacking troops were actually fewer in number than the prisoners taken, which bears out the opinion expressed by a well-known general that the Italian victory had added thirty per cent. to their fighting value and detracted an equal amount from the Austrians.

The enemy's losses on June 29-30, were extremely heavy. It must be borne in mind that the opposing troops were among the pick of the Austrian army and commanded by a general in whom the greatest confidence was reposed.

Labrador Medical Mission

The following extracts from a letter received by Mrs. Wood of Peterborough, from the General Secretary, will be of interest to those who have contributed to the work of the Mission:

"Dear Mrs. Wood, — Your most welcome letter arrived yesterday, giving an account of the supplies sent Harrington Hospital this year from your branch. I think the record most wonderful and know that your thoughtfulness and generosity as a branch will be greatly appreciated on the coast. Please convey thanks and appreciation to the ladies who have taken such an interest, and particularly to the one who inspired the others and made possible such quantities of infants' clothing. Dr. West particularly mentioned that need in a recent letter.

Our General Treasurer Mr. Parker, has just notified me of the receipt of ten dollars "Brick" money. I enclose receipt herewith."

The Brick money referred to was given by children and young people in response to an appeal made by Dr. Grenfell. He asked the children of Canada to build a Home for homeless orphans of Labrador. Twenty-five cents pays for a brick in the new building at St. Anthony, and it is hoped that many children may have at least one brick in this Orphanage.

For the general work in Labrador three hundred dollars have been sent to the Treasurer, a larger amount than has been sent before. There have also been sent larger gifts of clothing, bedding, etc., than formerly. Two large boxes and two bales have been shipped to Quebec to be forwarded to Harrington Hospital, Canadian Labrador. The ladies of St. Paul's Church contributed one of the bales and the Ladies' Aid of Murray St. provided about fifty dollars' worth of infants' clothing. The committee wish to sincerely thank all who have helped in this good work. Considering the many demands on the purses and time of the workers we think this is a very creditable showing for the Peterborough Branch of the Mission.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I would like to say a few words about the baby show Monday at the Exhibition Grounds, and also I would like to ask how the judges judged the babies. There were no scales to weigh them, neither were they examined in any way, but in my opinion they were judged according to age, as the oldest got the prizes. The judges seemed to think the best babies were those that could jump around on their mother's laps, and I am sure a four-month-old baby couldn't do that. Now in my opinion they were not judged fairly, and I should say the proper way to judge would be by weighing them and their health and cleanliness. Thanking you for the space in your paper, I am,

A Dissatisfied Mother.

THE RESTAURANT QUESTION.

"All roads lead to Rome," may have been true in ancient times, but to say that all roads leading to Peterborough pass through Millbrook shows a woeful ignorance of local geography. Yet we have an alderman who in his "blue law" contention against the restaurants being allowed to keep open all day on Sunday, says that "it would not be a hardship to tourists who could stop at Millbrook and have a meal before coming to Peterborough." Imagine a tourist from, say, Norwood, having to pass through Peterborough to go to Millbrook to "have a meal before coming to Peterborough." There is no point in the compass that a tourist would come from on Sunday who would be required to pass through Millbrook in order to reach Peterborough. What next?

Yours truly,

Common Sense.

July 4th, 1918.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me a space in your valuable paper in answer to "Hayseed's" letter, in which he complains bitterly against the farmer and his treatment to the hired man. Feeling that his story is rather too thin and that it is high time for to take up our pen or a weapon of some kind in defence of the abuses heaped on the poor old farmer in those days. Who is the hayseed that has risen up against us, a man of experience, he claims, and no doubt 'great was the loss the farm sustained when he took to city and factory work. But he is willing to return and bring his little brother, also, if the farmer will but make it pleasant for him. Surely he does not expect that a farm is a picnic or a reading room. How does he expect us to get along without doing chores and milking cows. I wish first to remind "Hayseed" of a few things, and will then ask a few questions, which, if he will answer, may prove both amusing and edifying to us older hayseeds at least. I would say that few farmers work ten hours in the field and very few except a milkman, keep more than from four to six cows to milk. How much more can he save in the city, and it is high cost of living paying 10 cents for a quart of buttermilk to drink. Did the farmer keep him filling manure all summer as this job only lasts a few days and is often done after a rain and broken spells, when the weather was cool? And if he did all the chores he says, what was the farmer doing himself all this time? And if he took all this time, he to do the chores, he must have a slow coach indeed? Wonder he the hired man when this was enacted? A snapshot man at the farm and took some views ing asked by the farmer if he snapped the hired man while in tion, to which he replied that he ly had. Ah, replied the farscience is indeed a marvellous Now about the fellow getting ed for reading novels when he to have been asleep, must have somewhat of a novel himself. farmers have time to read all news in the Examiner. No we he let him go. No doubt no the oil he was burning, but more a lame excuse to get rid of this fellow. But I will let hayseed for the present, I haven't just got time to clip his wings, but wishes to reply I may perhaps back again.

Yours truly,

RUSSIAN PEOPLE WILL NEVER STAND FOR THE RESTORATION OF MONARCHY IN RUSSIA

Russian Socialists Deny Aiding the Grand Duke Michael—Movement in Siberia and Other Regions is a Popular One—Propaganda to Discredit Opposition.

WILL FIGURE IN BOLSHEVIKI.

(By Jos Shaplen—United Press)

STOCKHOLM, July 4.—A denial that Russian Socialists are aiding Grand Duke Michael in his counter revolutionary movement was made in a statement to the United Press today by Vassili Suchomolin of Tomsk, who was one of the representatives of the members of the right in the constituent assembly.

"According to private message received from Moscow," said Suchomolin, "The Bolsheviki are spreading a deliberate slander against the Russian Socialists, accusing them of a compact with Michael. I deny this insinuation."

MOVEMENT IS POPULAR

"I have just received an official report from the central executive committee of my party in Russia, stating that the movement in Siberia, the Urals and the Volga region is a popular one in which workmen and peasants have formed a mighty opposition to the Bolsheviki regiment of anarchy, treachery and terror. The monarchist groups haven't the slightest basis for claiming any part in this movement.

"The power of the constituent assembly is being reestablished everywhere in these regions, in which general amnesty has been offered all revolutionaries fighting the Bolsheviki. Clearly, this is propaganda to discredit the opposition.

"If the manifesto credited to the Grand Duke Really was issued, it can call out only a few. I do not believe the Grand Duke is foolish enough to issue such a statement.

"There is no doubt that certain reactionary groups in Russia and outside of Russia are working for restoration of the monarchy. The Russian people never will stand for it."

OVER TWO MILLION AMERICAN TROOPS WILL BE IN FRANCE BEFORE THE FIRST OF YEAR

American Officials See No Reason Why This Figure Shou N, Be Exceeded.

QUESTION OF SHIPS.

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 4. — More than 2,000,000 men will be in France before the first of the year if the present War Department hopes are realized, Secretary of War Baker makes no predictions lest unforeseen difficulties disappoint the nation. But other department officials said to-day they could see no reason at present why the 2,000,000 figure should not be exceeded—perhaps to the extent of 675,000 or more. To do this it would be necessary to keep up the June troop shipment record. Authorities are hopeful that the British transports aiding in this big movement can be retained. Officials in touch with the problem said to-day they would not be surprised if the 2,675,000 mark were attained, and this tallied in part with the reported statement of Andre Tardieu, French Commissiour, that 2,500,000 would be in France in the next six months.

The accelerated movement which began this spring was intended to carry only into the summer, but it now appears evident that there will be no let up unless the ship problem forces a decrease in troop movements in favour of supply shipments.

MINISTERS FAVOUR EARLY CLOSING OF THE RESTAURANTS

A statement appeared in one of the Tuesday evening papers that the ministers are not opposed to restaurants remaining open on Sundays, but are objecting to music and other elements being permitted to enter the business of Sunday.

The president of the Ministerial Association authorizes the statement that the resolution passed and for which every member present voted, declared that in the opinion of the Association the hours of operation on the Lord's Day should be carefully limited and that the best interests of all concerned would be served if they were closed at eleven o'clock on week nights.

FINED FOR FAILING TO CARRY CARDS

KITCHENER, July 3. — Nineteen persons out of 24 arrested by the Dominion police on Saturday night and on Sunday were fined in the Police Court this afternoon by Magistrate Weir for failing to carry their exemption papers with them when accosted by the officers. A young teamster who resisted arrest was assessed $30 in addition to the $5 fine, and a young Italian was sent to London for further examination.

ATTACKS ATKINS STAFF

Says That Five of Them Are Directors in Forty-five Companies.

LONDON, July 4.—Alluding to the staff which Lord Beaverbrook has gathered around himself at the Ministry of Information, Truth says one thing may be said with confidence—namely, if directing companies is a qualification for instructing foreign minds in the high ideals and disinterested motives of Britain, then the Ministry of Information is everything the public could wish for. Five gentlemen who occupy positions in what may be called the Higher Command in the British propaganda are directing no fewer than forty-five companies. Lord Beaverbrook himself has had considerable experience with companies and it is fortunate that he has been able to surround himself with so many other men of the right type.

INDIANS FIGHT CONSCRIPTION.

Brantford, July 3.—The Six Nation Indians held a mass meeting on the reserve on Tuesday at which it was decided to give every assistance in their power to aid Wesley Martin, a member of the Six Nations, in his fight against conscription.

GIFT TO BLIND SOLDIER.

Washington, July 3.—A bill giving a monthly allowance of $100 for twenty years to Lieut. Frank Barber, a British officer, who was blinded last February by an accident at Camp Wheeler, Ga., was passed to-day by the Senate. Secretary Baker approved the measure as an act of "international courtesy and grace."

ANTI-LOAFING LAW IS WORKING WELL

Government May Comb Out Able-Bodied Men From Less Essential Jobs.

OTTAWA, July 3.— Reports on the labour situation received here are to the effect that the anti-loafing law has worked well in preventing intermittent and fitful labour and in forcing men to engage themselves in some sort of useful employment.

Local Magistrates are taking advantage of the act to good effect.

It is stated here, however, that the Government is seriously contemplating some measure whereby the employment of able-bodied men in certain less essenial industries will be forbidden. Such employments would include those of barbers, waiters, shoe-shiners, chauffeurs, etc.

THOUSANDS ARE WILLING TO HELP IN AGRICULTURAL WORK

This Information is Obtained Through the Medium of the Registration Cards—First Report of Board Gives Returns by Provinces.

RETURNS FOR PETERBOROUGH EAST

Ottawa, July 5. — Highly satisfactory results in connection with the registration of the man and woman power of Canada, have been obtained according to Senator G. D. Robertson who issued his first statement returns from various constituencies in which the work has been completed. Hon. Mr. Roberston said that returns were somewhat slow in coming in,due to the fact that registrars have been instructed to permit Provincial organizations desiring information with reference to agricultural prospects, to extract this information before sending the cards to Ottawa.

Already the registration board has secured the names of thousands of people willing to give assistance in agricultural work, particularly during the harvest time. This information is available for use without waiting for the tabulation of the cards in the capital, and it is expected that great assistance will be afforded in the obtaining of farm help.

The board keenly appreciates the splendid service given by thousands of volunteer workers, as well as by the spirit of patriotism displayed by the public generally, in complying with the registration regulations.

GERMS CARRIED BY WIND FROM FRONT IS BELIEF IN SPAIN

Think Influenza Epidemic Was Transported Overland From Battlefields Like Pollen of Flowers—War Pictures Not Permitted in Spain.

SUPPLYING MUNITIONS FOR THE ALLIES

NEW YORK, July 5.—That the recent epidemic of influenza in Spain was caused by the contaminated air blown southward from the battle fields in Northern France is the general belief in Spain, according to Senora Andrea de Onis, who, with her two young sons, was a passenger on board a Spanish steamship arriving at an American port.

Professor Frederico de Onis, exchange professor at Columbus University, was on the pier to greet his wife and sons. He has been teaching Spanish literature at Columbia for nearly two years.

"The epidemic was really much worse than you had any idea of in the United States," said Senora Onis. "Whole office buildings were emptied of their clerks and office staffs while the scourge lasted which was about three weeks. It was about over when we left Cadiz, a fortnight ago. It was a strange malady, for no individual suffered more than three days from the attack, and there were no fatalities. It was generally believed throughout Spain that the germs came in the northern breezes from the corrupted air of the battle fields, where the thousands upon thousands of unburied bodies must have had their influence upon the atmosphere. It is well known that certain plants have their pollen wafted over hundreds of miles and cause sickness in distant places, while points close by are immune from the affections. So it was considered quite likely that the germs from the battle fields had been blown to Spain, a disance of about six hundred miles, without affecting the French territory intervening."

The vessel on board which Senora de Onis was a passenger arrived at her American destination Monday morning, but her passengers were not permitted to come ashore until Tuesday afternoon, the delay being caused by the thorough examination of passengers and crew by the port authorities.

Among the other passengers on board the steamship were Manuel Padilla, a Spaniard in business in Barcelona, and Georges Golay, a French exporter, in the same city. Both are in the United States on a business trip.

"There is a general belief in Spain," said Mr. Golay, 'that your country, as an ally of France and England, has not provided all that it should provide for the allied cause. Spain is manufacturing great amounts of munitions and war supplies for the Allies, principally at Bilboa and Elbar, which are the munition centres of the kingdom."

Senor Padilla added that the neutrality of his country is so strict that no cinematograph pictures favouring one side or the other in the war are permitted to be shown in Spain.

FEED THE PESTS.

Feeding the garden insects on poison is the surest way of keeping them from feeding on the vegetables you are growing for your own use.

Perhaps you have never watched them closely but the various pests have different ways of attacking the plants. For instance, some insects chew and swallow their feed and others suck it from the juices and sap of the plants. The best way to get rid of both varieties is to make a study of the various poisons and how to apply them.

Arsenate of lead is the simplest poison to handle. It comes in two forms, powder and paste. The powder is easiest to weigh out and handle and it keeps indefinitely. One ounce will go as far as two ounces of paste.

Paris green is more expensive and does not mix with water as well as arsenate of lead. Furthermore, it will burn plants if it does not have two or three times its weight of lime added to the water. Used in Bordeaux it does not need the extra lime. In preparing the spraying mixture use half an ounce of Paris green and two ounces of lime in five gallons of water. Keep well stirred so as to spread the poison evenly.

Analysis of Poisons.

As the season advances careful study should be given to the use of poisons for spraying purposes. The best way to keep the pests from feeding on the vegetables you are growing for yourself is to feed them with poison.

One of the easiest ways to apply poison is with a whisk broom. Of course there is the spray pump, but the other is cheaper and just as efficacious. When used in its dry form the poison should be dusted on by mixing it with air-slaked lime, sifted ashes or dry road dust.

Use one ounce of powder and two ounces of paste in six quarts of water or Bordeaux mixture. Put the powder in a bucket and stir in enough water to wet thoroughly. Then it will mix evenly into the rest of the liquid.

Paris green is more expensive and does not mix with water so well as arsenate of lead. Furthermore, it will burn plants if it does not have two or three times its weight of lime added to the water. Used in Bordeaux it does not need the extra lime. Use half an ounce of Paris green and two ounces of lime in five gallons of water. Keep well stirred so as to spread the poison evenly.

Conservative Muse of History.

It is the unhappy usage of our schools and universities to study the history of mankind only during periods of mechanical unprogressiveness. The historical ideas of Europe range between the time when the Greeks were going about the world on foot or horseback or in galleys or sailing ships, to the days when Napoleon, Wellington and Nelson were going about at very much the same pace in much the same vehicles and vessels. At the advent of steam and electricity the muse of history holds her nose and shuts her eyes. Science will study and get the better of a modern disease, as for example, sleeping sickness, in spite of the fact that it has no classical standing, but our history schools would be shocked at the bare idea of studying the effect of modern means of communication upon administrative areas, large or small. This defect in our historical training has made our minds politically sluggish.—H. G. Wells in New Republic.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 31 cars, with 100 cattle, 82 calves, 1565 hogs and 141 sheep and lambs.

Trade was moderately active, the demand cleaning up practically all the week's left overs and a few loads of fresh cattle, but all of medium and common quality. There was practically nothing of choice quality in the market. Prices were steady at the recent declines for medium butcher steers, heifers and common cows.

A few quality stockers and feeders are in demand but there is no demand for the medium and poor quality light stockers.

Sheep and lambs are firmer.

Calves firm.

Hogs steady at the 2c advance this week to $18.25 fed and watered.

CHAPTER CIX.

After George left in the morning I wandered about the house unable to set myself at anything, even the simplest household tasks I usually did in spite of having so many servants. The flowers for the table and library, other little things that I loved to do, and which helped fill the morning hours. I tried to practice, then to play some new music but failed in both attempts.

Finally I put on my street clothes, and started out for a walk. I tried to think I would not listen to Merton Gray, that I would send him word not to come. But I did nothing about it. The thought of the folks at home intruded; father, mother, and the boys; David had seen that I was unhappy at time, but I knew he as well as the others would be terribly shocked should I do so unconventional a thing as to leave my husband, to say nothing of going with another man.

Had I stopped loving George? Did I love Merton Gray enough to do as he asked? If I could only decide those two questions, I thought as I walked along the busy streets, fortunately meeting no one whom I knew. Had I, I should have passed them without recognition. My mind was preoccupied to such an extent.

Like a flash it came to me. Tell Mrs. Sexton. Ask her advce.

Impulsively I turned and changed the course of my walk. But she now lived at some distance and it now seemed as if I couldn't wait so I hailed a taxi. Fortunately she was at home, and received me most graciously; although I imagined that I saw a flicker of surprise in her face at my early call.

HELEN ASKS MRS. SEXTON'S ADVICE

She took me into her cozy little sitting room, insisted upon my removing my wraps, and then said:

"I shall keep you to luncheon, all day if I can. This is good of you, I was feeling a bit out of sorts this morning. I have not been as well as usual lately." She then asked about Bar Harbor, had we a good time, etc.

I chatted with her, glad to put off the discussion as long as possible, yet longing to have it over. After a time I said:

"I am going to shock you, Mrs. Sexton."

"Really; well go ahead! Perhaps I need a shock of some kind!" She smiled as she said it, but there was also sympathy and understanding in her face.

It was strange how my feelings about Mrs. Sexton had changed. I once had so disliked her that I would have gone home rather than keep her longer with me; and had begged George to send her away. Now of all the people that I knew in the world she was the only one to whom I either could, or would, go to ask advice. I realized that nto even to my own mother could I confess what I was going to confess to Mrs. Sexton: That a man other than my own husband had made love to me; had asked me to leave George and go away with him!

In spite of her remark about a shock being welcome, I almost hesitated to speak of my errand, so really ill did Mrs. Sexton look. When I said so she returned:

"I am much better than for several days past. Nothing that you have to tell me will injure me; it may help me by taking my mind from myself, my pains and aches."

Then I told her. I blurted out the main thing at once.

"Merton Gray wants me to go away with him!"

"Yes—I am not surprised that he should want you. I have long known he loved you. I AM surprised, however, that he has spoken I thought he knew you loved your husband."

"That's just it! I don't know that I do love George; and I don't know but I do. I care a lot for Merton, am always contented and happy when with him. He is never cross and impatient, never critical of me, of my actions. He accepts and likes me as I am. He does not try to make me over." I said the last bitterly. As always when I thought of what George had told me, that he deliberately intended to make me over to suit himself; that he had considered the kind of finished product that I would make when he asked me to marry him. I grew bitter and hard toward him.

"Merton is younger in years than your husband, and infinitely younger in disposition. That is one reason you are more en-rapport with him. But because he has those characteristics you must not imagine yourself in love with him. I do not say you are not. I simply want you to look at the question from all sides."

"I have tried to, Mrs. Sexton. I have honestly tried to do so. I could no sleep a wink last night. I couldn't decide." Then I added, "George cares for Julia Collins; I know he does! He is always laughing over her no matter where we go; and she takes such liberties, seems to know that he will approve whatever she does. It has has been a terrible summer for me, and I hate the very thought of going through the winter. I shall be criticized by George, almost insulted by her. I know."

To-morrow — Mrs. Sexton Calms Helen.

HIS ULTIMATUM.

It Brought the Erie Directors to Terms, and Underwood Won.

"When Underwood was made president of the Erie road," said a Wall street man, "certain things were promised. Roadbed and rolling stock were in rotten condition, but he was assured that the money would be forthcoming for betterments. After Underwood had taken the big desk the bankers' attitude was changed. Money was tight—the Erie was a very swamp for swallowing dollars—and they suggested that Mr. Underwood sit tight and refrain from peevish movement in the canoe. It went on for a time until conditions began to improve. Then Mr. Underwood renewed his demands.

"'Impossible,' said the bankers.

"The following day there was a meeting of the directors. Underwood called it to order and then laid two folded papers on the table.

"'This road needs $10,000,000 for improvements or a new president,' said he. 'Here is a resolution empowering me to borrow that amount of money. There is my resignation. I will leave the room for five minutes so that you may act.'

"In two minutes the door opened and an elderly banker thrust his head out. 'Come on in, Underwood,' he said. 'We've adopted your resolution and burned your resignation. You win.'"—New York Sun.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Beware of the Dog!

In Jersey they have an interesting device for keeping off tramps and burglars. A watchdog, too ferocious and too valuable to be allowed to run loose, is tied to a rope about four feet long, and this rope is tied to a ring that runs loosely over a long wire about four feet from the ground. The wire stretches from the back porch to a pole at the end of the yard, and as the ring slips easily over it the dog has the full run of the yard without being able to bite visitors or innocent passersby. The wire is practically invisible by night, and many a prowler has gone on his way a sadder but a wiser man after assuming from the looks of things in the front of the house that there wasn't any dog.—New York Mail.

Had No Fault to Find.

"Look here," he said to the groom, "are you the man who put the saddle on Miss Jennie's horse?"

"Yes, sir. Anything wrong, sir?"

"It was loose, very loose. She had no sooner mounted than the saddle slipped, and if I hadn't caught her she would have been thrown to the ground."

"I'm very sorry, sir."

"But I did catch her," went on the young man meditatively, "I caught her in my arms, and—here's half a crown for you, John. Do you suppose you could leave the girth loose when we go riding again tomorrow?"—London Telegraph.

SMALLEST BEAST OF PREY.

It Is a True Weasel, but Is Only About Six Inches Long.

The smallest carnivorous animal in the world is an American weasel which is numerous in northwest Canada and Alaska and is occasionally seen about the great lakes. It is a true weasel but only six inches long, with a tail only one inch in length. All its upper surface is in summer pure umber brown, but the throat, abdomen and inside of the legs are pure white, and unlike any other weasel, it has no black at the end of the tail; hence, although the animal turns white in the north in winter, it does not show the black tipped tail which characterizes an ermine pelt, and so it is not sought by trappers and fur traders.

This fact, with its small size and secretive life, has made its habits very little known, but they seem to be much like those of other weasels. It feeds on insects, which it finds alive in summer and in winter digs out of rotten logs; upon small birds, etc., but lives mainly on mice. These it can follow into their narrowest holes and run ways, for it is scarcely larger than a field mouse itself, or, striking the trail of one, it will trace all its wanderings and as soon as it catches sight of its prey will spring after it with amazing and fatal rapidity.

It is frequently caught by naturalists in their mouse traps. An old Indian told W. H. Osgood of the biological survey, who thus captured one in southern Alaska, that it was a promise of rare good fortune. His brother, he related, had taken one when a boy and had in consequence become a big chief. A good name for this least of the carnivores would be "mouse hunter." It is known to science as Putorius rixosus.—Harper's.

SCIENTIFIC PUZZLES.

Some Queer Things One Learns In the Study of Chemistry.

Every one knows that the diamond is only charcoal crystallized, but there are a great many other things in nature that, though possessing widely different properties, are composed of exactly equal quantities of the same elements.

The white of an egg and rattlesnake poison are formed of identically the same amounts of the same elements.

The oil of roses and common coal gas are each formed alike, both being composed of four atoms of hydrogen and four atoms of carbon.

Sugar and gum arabic are likewise brothers of the same weight and texture.

All the hydrocarbons, known to science as a combination of sixteen atoms of hydrogen and ten atoms of carbon, are alike in their composition. To enumerate some—oil of orange, lemon, cloves, ginger and black pepper.

The suggested explanation of these peculiarities is that the atoms are placed differently toward one another in the molecules of the different substances.

Other things just as peculiar are evident when certain substances are united chemically. Thus hydrogen gas, which is odorless, and nitrogen gas, which is also odorless, when united go to make ammonia, which has a very strong odor. Copper, which has no odor, and zinc, which also has none, when melted and mixed to give us brass, produce a substance with a very characteristic one.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Luckily It Is No Worse.

If half the exceptionally smart babies were to develop into smart men and women there would be sharper competition in every walk of life.—Judge.

In Old Age

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

RIVALS IN MUSCLE

Augustus of Poland and His Saxon Captain Were Strong.

BUT THEY MET THEIR MATCH.

The Young Swedish Count Whom They Sought to Impress With Their Feats of Strength Took a Hand in the Game Himself and Dazed the King.

On a bitterly cold evening in February, 1707, a little company of Swedish dragoons, huntsmen and grooms leading extra horses rode across the draw bridge of the castle of Liebeverda, on the banks of the river Elster, in Saxony. They were evidently expected, for the officer who headed the huntsmen was conducted into a brilliantly lighted chamber, where was gathered a large company of men at arms. His glances around the room told him that a drinking bout was in progress, and in the center of the gay gathering the visitor beheld the former king of Poland—King Augustus, a title he afterward regained.

Advancing to the place where the rollicking, royal personage sat steeped in wine, the Swedish officer, a young man, but tall and broad abouldered, reported that his master, King Charles of Sweden, would arrive at the castle the following morning to take part in the boar hunt to which he had been invited.

Whereupon the ex-king, looking the young Swedish nobleman over with appraising eye, frowned, then recovered his composure as he noted the skill with which the messenger addressed him without once using the title of "majesty." He was happy, he said complacently, that King Charles was coming, and he added, "I have been told that Count Gustaf Bertelskold"—for this was the noble messenger's name—"was a valiant participant in my royal friend's boar hunt."

As the evening wore on the company became noisier and the wine flowed more freely until at length August, with a gesture that commanded attention, took from the table a silver plate. Without apparent effort he bent the plate to a roll in his right hand and tossed it as drink money to a servant.

Loud cries of "Bravo!" followed this princely achievement. The example challenged imitation. A stockily built Saxon cavalry captain took from his pocket a copper coin. Turning aside the tablecloth, he laid the coin on the table and with a mighty blow of his fist drove the coin so deep into the oaken surface of the table that it stuck there. New shouts of applause shook even the heavy beamed ceiling.

King August then ordered several horseshoes brought in. Looking them over carefully, he selected one that suited him and passed it round the company so that all could see it was strong and perfect in every way. Then he stood up and, bending the shoe backward and forward in the middle, broke it in two equal pieces and held them out in either hand to show his muscles were harder than iron even.

Shouts of approval rose louder than ever, goblets were filled and emptied again, and the stocky Saxon cavalry captain was heard to proclaim that the king of Poland should one day break his enemies' weapons as easily as he breaks an iron horseshoe, at the same time giving the Swedish count a knowing look.

Count Bertelskold rose to go, this being the only reply he considered appropriate. But the aggressive Saxon captain blocked his way and shouted:

"Upon my honor, I believe the little Swedish count is afraid of us. Gently, gently, my young friend. Your delicate fingers would certainly never break a horseshoe in two. Drink, drink, I say, to the health of his majesty the king of Poland!"

Count Bertelskold's hand went to his sword hilt like a flash. But he checked himself, seized a goblet and, draining it to the last drop, exclaimed: "At the request of this gentleman I drink to the prosperity of his majesty King Stanislaus. May he live long and reign happily." No deeper insult could have been offered, for it was King Charles of Sweden who had caused Stanislaus to be chosen elector of Saxon in place of Augustus.

"Draw," shouted a Polish nobleman, confronting Count Bertelskold, "or, by heaven, I will write this toast, letter for letter, in red upon your blue coat!"

It was King Augustus who interrupted with the gentle reminder that the Swedish count was their guest.

"Let us," said King Augustus, "rather ask him if in the Swedish camp they do not amuse themselves with any interesting experiments of the kind we have just been having."

"If my honored host will permit," replied Count Bertelskold, "I will attempt something that is customary with us."

"Yes, do so, my dear count," replied the king, glad to turn the threatened bloodletting into jest.

"By all means!" roared the bystanders.

Bertelskold looked around him a moment without replying. Then, suddenly seizing the two husky Polish noblemen who had been so ready to draw swords against him, Count Bertelskold raised them both up at once and, holding them, kicking and sprawling, at arm's length, bore them twice round the table and with perfect solemnity sat them down at the feet of the astonished King Augustus.—Kansas City Star.

SAVING THE SCENE

An Emergency For Which Actors Must Ever Be Prepared.

ACTS NOT ON THE PLAYBILLS.

Presence of Mind by Which Clara Morris Turned to Advantage a Canine Interruption in "Miss Multon" and a Feline Intrusion in "Camille."

An experienced actor is supposed to be able to cope with any stage emergency, no matter what is lacking or what happens. Cool, self possessed, it is expected of him to turn the ridiculous into a source of applause rather than of disapproval or laughter.

And among the necessary acquirements for the actress is an unshakable self control, no matter if by some carelessness she is thrown into a situation almost without precedent. She must never fly off at a tangent because of some unrehearsed incident. She must not scream when the perennial gallery idiot yells "Fire!" If something is forgotten she must try hard to hide its absence or invent a substitute.

If anything unusual occurred I always tried to incorporate it into the play if possible, as when in the schoolroom scene of "Miss Multon" I was astonished to see a large water spaniel come trotting on to the stage, waving his tail at me as if we had been bosom friends for years. I don't like to recall all the things I thought about that dog for a moment or two.

Then I rose, and, thanking heaven and a generous master for the collar he wore, I grasped it, and, having stroked his silky ear with the other hand, I said to my pupils: "Children, I do not wish to curtail your pleasures, but I have told you before that I cannot permit you to have your pets in this room during lesson hours. Now, don't force me to remind you of that again."

And the little girl who played Paul quickly and cleverly responded to my wink. "Oh, excuse us this time, Miss Multon, and we won't do it again." And, taking the dog from me, she led him off into the retirement of private life, while in the morning one newspaper remarked that "among the prettiest of the lighter touches of the performance was the scene at the Christmas tree in the first act and the dog scene in the third act."

Another time, in Baltimore, when I was playing "Camille," I had a similar experience. In the fifth act I had staggered from the window to the bureau, nearing that dread moment when I was to see the reflection of my wrecked and ruined self in the looking glass. The house was all attention, watching dim eyed the piteous, weak movements of the dying woman. Just then I heard the quick indrawing of the breath that startled womanhood always indulges in before either a scream or a laugh.

My heart gave a plunge. "What is it? Oh, what is wrong?" And I glanced down at myself anxiously, for really I wore very little in that scene. "What is it?"

Then came a titter, and evidently it was growing. In agony I turned quickly about and found myself facing a monstrous cat. Starlike, he held the very center of the stage, his two great topaz eyes fixed unflinchingly upon my face. His tail stood straight and aggressively in the air, twitching with short twitches at the very top.

Alas, no wonder they giggled! But how to save the approaching death scene was what went through my mind.

Clinging to the bureau, I slipped to my knees, and with an earnest prayer that he would not resist my appeal in a faint voice I called him to me. Thomas looked suspiciously at me, hesitated, then approached gingerly and sniffed at my fingers. Then he rubbed his dingy body against my knee, and in an instant my arms were about him, my cheek on his wicked old head. What a sigh of relief went like a wave over that audience! I had won!

I then called Nanine to relieve me, and the applause that swept the house was as balm to my great distress. I said to Nanine, "Take him downstairs; he grows too heavy for me to pet." And Sir Thomas was carried off reluctantly, imagining perhaps that I was envious of the bit he had made.

My manager, who was somewhat of a wag, of course made the most of the saved situation. A gentleman met him on the street the next morning and was anxious for him to settle an argument between himself and wife.

"My wife, who has seen the play several times in New York, insists that the beautiful little scene with the cat belongs to the play, while I don't recall it, nor do any of our acquaintances whom I have asked this morning. Won't you kindly set us right?"

"Willingly," replied my manager. "Your wife is in the right, my dear sir. That cat scene is always done. It is a great favorite with Miss Morris, and she hauls that cat all over the country with her."

Inquisitive.

"What is your name?" asked one five-year-old miss of another.

"My goodness!" exclaimed the other. "You are as bad as grownup folks. They are always asking my name and a lot of other silly questions until I am actually ashamed of them."—Chicago News.

ADMIRED HIS BRAVERY.

A Nervy British Boy and His Reception by the Enemy.

Mere boys have often shown the greatest heroism in the face of peril, both on and off the battlefield. How many know the story of the little British bugler who accompanied Colonel Rennie's column in the disastrous advance against General Jackson's intrenchments at New Orleans a hundred years ago?

A withering fire of cannon and musketry greeted the British troops as they charged the American redoubt—a fire that for deadly accuracy has rarely been equaled.

The young bugler at once climbed into a small tree and straddled a limb. From this conspicuous position he continued to sound the vibrant call to the charge. Cannon balls and bullets killed scores of men beneath him and even tore away branches of the tree in which he sat. But above the thunder of the artillery, the rattling of musketry and all the din of strife the shrill music, blown with all the power of the little fellow's lungs, rose unceasing.

Colonel Rennie and most of the regimental officers fell, mortally wounded; the shattered ranks began to fall back. But the bugler still blew the charge with undiminished vigor.

At last, when the British had entirely abandoned the field, one of the American soldiers ran out from the lines, took the youngster prisoner and brought him into camp. Great was the boy's astonishment when, instead of treating him roughly, according to his expectations, the warm hearted southern soldiers, who had observed his gallantry with admiration, actually embraced him. Officers and men vied with each other in acts of kindness toward this brave young Briton.—Youth's Companion.

ELEPHANTS AS WORKERS.

Without Them Burma's Teakwood Trade Would Languish.

Since 1880 the export of teakwood from Burma has increased enormously; but, despite the phenomenally high price of the wood, it would not be profitable to work it, even in these days, without the elephant. In this trade the Burmese elephants, massive animals whose strength is almost unlimited, are seen at their best as beasts of burden.

From the time when the forest areas are purchased, before the trees are felled, to the hour of export on the ocean going vessels at the port on the Indian ocean the elephant is the main worker. Far away in the malarial swamps and almost impenetrable jungles this majestic beast first tramps down a passage through the undergrowth. Then, guided by his Indian keeper's prong, the elephant commences his arduous labor of dragging the felled trees to the river, whence they are conveyed by raft down country to the sawmills.

These enormous trees, untrimmed and cumbrous, are sometimes dragged up and down the jungle and mountain forest pathways en route to the river with rare precision. At the mills again the work of packing and stacking is done exclusively by elephants. When the trees are sawed into lengths the elephants do the piling, bringing the huge planks from the sheds and arranging them in an orderly manner in numbered piles.—Argonaut.

Hard on the Lawyer.

Sir William Jones was receiving a visit from Mr. Day, a man of some note at that time. During a conversation Sir William moved a book from its place, and a large spider dropped to the ground.

"Kill that spider, Day! Kill that spider!" cried the great scholar.

"No," said Mr. Day, "I will not kill that spider, Jones. I don't know that I have a right to kill that spider. Suppose now that you were going down to Westminster hall in your carriage and some superior being, who might have as much power over you as you have over this spider, should call out: 'Kill that lawyer! Kill that lawyer!' How should you like that, Jones? And I am sure that to most people a lawyer is a more noxious creature than a spider."

The President Saw Him.

A dear old Irish woman in Chicago is the proud mother of a successful politician, who, no matter how busy he may be, never fails to write to the old lady regularly.

When he was in Washington last year he kept his mother fully advised as to everything that was going on. Finally there came a letter wherein he described his presentation to the president. The old lady read it with eagerness, hardly able to restrain herself until she had told some one what had happened. When at last she got through the letter she hastened to a neighbor's house and announced:

"I have just got a letter from Washington, and, do you know, the president has seen Richard."—Lippincott's.

A Story With a Moral.

Here is a little story with a moral. A young man who was known among his fellow workers as somewhat of a prevaricator, did not appear one day at his desk. He sent a letter, however, to the manager announcing that his absence was caused by one of his children having scarlet fever. He got in reply a note which gave him two weeks' leave of absence without pay, the manager sympathetically explaining that he feared the contagion might spread into the homes of some of the other employees.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WITCHES' WARNINGS.

Famous Prophecies That Have Come True.

The Empress Eugenie probably often recalls in her sad and exiled old age the prophetic words of a Dervish whom she visited, veiled and disguised, more than half a century ago, when she was in the full bloom of her loveliness, the happiest and most enviable woman in Europe.

To her amazement the Dervish greeted the veiled stranger with the words, "Welcome to my humble dwelling, O Empress!" and after Eugenie had expressed her astonishment that he had so easily discovered her identity, he continued:

"At your birth the stars foretold for you great power and greater sorrow, for your happiness will be only temporary, but your sorrow will last forever. You are doomed to lose your throne, your husband, and your son, and to wander alone through the world like a lost star. These events, however, will not happen at once, for the blow would kill you. To you, as an Empress, it will not be permitted to enter the land of your husband and your son, except by permission. You will have to seek a home with strangers, and the dress of woe will never leave your form; your jewels will be but tear-drops."

With what terrible accuracy every word of this prophecy has been fulfilled, the world knows.

When the beautiful young Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria visited a village fair some seventy years ago in disguise, and in the company of her father, a gipsy woman revealed her future to her.

"I do not know who you are, young lady," the gipsy said, "but you will one day, and before long, wear the crown of an empress. You will be one of the greatest and most envied women in Europe, but your happiness will not last long. You will have many, many years during which you will walk alone in the shadows; one great trouble will follow another until—but no, I will say no more, except that you will wear a double crown, that of an empress and a martyr."

Within four years Elizabeth had married Franz Josef, the young Emperor of Austria, and within another year her young life was laid in ruins.

Her husband's unkindness and infidelity had driven her in despair from Vienna, to begin the long period of exile and sorrow and pitiful loneliness to which death at last put a merciful end when the assassin, Luccheni, stabbed her to the heart.

"The child who is about to be born," the peasant declared, "will have a far more turbulent reign than his father, will marry a woman from the people, and in his twenty-seventh year will cease to be king, his dynasty perishing with him."

How exactly this prophecy was fulfilled is known to the world. Alexander lost his head and heart to Draga Maschin, the beautiful widow of a drunken engineer, and married her in spite of the strong opposition of his parents, ministers and people, and his foolish act was swiftly followed by that night of horror and tragedy in 1902 when a band of conspirators broke into the palace, slew both the King and his low-born wife, and flung their mutilated bodies out of a window.

The "Inthemis."

"Well, James Henry William, did you enjoy yourself at the seaside?"

"Yes, teacher, very much. I liked the sea, but I couldn't find the inthemis."

"The what, James Henry William?"

"The inthemis, teacher; where it says in the Bible, 'The sea and all that in them is.'"—London Curonicle.

Manitoba Makes Another Record in Butter Exports

MANITOBA expects to export butter to the value of over $1,000,000 this year. When it is remembered that up to a very few years ago, it was necessary for this province to import butter for its home needs, the growth of the dairy industry there is remarkable. In 1916 fifty-eight cars of butter were exported. Last year the number was increased to ninety-six cars. Up to June 1st this year, with the grass season only well begun, fifty-six cars of butter had been sent out of the province. This number compares with twenty-five cars in the corresponding period of last year. The butter is made up in fifty-six pound solids and four hundred boxes make up a car-load, so that, at present prices each car-load is worth $10,000.00. There is every indication that the present rate of export will be maintained, if not accelerated, during the year. All the exported butter from Manitoba is being sent to Montreal for shipment to the Allied nations in Europe.

The cheese industry is also progressing. It is only so far back as 1916 that fifty to fifty-five car loads of cheese were brought into the province for local consumption. With the output of the provincial factories increasing continually, the quantity of cheese imported was considerably reduced last year, and now for the first time in the history of the province a full carload of cheese is on its way for consumption elsewhere. The consignment left Winnipeg a few days ago for Montreal, where it will be graded and shipped overseas.

Although still in its infancy and capable of considerable growth yet, the dairy industry in Western Canada has been developing rapidly during the last few years. A high standard of quality is striven for, the aim being to produce butter of the best flavor with long keeping qualities. That the efforts in this direction have met with some measure of success is evidenced by the growing demand for butter from these provinces—a demand which is far greater than the output.

Pasteurization is almost universal in the creameries of Western Canada, and more than ninety per cent of the butter made in Manitoba this year will be from pasteurized cream. The application of the Störch test has been very satisfactory in enabling the dairy officials to determine whether this process has been properly carried out. At rural points the cream is tested in the creameries by a travelling inspector; in the laboratories of the Department of Agriculture the test is applied to representative samples of butter. When the Department now tests and grades a car load of butter, it can, to all practical purposes, tell just how long it can stand in cold storage without deterioration.

At the present time the creameries are receiving forty-three cents a pound at point of shipment for special grade of butter; forty-two cents for No. 1 and forty cents for No. 2.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Little Child

By Martha McCullough Williams

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Yes, sir!" Miss Prue said oracularly. "You hear my racket! Somp'n is in the wind over to Barton's—shore's I'm knee-high to a grasshopper."

"How come you to be so shore?" Widow Allan demanded, settling her knitting-sheath more firmly against her plump side. Miss Prue half shut one eye—a devout church member of course could not wink—set her arms akimbo, advanced a large foot, and said still with the oracular intonations: "I'd tell ye—only I'm main afraid ye'll go strowin' all up and down Bresh Creek neighborhood, and gittin' me the name o' talkin' scandal."

The widow smiled broadly. Miss Prue was known already for the head and front of all gossip—especially of the more lurid sort. 'Suit yerself," she said tranquilly. "Tell hit or keep yer mouth shet. I know and you know I caint possibly want to hear things half as bad as you want to tell 'em."

Which was fact rudely stated. Miss Prue magnanimously ignored it. "I know you're a sensible person," she began. "Besides—I ra'alely must have somebody ter take counsel of. This yere business is too much for one lone woman ter wrastle with—"

"How many other ones have ye done told a'ready?" the widow interrupted. Miss Prue looked down: "I jest sorter sketched things to Nan Wiekfield and Josy Crimes—" she began. The widow threw up both hands, shaken with gusty laughter. "Ye had better wrote hit to the county paper," she said. "But I wonder at yo' choosings. Nan and Joe won't rest tell you've told the whole neighborhood, not leavin' you nobody but me."

"They come in on me in the middle of things—while the young man was here, asking the way—and makin' out like he hung on admirin' my dominecker pullets," Miss Prue protested. "They seen him—also heard. So I jest had to tell 'em—partly—the rest."

"Stop beatin' the bushes, fer goodness sake! What is the rest?" the widow demanded. Miss Prue drew a long breath. "Ef I but knowed the whole full of hit; 'twould be wuth money—a heap of money. Five hundred dollars!"—in an awed voice: "Enough to send a missionary clean to China."

"If I didn't know folks caint git sunstruck in the late fall, I'd think your head was tetched," the widow exploded.

Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and General Stores.

Miss Prue looked at her loftily, severely. "Make light of hit all you wanter," she said, "but that's the reward. Here! Look at the handbill! Didn't you find one like hit in your letter box?"

The widow read, gasping. Sure enough there was a reward—five hundred dollars for information leading to the capture of counterfeiters, double that for capture actual. Followed descriptions—three men, a girl, hardly more than a child, an elderly person, very dark-skinned, a small boy, almost a baby. All pictured in the usual ghastly fashion of "dodgers." Over the widow's shoulders Miss Prue glared down at the alleged portraits. "Them two's at Barton's, shore," she said, her finger on the dark woman with the baby in her arms. "S'manthy told me out of her own mouth they was goin' to board a boy-child and hits nurse till after Christmas. Now I ask you, what would honest folks be doin' sendin' a child to the country sech a time o' the year?"

"Oh, that ain't nothin'. Town folks has got so silly they don't s'prise me, no matter what they do," the widow commented. "You're hatchin' a mare's nest out of nothing, as usual, Prudence. Your parents ought to a-named ye Im-Prudence—you talk so wild."

"Wait! You ain't heard half," Miss Prue said magisterially. "Two of the men, and the gal, are at Barton's every little while—come an go in a car—always on the edge of dusk else mighty early mornin'. And this other—him come yisterday—he makes up the hull three."

"Are you shore? Did he look like them pictures?" the widow demanded.

"As much as anybody else," Miss Prue answered, tossing her head. "But that ain't all I jedge by. He actually offered me one o' his bad bills—a twenty, bran-new—wanted to buy a dozen pullets, and said he hadn't no change."

"You took hit—then you've got the gang dead to rights," the widow said quivering in her eagerness over the unfolding drama.

Miss Prue sniffed. "I didn't do no sech fool thing," she said. "Once is enough for me. I ain't forgot that time I took in a bad dollar so's to sell a dozen aigs—and had the bank man shove it back at me, marked 'counterfeit.' I told that thar man I hadn't no change—he might come again fer the pullets. I don't believe he will do it—but if he should—"

"Well, what?" the widow asked as Miss Prue's lips closed like a steel trap. "Oh, nothin'—much," said that lady, "only I've got a telephone and the sheriff's office has done promised me already to come running when I call it."

The Barton house, clean, rambling and comfortable, had an absolute monarch, by name Roy Evers. He was five years old, golden as to hair, blue-eyed, chubby, and dimpled as a Cupid. The young woman who came intermittently in the red car hugged him throughout the most of her visits and left him always with streaming tears. She surely looked too young to be his mother, yet he called her "My mammy," and they were very much alike. Roy liked the men who came and went with Mammy—especially the tall one with graying hair, whom Mammy addressed as Big Injun. Big Injun had a way that made you mind in spite of yourself. Johnny, the other man, showed that even plainer than Roy himself. As for Mammy, all of them appeared to think the earth ought to turn around for her lightest whim. She being Roy's bond-slave, his kingship followed inevitably, with her as first subject and Anne his nurse for prime minister.

While Miss Prue was expounding her beliefs to the widow, Mammy sat snuggling Roy, and smiling woebegonely at Big Injun. He had just said: "Make much of today, daughter; it won't be safe to come again before Christmas. Try as we may to blind our trail, that detective hound, Feugle, has picked it up. Fact—never mind how I know it. So be brave, girl, and say good-by to the little man for a while. I shan't be easy in my mind until we have him across the big water."

Mammy hugged so hard she hurt the tender little body. Roy began to whimper. There came a rap at the door. Mrs. Barton opened it cautiously, but seeing a slouching figure with a hat pulled low over the eyes, and a creel of saucy pullets upon one arm, said severely: "Don't you know enough to go round back? Air them the chickens Miss Jones said she'd lemme have?"

For answer the man dropped the creel, darted past her into the big south room where the strangers were assembled—grabbed the whimpering child, lifted him high on his shoulder, saying hoarsely to Mammy: "I can't take you forcibly, May, no matter how much I want you—but I will have our child."

Mammy crumpled in a sobbing heap. Big Injun got gray-faced—Johnny sprang at the newcomer, but was pulled back by the other man, crying: "Remember the child!"

"I say that! Why don't ye remember him? All of ye!" Nurse Anne cried, darting to the side of the intruder. "Ain't he got no rights, the angel? Rights to father, mother, home! I tell ye, Master," to Big Injun unwinkingly; "There's been packs and stacks of lies told—as I found out—never you mind how. Roy's pappy was lied to, same as his Mammy—by two that had thar own game to win—you know how hard that Pascal girl tried to get Mr. Haughton tangled in her net—and her cousin Peter wanted Miss May and her fortune jest as bad. When I found out thar game—I wrote Mr. Haughton—that's how he comes here now. Not for his own sake nor Miss May's—they're big enough to know better. But I won't stand it no longer—havin' Roy ask me after he says his prayers: 'Why don't God send me back my daddy?'"

Nurse Anne stopped short, swallowing hard. Through the hush, they heard Roy cooing, his hands locked tight in the stranger's hair: "My daddy! My daddy! I love my daddy."

"May," young Haughton said low and entreatingly. She lifted her eyes, her arms; with a quick spring she was beside him, held against his heaving heart, close to her boy. So the sheriff found them, when, answering Miss Prue's summons, he descended upon the homestead. Explanations followed—here were no malefactors, only actors in a domestic drama that had verged on tragedy, but was ending happily, as all dreams should. The handbill turned out to have been a practical joke played on Miss Prue—perhaps by some one who had suffered from her inquisitions. It was fifteen years old at least and undated—its mention of a woman and child had perhaps incited the joker to fit it to the folks at Barton's. Fate, which is called Chance, had done the rest. And Miss Prue took a lot of credit for the happy outcome—hadn't her chickens really served Haughton as a card of entry?

The "Toothache" Signal in Chile.

Drink is the curse of Chile. "For some time after our arrival," writes Mrs. Hugh Fraser in "Further Reminiscences," "Hugh and I used to be puzzled at the prevalence of toothache in the town (Santiago). Every day one would see men in the streets, frock coated and tophatted, their faces almost hidden by a handkerchief tied around their jaws—not one or two or occasionally, but half a dozen at a time and on every day of the week. Later we found out that it was a signal and meant: 'I was drinking last night. Do not speak to me.'"

Two Things Distinguish Men.

The essential things which distinguish one person from another, which give one man a higher place and another a lower, are just two.

First of all, perseverance—the ability to keep everlastingly at it, and second, imagination or vision—the ability to see beyond the present and to understand that the work at hand reaches beyond the present moment and so is worth while.—St. Nicholas.

WHAT SCOTLAND IS DOING

This Little Country Has Already Cheerfully Done Very Much More Than Her Share.

We are pretty well acquainted in this country with the part Canada is taking in the war. We have been advised from time to time of the individual sacrifices being made by the people to the north of us. We know only in a general way what other people are doing. So it comes as refreshing news to hear from the lips of such a man as Harry Lauder the heroic work and sacrifices of the Scots.

More than 300,000 Scotchmen are under arms, or have given up their lives in the struggle. And Scotland is a small country. In the cities and towns there are no more eligible men—no more men fit to bear arms. They have all departed. Scotland is a land of old men and women and little children—and crippled soldiers. It is not the Scotland of three years ago, with a husky set of strapping young fellows tilling the fields and working in the mines and mills.

Not only that, but the people do not complain. There are no riots because of the conditions—no murmurings against their fate. The war is on; the Scots will fight it out. That is the spirit one finds in Scotland, among those old men and women and among the little children. It is the spirit one finds out in the trenches, where the Scottish soldiers stand on guard and meet the enemy face to face.

The history of Scotland is too well understood to call attention to it here. The record of the Scots, made in the long ago, still is fresh in the mind of every one who knows history. So it isn't necessary to state that the Scots are born fighters, that they are not going to give up. They have done in this war exactly what those familiar with Scottish history expected them to do. And they will not fail at any time in the future.

Formation of the States.

From the beginning of our history the tendency has been toward territorial expansion in the formation of new states. Of the 13 original states seven contained less than 10,000 square miles, as Vermont, 9,564; New Hampshire, 9,341; Massachusetts, 8,266; New Jersey, 8,224; Connecticut, 4,965; Delaware, 2,370; Rhode Island, 1,248. New York contains only 48,264 square miles. The middle western states were considered of great size when formed. Ohio, 41,045 square miles; Indiana, 36,384; Illinois, 56,365; Michigan, 57,980; Wisconsin, 56,006, but they are small compared with the far western states of California, 158,297 square miles; Montana, 146,997; Arizona, 113,956; Nevada, 110,690, and Colorado, 103,948. Texas, with her 265,896 square miles, would almost make six states as large as New York.

Service Flag for Grief.

Service flags are displayed all over the big city, and it appears to be quite the patriotic thing for large corporations to outdo each other in showing the largest number of employees engaged in the war game. There are four corporations in New York with a vague sort of community interest, each of which, though entirely independent, insists on placing on its service flag a star for every employee of the four corporations now in service. But a saloonkeeper has the star service banner. It hangs before his saloon, and he has patriotically placed upon it a star for every one of his customers gone to the front.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

His Was Perfect In Figure and Scrupulously Neat In Dress.

Andrew Johnson was one of the neatest men in his dress and person I have ever known. During his three years in Nashville, in particular, he dressed in black broadcloth frock coat and waistcoat and black doeskin trousers and wore a silk hat. This had been his attire for thirty years, and for most of that time, whether as governor of Tennessee, member of congress or United States senator, he had made all of his own clothes. He was so scrupulous about his linen that he invariably changed all of it daily and sometimes oftener.

He was matchlessly perfect in figure, about five feet ten, had handsome broad shoulders, fine forehead, superb face, dark bushy hair and small hands and feet. The most marked feature about him was his eyes, which were small, and, although such eyes are not usually attractive, his were black, sparkling and absolutely beautiful.

He was not a gamester at anything and could play only indifferently at checkers. In 1862 he explained to me that he had never visited a theater because in his youth he lacked the opportunity and always afterward would rather study and work or go to bed than spend his time at a playhouse. He looked on all kinds of gambling as wrong, never knew one card or one domino from another and was never at a horse race. He had been to a few circuses and minstrel shows and liked them.—Recollection of His Secretary, Major Truman, in Century.

NOTHING CAN COMPARE WITH IT

Mr. Fred Adams, New Rose N.S., writes—I have tried many medicines for coughs and colds but never found anything to compare to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We have had the greatest relief fails to relieve a cough and loosen satisfaction with this medicine for it is up."

WOMEN AS GAMBLERS.

They Are Noted at Monte Carlo For Coolness and Luck.

The women gamblers at Monte Carlo are by no means the excitable, hysterical and unscrupulous players that have been described to us. Many are unscrupulous and dishonest, but they are usually calmer than the men. There are women who will pick up your winnings under your very nose, asserts the London Chronicle, and if you protest the croupier will probably pay the money again rather than have a disturbance. There are other women who will sit beside a man and openly claim a part of his winnings, and if the man is wise he will surrender to the extortion rather than disturb the domestic bliss. But, as a rule, the women gamble with equanimity, and how extraordinarily lucky they are, to be sure!

Women have wonderful luck. While men work out elaborate "systems" and sit frowning over figures, the mysteries of which would take a very Napoleon of finance to elucidate, and then play—and lose, women simply plank money on the number they are "sure is going to win," and they do win!

It is not at all an uncommon thing to see a woman sitting against the wall, her husband by her side, waiting to put pieces on at her command. While he trots to and from the tables, telling her what numbers turned up last, fussing and fuming and worrying what to do next, she calmly surveys the figures she has jotted down, gives him another "piece" at the psychological moment to put on, and her big velvet embroidered bag grows wider in circumference every hour. The five franc "piece" is even heavier and clumsier to carry than our "crown" piece. But she is so thoroughly used to it in quantities that she does not mind at all, but says, "The heavier the better!"

The games at the casino are perfectly fair, says the writer. When there is trouble, and trouble is very rare, it is due to the players and not to the game, "and I am sorry to say that when there is anything wrong it is generally a case of 'cherchez la femme.'"

GAS MOST VALUABLE AS FUEL

Although gas is being used more than ever before, its direct employment for lighting is almost a thing of the past. Our modern "gas lights" are chiefly burners where the light is not given out by the gas at all. It is mixed with air to produce a dim blue flame with great heating power. This flame serves to heat a mantle of mineral salts white hot, and it is this incandescent mantle that gives the light. Here the gas is used not for its light, but for its heat; and it is as a fuel that gas is now most valuable, says the Literary Digest.

According to an address delivered recently in England by President Harry Jones of the Institution of Civil Engineers, and reviews by Nature (London), not 5 per cent of the whole gas output is now used for direct illumination, so that the name "gas light company" has become something of a misnomer. The use of gas as fuel, President Jones says, has received special development during the war, and the ready applicability of gas appliances to the rapid making of munitions in emergencies has made them especially valuable. Mr. Jones quoted a high official of the British war office as follows:

"Without the direct aid of the gas industry . . . it would have been perfectly impossible for this country to wage the campaign of the last three years, or even for any but a trifling time resist the overwhelming floods of enemies that were poured upon it. When I first was asked to take charge of the manufacture and production of explosives it took me but a few days to realize my absolute dependence on your gas industry."

COOK PROVED HERO

His Deed of Bravery Deserves to Be Recorded.

Joseph Marcio's Saving of Comrade Washed Overboard Proof That Courage in Navy Is Not Confined to the Fighters.

Many brave things have been done by the men of these hard-driven American ships, and one of them stands out superbly, writes Ralph D. Paine in the Saturday Evening Post. It was the rescue of a man overboard in the midst of a storm. This vessel was caught out in it while on convoy duty and her survival was little short of a miracle. The French marines called it the worst blow the Bay of Biscay had seen in eight years. Its violence was that of a hurricane, with a wind velocity approaching a hundred miles an hour, such a storm as would have sorely pounded and damaged a great Atlantic liner.

The ship was more or less knocked into kindling wood, both masts broken off and rolled out of her, all three boats smashed and carried away, decks gutted, life rails splintered, compartments flooded. The ship was rolling 55 degrees, or almost flat on her side, and when she plunged, more than half the length of her keel was in the air. In the midst of it the steering gear jammed and the ship was likely to broach to and founder unless it could be cleared. The chief quartermaster, E. H. Robertson, volunteered for the job and was presently washed overboard, carried off to leeward on the back of a roaring sea.

There was not one chance in a million of saving him. He was as good as dead, and vanished. The ship was running before the storm and a quarter of an hour passed before she could be brought to, a very dangerous maneuver, which again swept her clean. The quartermaster had not gone down, but was visible on the lee bow, swimming with the courage of a man who refuses to surrender to the inevitable. Lines were thrown to him, but he was unable to reach them. Even if the boats had not been smashed it would have been impossible to launch one. A life raft was shoved over, and it floated toward Robertson so that he could clutch it and hang on.

This was merely to prolong his agony, however, for he could do nothing more to help himself. He had been in the water 17 minutes, buffeted, strangled, freezing. The month was December, the temperature of the sea 36 degrees. Among those who looked on and pitied the exhausted man who had made such a plucky fight of it was the ship's cook, Joseph Marcio. His realm of pots and pans being wrecked and awash, he turned his attention to this affair of the drowning quartermaster. Knotting a line about his middle and making no fuss about it he jumped into the sea and swam to Robertson, a veritable porpoise of a sea cook with a soul as big as all outdoors.

The ship had some way on her and could not be wholly stopped. It happened, therefore, that when the cook grabbed the quartermaster they were slowly towed through the seas. The strain was terrific and the rope nearly cut the cook in two, but he clung to his man until they were fetched alongside and hauled aboard together.

The quartermaster was unconscious, and the cook also collapsed on deck, but was thawed out with no serious damage. This Joseph Marcio was promoted to the rating of chief commissary steward in recognition of the deed and was recommended for the life-saving medal of the navy department.

SHUN LOOSE SHOES.

They Give the Feet as Much Trouble as the Pinching Kind.

Seven persons out of ten suffer excruciating pain at one time or another with their feet. A single corn no larger than a grain of sand can take all the snap and vitality right out of you.

Two-thirds of modern foot troubles are due to the fact that almost every one—man, woman and child—wears shoes too loose. The shoe itself may be correct as to size and shape, but it is not fastened tight at the only point of control—namely, the instep.

When you set your foot upon the floor or pavement in the act of walking the shoe adheres, and if it be loosely fastened over the instep the foot pushes down into the toe of the shoe. At certain spots on the foot this slipping causes friction. These spots are the soles of the feet, the tops, ends and inner sides of the toes, the great and little toe joints and occasionally even the back of the heel.

When the friction thus caused is continued hour after hour and day after day one or more of these spots are almost sure to become inflamed and sore. A slight thickening, called a "callous," is formed. As the friction and pressure go on the resulting callous may thicken up unevenly. Then it is called a corn.—Woman's Home Companion.

A LEGAL CURIOSITY.

Poetic Title Deed That Stood the Test of the Courts.

A deed for the conveyance of a piece of land that is one of the greatest legal curiosities in the world was drawn up in 1881 by J. Henry Shaw, a lawyer at Beardstown, Ill. The curio complies with every requirement of law and has more than once been declared by the courts of that state to be entirely valid. It reads as follows:

I, J. Henry Shaw, the grantor herein,
Who live at Beardstown, the county within,
For seven hundred dollars to me paid today
By Charles E. Wyman do sell and convey
Lot two (2) in block forty (40), said county and town,
Where Illinois river flows placidly down,
And warrant the title forever and aye,
Waiving a homestead and mansion to both a goodby,
And, pledging this deed is valid in law,
I add here my signature, J. Henry Shaw.
[Seal.] Dated July 25, 1881.

I, Sylvester Emmons, who live at Beardstown,
A justice of peace of fame and renown,
Of the County of Cass, in Illinois state,
Do certify here that on the same date
One J. Henry Shaw to me did make known
That the above deed and name were his own,
And he stated he sealed and delivered the same
Voluntarily, freely and never would claim
His homestead therein; but, left all alone,
Turned his face to the street and his back to his home. [Seal.]

DO FLYING FISH FLY?

Science Thinks Not, but Many Observers Say They Do.

The much mooted question, "Do flying fish fly?" is discussed by William Allingham in the Nautical Magazine. The orthodox scientific opinion is that the "wings" of the flying fish merely serve as a parachute to sustain the fish for a brief period in the air after he has launched himself out of the water by a powerful screwlike movement of his tail. According to this view, the fish has no power of directing his flight after he has left the water.

However, Mr. Allingham, who is a nautical expert attached to the British meteorological office and is in constant intercourse with seamen, reports many observations that tend to controvert this opinion. Certain observers claim that the wing fins are in constant rapid vibration and seem actually to serve the purpose of flight. One vessel master watched a fish that had attained an altitude of twenty feet above the water and was flying toward the mizzen rigging of his ship when, apparently noticing obstruction, it changed its course about 60 degrees, crossing the vessel's stern to regain the water. Many other similar observations are mentioned.

The Turk In Constantinople.

Terrible scenes were witnessed in Constantinople when Mohammed II. captured the city in 1453. When the conquerors entered they slew 2,000 and made slaves of all who took refuge in the sanctuary of St. Sophia. Gibbon records the fate of the 60,000 prisoners: "Male captives were bound with cords, the females with their veils and girdles. The senators were linked with their slaves, the prelates with the porters of the church and young men of a plebeian class with noble maids whose faces had been invisible to the sun and their nearest kindred, and in this common state of captivity the ranks of society were confounded, the ties of nature were cut asunder, and the inexorable soldier was careless of the father's groans, the tears of the mother and the lamentations of the children."

Purifying the Air In Rooms.

To purify the air of offices or sickrooms soak a few pieces of brown paper in a solution of saltpeter and allow them to dry. When desired for use lay a handful of flowers of lavender, which can be got at any drug store, on a tin pan with a few pieces of the paper and light. The aroma is refreshing and agreeable and drives away insects. If hot water is procurable a few drops of oil of lavender in a glass of very hot water is good. It purifies the air at once and effectually rids the room of flies and insects of all kinds.—Scientific American.

Motorist's Luck.

"Well, Blithers, what luck did you have with your new car?" asked Jarroway.

"More than I ever expected," said Blithers. "Just three minutes after the darned thing blew up another car came along with a busted tire, and the owner bought my old tires for $10 apiece."—Harper's Weekly.

No Help.

"I admit that the architecture of this house is something fierce," said the agent, "but just see how handy the place is—only a stone's throw from the station."

"I see it is," said Tomkins wearily, "but I'm such a rotten shot it wouldn't be any satisfaction to me."—Harper's Weekly.

Bit of a Wag.

"I've bought a bulldog," said Parsniff to his friend Lessup, "and I want a motto to put over his kennel. Can you think of something?"

"Why not use a dentist's sign, 'Teeth inserted here?'" suggested Lessup.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

AN ACUTE ABSCESS.

The Way It Forms and the Way It Should Be Treated.

An abscess is a swelling that contains pus. It may be either acute or chronic, and it may either be deeply seated in the body or it may appear upon the surface. The chronic or "cold abscess" is generally of tuberculous origin, whereas the acute or "hot abscess" is the result of an infection by the pus microbes.

The acute abscess comes on suddenly with all the signs of severe inflammation—heat, redness, swelling and presently, as the pus forms, a throbbing pain. The sufferer often feels ill and has a slight degree of fever. In three or four days the abscess begins to soften, and the pain diminishes because the surface skin is being destroyed and the tension upon the sore spot is not so great. By and by there is only one layer left, through which the pus can be seen. This thin layer soon ruptures, and the pus escapes. Relief is immediate, and healing soon begins.

When the inflammation is deeply seated the affair is more serious. In such cases the pus may burrow until it invades some vital structure—the peritoneum or the brain, for instance—and a fatal result is not impossible.

The treatment of abscesses has changed much in late years. Formerly the acute abscess was allowed to form and break without surgical interference unless it threatened life or caused too much distress. Now the physician does not wait for it to pass through the natural stages. As soon as it appears he makes an incision and releases the poison before it has a chance to cause the formation of pus. He cleans the cavity thoroughly and keeps it continually moistened with an antiseptic solution. It must be allowed to drain freely, and moist antiseptic dressings should be applied while the wound is healing.—Youth's Companion.

PUDDLES OF SILVER.

Crude Methods That Are Used at the Mines In Mexico.

It was at Pachuca, Mexico, that the patio system of separating silver had its origin. This system is still followed extensively at the silver mines throughout Mexico. The ore is crushed and worked down to a state of puddle. It is then spread out to a depth of two or three feet over the paved floor of the courtyard, or patio. To this mass sulphate of copper is added in powder, about fifteen pounds of sulphate to 3,000 pounds of puddle. This is trodden into the puddle by horses. Several gangs of old, worn out horses or mules, about twelve in a gang, are seen in various parts of the patio, being driven round in circles to tread in the sulphate.

On the next day 6 per cent of common salt is added and in two more days 100 per cent of pure quicksilver or as much as the assay of the ore shows is required. This mass is then trodden up by horses for fifteen days. It is then wheeled to a large tank through which passes a rapid stream of water. This washes away the clay, leaving the silver and quicksilver. This residuum is poured into cone shaped canvas bags through which most of the quicksilver runs out, and what remains with the silver is passed off with the vapor by means of heated retorts.

None of the quicksilver is lost, and even the vapor is brought by cold water to its original state and used again and again. The quicksilver soon rots the hoofs of the horses and the mules, but the Mexicans themselves do not seem to be much the worse for it, even though they wade around in the puddle for days at a time.—Harper's Weekly.

A Cinder In the Eye.

Who hasn't had difficulty in dislodging a cinder from the eye? Sometimes one can succeed with a corner of a handkerchief, but frequently the cinder is too deeply imbedded to be got out in that way. It would be hard to find a more sticky substance than chewing gum. The next time you see any one with a cinder in his eye just chew a piece of gum till it becomes soft and pliant, twist it to a fine point and you will find as soon as you touch the cinder with it out the cinder will come.—Leslie's.

Her Request.

"Father," said the fair, timid young girl, "my William is coming to see you this evening, and I beg you will allow me in his case to reverse my usual request to you."

"What is that?" asked the father suspiciously.

"When he comes," she sighed, as a pearly drop rolled down her cheek, "please don't foot this bill."—Baltimore American.

THE DEATH PACT.

Did Rubinstein Keep His Word With His Former Pupil?

Writing her memories of Anton Rubinstein in Harper's Magazine, a former pupil tells a strange story of the great pianist's death.

"One wild and blustery night I found myself at dinner alone with Rubinstein, the weather being terrific even for St. Petersburg. The winds were howling round the house, and Rubinstein, who liked to ask questions, inquired of me what they represented to my mind. I replied, 'The moaning of lost souls.' From this a theological discussion followed.

"'There may be a future,' he said.

"'There is a future,' I cried—'a great and beautiful future. If I die first I shall come to you and prove this.'

"He turned to me with great solemnity.

"'Good, Lioschа; that is a bargain, and I will come to you.'

"Six years later in Paris I woke one night with a cry of agony and despair ringing in my ears, such as I hope may never be duplicated in my lifetime. Rubinstein's face was close to mine, a countenance distorted by every phase of fear, despair, agony, remorse and anger. I started up, turned on all the lights and stood for a moment shaking in every limb till I put fear from me and decided that it was merely a dream. I had for the moment completely forgotten our compact. News is always late in Paris, and it was Le Petit Journal, published in the afternoon, that had the first account of his sudden death.

"Four years later Teresa Carreno, who had just come from Russia and was touring America—I had met her in St. Petersburg frequently at Rubinstein's dinner table—told me that Rubinstein died with a cry of agony impossible of description. I knew then that even in death Rubinstein had kept, as he always did, his word."

HE WAS GAME.

An Experience of Bob Taylor When He Started Out to Lecture.

"When the late Senator Bob Taylor first went upon the lecture platform he was in bad financial fix, but if a crowd of his down in Taylor, Tex., had known it we would not have played such a mean game on him," said Colonel Albert W. Carpenter of the Lone Star State.

"Little did we know at the time of the glorious nature and generous soul of a man who made half a million dollars and died penniless.

"What we did was to dragoon the orator after the delivery of his speech into joining an absurd sort of secret society. As a part of the ridiculous initiation he was sworn to set up a dinner to all present immediately on the adjournment of the lodge. There was a good big crowd of us, and the eating and drinking came to just about $100, or exactly what Bob Taylor had netted by his talk. Subsequently he confessed to a friend that after paying the score he had barely enough cash to enable him to pay railroad fare out of the town.

"A year later he came back to our burg, and the whole community turned out to hear him. Never did a man get a more flattering ovation in a small village. The profits of his lecture this time were $800. Before leaving us somebody reminded him of his previous visit, whereupon the genial Bob laughingly inquired what motive had animated us in thus despoiling him. 'We just wanted to see, governor, if you were game,' spoke up one of the townsmen, and in recounting the affair later Bob Taylor always added, 'You can bet your life I was glad that I had proved game.'"—Los Angeles Times.

BRITISH REPULSE ENEMY COUNTER ATTACK

Finland Threatens To Declare War Against The Allies

INEFFICIENCY AND CONFLICT OF AUTHORITY ARE SAID TO BE THE REAL REASONS

Not Much Change in the Quebec Situation—Only Thirteen Reported Out of a Draft of Four Hundred Called

OFF TO THE WOODS

Special to the Examiner:

MONTREAL, July 5.—A conflict between the Department of Militia and the Department of Justice, voiced by Col. Machin a few days ago appears to have given the impression that the Military Service Act will not be very rigorously enforced until questions of jurisdiction are settled. This accounts for the announcement yesterday that of 400 draftees called, only 13 reported, while altogether the number of defaulters runs to one thousand.

The mere passing of the Military Service Act did not, of course, turn those who objected to it into enthusiastic conscriptionists, and many parents are still doing their utmost to keep the boys back. Nothing has helped them more than the inter-departmental scrappings and the changing of authority.

"The Dog Days."

While Chief Belanger and his raiders were around recruits came in quickly, and defiance of the law, it was felt, would have only one result. Now there is a feeling that the pressure is off, that "dog days" are on, and that nobody cares very much what happens around here.

This may be a great mistake, and the defaulters may waken up some morning to find themselves in serious trouble, but at present there is slight indication of activity, and there is a general impression that something has to be settled and more changes must come about before vigorous action will be restored and Quebec Province resume her share in the work of fighting the Boches.

In rural districts there are many defaulters who are absolutely defiant, and those who have not already taken to the woods openly announce their determination to do so if sent after.

There is no disposition here to lay the blame on the French Canadians. Inefficiency and conflict of authority are responsible.

Conflict of Opinion.

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., July 5.—There appears to be some conflict of opinion at Ottawa as to the draft situation in the province of Quebec. To understand that conflict, it is necessary to remember that there are two distinct phases to the draft. Under the Military Service Council men are called out by the Registrar to report under the Militia Department. Men are taken care of when they have reported or apprehended if they fail to do so. Formerly the apprehension of defaulters was the duty, the Dominion police being employed for the work. Now it is the work of the provost marshals.

The Defaulters.

It is contended by the military authorities in Quebec that the men are not being called out as speedily as they can be accommodated. The registrars on the other hand claim that they are being called out with all expedition. In fact it was recently stated that in the Montreal district alone men were being called out at the rate of 400 per day. Just what proportion of these actually reported is not stated, but up until recently the percentage was declared to be satisfactory. But the Military Service Council hold that after the men have been ordered to report the task of actually securing them is one for the militia authorities. Hence, apparently, a conflict of opinion which does not conduce to results.

Widely Scattered.

It is stated by the Militia Department that there are about 4,000 defaulters in each of the Quebec Province districts, Montreal and Quebec. Many of these are in the backwoods, but every effort is being made to get them out. But the woods of that province are not the only ones harbouring defaulters. The Ontario woods also have them, as also have the Alberta woods for that matter. They are, however, being gradually gathered in.

ALL OBJECTIVES WERE ATTAINED

Fifteen Hundred Prisoners Taken by the Allies in Early Morning Battle.

(By William Philip Simms—United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 5. — The battle east of Menines this morning is designed to occupy a niche in history although it may be considered a small engagement.

There the Australians, aided by American detachments, fell upon Wilhelm of Hohenzollerns' men and signally defeated them in a surprise attack at daybreak, taking 1,500 prisoners. All objectives were attained and the Allied losses were light.

The attack began without artillery preparation. Two minutes before the troops went over the British guns began a bombardment. A smoke screen quickly covered the battle front from the Ancre to the Luce (a front of about twelve miles, extending north and south of the Somme).

Suddenly a great number of tanks which had been brought up secretly during the night emerged on the smoke cloud in the center before the terrified Huns. The latter resisted only weakly, holding up their hands and crying "Kamrad."

Behind the tanks came the infantry, moving forward steadily and occupying Hamel village and Vaire and Haeml Woods.

SOCIALISTS ARE OPPOSED

German Socialists Want the Peace Question "Clarified"—Refused to Vote.

"MILITARY VICTORY"

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, July 5. — Philip Scheidemann, leader of the majority Socialists, replying in the German Reichstag on Wednesday to Vice-Chancellor Payers Reproof for Socialist opposition to Government measures, declared, "We will co-operate with the Government only if the peace question is clarified."

He declared that the greatest military victory, by itself, will never bring peace, only an armistice.

Scheidemann's action is regarded as important, as it was the first time during the war that the Majority Socialists had refused to vote for the Government Budget. It is bound to produce a far-reaching effect on the people.

Hired Man Jumped Contract to Work 8 Months on Farm

In the Division Court this morning, Judge Huycke dismissed the appeal of a farm hand for $37 in wages and granted him $12, which the farmer, whom he had abruptly left, had paid into court.

The hired man was engaged in April, and contracted to work with the North Monaghan farmer for eight months, at $35 a month for five months, and $45 for the three busiest months of April, July and August. Without any complaint or notice, he packed up his belongings and left in May.

The defendant advanced the defence that the hired man had broken his contract, and thereby forfeited a full claim to wages. The farmer paid into court $12, which he said was more than a fair wage balance after he had deducted from the hired man's wages the loss occasioned by breach of contract to work eight months.

After hearing the evidence, Judge Huycke dismissed the hired man's claim, but allowed him the $12 the farmer had voluntarily paid into court.

REPUDIATES THE PEACE TREATY

The Russian Assembly, Although Dissolved, Still Meets Secretly

(By Ed. L. Keen—United Press Service).

LONDON, July 5.—Alexander Kerensky, former Russian Premier, and the factions he represents, still regard Russia as at war with Germany, and will do everything in their power to be re-established the Eastern front.

This declaration was made to the United Press to-day by Dr. David Soskice, Kerensky's private secretary, which may be regarded as the most authoritative exposition and interpretation of Kerensky's attitude.

"Kerensky denies the right of the Bolshevik usurpers to be considered as the voice of Russia," said Soskice. "That belongs only to the constituent assembly, which has repudiated the Bolshevik regime and the separate peace negotiations of the Bolsheviki.

Universally Hated.

Kerensky declared Bolshevikism is now universally hated by the masses as well as the classes. It has lost the support of the workmen as well as the peasant. Its days are numbered.

If the final blow against the maddest tyranny Russia has ever known is delayed, it is because the democratic parties have to grapple with not only the Bolsheviki but the results of their destructive work—famine, anarchy and universal chaos. The task is colossal, combining the overthrow of tyranny with organization of supplies and the reconstruction of the Russian front against the German armies.

LEGISLATION THAT FAILS.

The most ridiculous feature of the Sunday restrictions in regard to restaurants, is that the sale of ice cream, the stopping of which was the object of the council's legislation, will still continue during certain hours on Sunday, while the legitimate restaurants have been forced by reason of the restrictions, to close their doors altogether. The aldermen went gunning for the ice cream parlours—a number of which under the protection of an eating house license, have been keeping open all day on Sunday, and selling ice cream and similar refreshments. To put an end to this practice, council amended the eating house bylaw so that all places operating under a restaurant license could only remain open during meal hours on the Sabbath.

And what is the result? The regular restaurants, at which hundreds of citizens take their meals, and which furnish accommodation for tourists and visitors, are unable to carry on under the restrictions. They claim that it is an expensive and troublesome effort, inasmuch as they have all the expense of keeping on fires, burning gas and paying wages for a few hours business, and consequently have decided not to open their doors at all on Sunday. On the other hand the ice cream parlours, who have nothing to cook and no fires to bother about, open from 12 until 2 p.m., and from 5 to 7 p.m., every Sunday, and the sale of ice cream during these hours goes on as merrily as ever.

In Toronto, the Police Commissioners, to stop the sale of ice cream, have decided to close the ice cream parlours, and the restaurants have not been interfered with. Here the council tried to do the same thing by striking the restaurant hours, and have succeeded only in closing the restaurants while the sale of ice cream can be carried on for six hours on Sunday.

The legitimate restaurants were prepared to refrain altogether from the sale of ice cream and drinks on the Sabbath if they were allowed to furnish meals without restriction.

The names of Ald. Worth and Jones, the only two members of the Council who were broad minded enough, and possessed of sufficient business intelligence to vote against this foolish and puritanical regulation, should be noted by the citizens on the Sabbath.

FLYING CANADIANS.

For some reason or other the Dominion government has not seen fit to inaugurate a distinctly Canadian Air Force, although Australia has carried out such an enterprise. However, Canadians have done magnificent work with the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Force, and it is therefore pleasing to note that Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of the Overseas Military Forces of Canada is endeavouring to secure adequate recognition of the services rendered by these gallant young flyers. As a preliminary step arrangements have been made to group all the names of Canadians in the Royal Air Force in a special Canadian section. This will not affect the grouping of Canadians in the Air Force or interfere with their work at the front, but will enable a record to be kept of what they are accomplishhing so that their identity may not be lost in the Imperial service. It has also been decided to provide a special distinguishing badge for all Canadians serving in the Royal Air Force to wear on their uniform.

These arrangements will be approved of by Canadians generally. No fewer than 14,000 Canadians, Premier Borden announces, are enrolled in the Royal Air Force, and it is proper that the records of the Canadian flyers should be kept so that the people of the home land may be able to learn something of the glorious work they are doing at the front. Canada has produced the world's greatest airman in Major Bishop, and his astonishing exploit of winning the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross was so stupendous that publicity could not be denied in his case. But there are hundreds of other Canadians doing wonderful work in the air, and the Canadian people are not allowed to hear of their exploits. For instance, it is currently reported that a young Carleton Place, Ont., aviator, was responsible for bringing down the crack German flyer, Baron Von Richtofen. If this statement is true there does not seem anq reason why the people of Canada should not be told of the feat and the Canadian flying man given credit for his work.

Under the new arrangement, the Air Minister has agreed to supply the Canadian Overseas Ministry with full information regarding all specially distinctive exploits of Canadian airmen, and especially concerning those to whom decorations are awarded. This is a step in the right direction and should result in a better recognition of the great services that are being performed by the Canadians in the Royal Air Force.

THE COAL SITUATION.

In the midst of the confusion over the coal situation brought to a head by the deputations which waited on the City Council on Tuesday night, can any one throw any information upon the action of the Canadian Railways War Board in issuing the following bulletin to the Canadian people?

"Though coal is dear, money scarce, and winter remote, your coal bin concerns the nation even more than it concerns you. YOU have only to get the money to buy the coal. The NATION has to tote it to you from the mines. Somewhere you can get the money. Nowhere—unless from you—can the nation get the cars, engines, men and trackage to handle as fast as it must, all next winter's war traffic, in the face of snow, ice and zero weather, plus the coal for you.

"To-day in shirt sleeves, the Canadian railways are preparing for the blizzards and the zero weather next winter. THE MINES HAVE THE COAL, THE ROADS HAVE THE CARS, THE WEATHER IS FAVORABLE FOR TRANSPORTATION, THE DEALERS ARE READY, but it is you that have the cellars. And the cellars are the deciding factor, since neither the dealers nor the roads can store the coal for you. PLEASE OPEN YOUR COAL BIN WINDOW."

The people of Peterboro are in a position to inform the Railway War Board that as far as they are concerned, the cellars are ready, and the coal bins have been open for the past three months. But where is the coal?

If the mines have the supply and the railways the necessary cars, as the War Board points out, who is holding the coal? That is the question that the Canadian people would like the Fuel Controller to answer. Are the dealers holding it, or have many people in spite of the hoarding regulations, been able to secure more than their normal supply?

There is little use in the Railway War Board advising people to open their coal bin windows. Many people have been endeavouring for months to secure their coal for next winter, without any success. Some dealers refuse to accept orders, but tell inquirers that everything will be all right. Promises, however, will not heat the homes of Peterboro next winter, and something will have to be done, and done quickly, if last year's suffering is not to be repeated.

If the War Board's announcement is founded on facts, there is something seriously wrong in the situation and the country looks to the Fuel Controller for action. The regulations as laid down were intended to equalize distribution and prevent discrimination, and if carried out should achieve these objects. But are they being carried out?

In the meantime the Railway Board's advice seems to be unnecessary. The consumer needs no such warning—he is alive to the danger of the situation and is looking forward with a great deal of apprehension to next winter.

One fact is certain, and that is that Canada will have to get along with 80 per cent. of the normal supply of coal because the United States' Fuel Administration has cut the country's allotment by twenty per cent. The Canadian people depend upon the Fuel Controller to see that the 20 per cent. coming to Canada is equitably distributed.

IT PAYS to advertise in a good newspaper of proven quality.

NOTHING FOR THE WIDOW.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Canada's refusal to provide a pension for the widow of Private Tarrington and his eight orphan children was proclaimed last Saturday, which was also the date upon which Canada's glory shone round about the words of a proclamation to the effect that a procession of twenty-five Canadian journalists was abroad in the lands of Britain, France and the western front. What is the relationship between the non-supply of a pension to Mrs. Tarrington and the supply of $100,000 for travelling expenses for the useless journeyings of a calithumpian procession of journalistic deadheads? Only this—that the Government which is not ashamed to refuse a pension to the widowed wife and eight orphaned children of a soldier, is also not ashamed to nominate the deadhead excursionists who are to voyage the ocean and perambulate the British Isles and the war front at a cost of about $100,000 to the overburdened British taxpayers.

FEET USED TO BE LARGER.

A Modern No. 6 Shoe Would Have Fitted an Ancient Greek Belle.

Artists assure us that no Greek sculptor would have ever dreamed of putting a nine inch foot on a five and one-half foot woman. The types for the classic marble figures were taken from the most perfect forms of living persons. Unquestionably the human foot, as represented by the ancient sculptors, was larger than the modern one; and, in fact, the primitive foot of all peoples whereof we have any record, either of statuary or otherwise, was considerably larger than the restricted foot of later times.

The masculine foot, forming an approximate average of four different countries, was about twelve inches long. This would require at least a No. 10 shoe to cover it comfortably. The average masculine foot today is easily fitted with a No. 8½ shoe and is therefore not above ten and seven-sixteenths inches. Now, by the old sculptural rule of proportion, a man five feet nine inches in height should have a foot eleven and one-half inches long, or one-sixth his height. It was of no great consequence what size sandal he wore, but he would have required a modern shoe of at least a No. 10½ for a minimum fit or a No. 11 for real comfort.

For women, allowing for the difference in the relative size of the sexes, which was about the same then as now, a woman of five feet three inches in height would have had a foot ten inches long, requiring a modern shoe of the size No. 6 as the most comfortable or a No. 5½ as the limit of comfort.—Harper's Weekly.

SALLY'S MISTAKE.

It Cost Her a Rich Husband and Gave London Guy's Hospital.

That bequests to individuals and to public benevolences are frequently the result of a mere whim or of caprice has no better illustration perhaps than the case of Thomas Guy, who built and endowed the great Guy's hospital of London at a cost of £238,268 nearly 200 years ago.

Guy had a maid servant of strictly frugal habits, who made his wishes her careful study. He resolved to make her his wife. The necessary preparations were made for the wedding, and among others many little repairs were ordered by Mr. Guy in and about his house. The latter included the laying of a new pavement opposite the street door.

It so happened that Sally, the bride elect, observed a piece of pavement beyond her master's house that required mending, and of her own accord she gave orders to the workmen to do this.

This was done in the absence of Mr. Guy, who on seeing more work done than he had ordered was informed that the additional work had been done by the mistress' orders. Thereupon Guy told Sally she had forgotten her position and added: "If you take upon yourself to order matters contrary to my instructions before we are married what will you not do after? I renounce my matrimonial intentions toward you."

Deadly Venom of the Cobra.

A full sized cobra is able to eject enough venom at a single full and complete bite to kill about twenty men. The Indian cobra yields as much as twenty drops, and Dr. Hanna mentions having obtained as much as twenty-eight drops.

In experiments with the venom of the cape cobra F. W. Fitzsimons, an expert, found that one drop diluted in a little water and injected into the tissues of the leg of a large monkey killed it in half an hour's time. A fraction of a drop was sufficient to kill a rat and a fowl within an hour. Judging from the effects of cobra venom on the higher animals, Mr. Fitzsimons considers that one full drop is a fatal dose for a strong, healthy man.—Westminster Gazette.

A Cure.

"Do you believe appendicitis can be cured without an operation?"

"My case was."

"How'd you do it?"

"A friend who had suffered told me what his operation cost him, and as soon as he had finished all my symptoms had departed."—Houston Post.

Very Appreciative.

East End Clergyman anxious to interest lady in the poor of his parish after visit to tenements—Well, what do you think of the life these poor people lead? Awful, isn't it? Society Lady (who thinks everything a craze)—Dreadful. I'd no idea. But isn't it rather overdone?—London Punch.

TOO MUCH COMPETITION.

Disappointed Students In Japan Driven to Suicide.

According to Rev. Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, who has lived long in the Far East, suicides among Japanese students are probably more prevalent than among any other students in the world. The causes he mentions are: First, the high strung nerves and exceptional sensitiveness to anything that may be regarded as a personal humiliation; and, second, the extraordinary competition among students to secure places in the Government schools.

Dr. Gulick also notes the three causes given by the Christian Literature Society, of which he is a member, namely: The struggle for existence, the handicap of poor physique, and the absence of an enlightened faith.

As to student suicides due to failure in examinations, it may be noted that in Japan it is not easy to enter any schools. Of the boys 13 and 14 years old who strive by competitive examinations to enter the middle schools, only 61 per cent., we learn, though intellectually qualified, are admitted. The rest are excluded from lack of room. In Tokio the annual applications for admission to the higher institutions are several times greater in number than can be admitted. A year ago more than five hundred youths were refused admittance to the Doshisha, the only Christian university in Japan, entirely because of lack of accommodations.

It is interesting to compare the above with the statement that suicides among German school children are widespread. This leads to the conclusion that these catastrophes, both in Japan and Germany, may be due to still another factor than those mentioned, namely, to the ingrained teaching of materialism. If boys and girls are taught that material success is the measure of life, and do not achieve it, they naturally feel that life is a failure.—The Outlook.

Making Room For All.

An Irish conductor on the Payne avenue line was trying to make room for more passengers in his car during the rush hour the other night. As reported by a more or less truthful witness, this is what he said:

"Will thim in front plaze move up so that thim behind c'n take th' places av thim in front an' lave room f'r thim that's neither in front nor behind?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST ROBERTS

Montreal Vigilance Association Official Accused by Slander Trial Witness.

MONTREAL, July 3.—Charges that John H. Roberts, former paid and now Honorary Secretary of the Dominion Alliance and high in the Counsels of the Vigilance Association, had adopted $300 as "protection money" and had been guilty of immoral conduct in her disorderly house, were made by Edna Robinson, testifying this morning in the $10,000 slander action brought by Mr. Roberts against ex-Controller E. W. Villeneuve.

A cheque for $150, drawn by Mrs. Robinson on the Bank of Commerce in favour of "Jack Travers," was produced by Mr. McKeown, and the witness identified it as one she had given to Mr. Roberts in April of last year. She claimed that it was part of a payment of $300, the balance of which was cash given Mr. Roberts as protection. Mrs. Robinson explained the need of protection by the statement that "her gentlemen friend was in the gambling business."

Later in her evidence Mrs. Robinson made other charges against Mr. Roberts, one to the effect that he had spent the night at her house with a burlesque actress.

Women Accused of Perjury.

At the close of the proceedings this afternoon Edna Robinson was arrested on a charge of perjury, lodged by ex-Police Captain Savard. She was admitted to bail in the sum of $4,000.

ITALIANS WERE SUCCESSFUL IN YESTERDAY'S ATTACK

Austrians' Small Bridges Across the Piave Were Set on Fire By Burning Petrol Boats.

PRISONERS TAKEN

Special to the Examiner:

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES, July 5.—The Italian attack on the Lower Piave yesterday was preceded by one of the most formidable bombardments of the present campaign.

Some of the Austrians' small bridges were set fire by floating burning petrol boats down the river. The larger bridges were destroyed by the artillery.

Italian troops surrounded and captured several groups of the enemy among the many canals in this region.

Four Street Cars Withdrawn Because Of Power Breakdown

One of the generators in the Hydraulic Power Station broke down this morning, causing a temporary reallotment of power in the city until repairs are completed. Mr. H. O. Fisk, superintendent of the Utilities Commission, stated that the machine was put out of commission in Sunday night's storm. It was rewired, but broke down again to-day, as a result of the effects of the injury from the electric storm. The George street store lights were off until noon, and the Examiner was idle until that time. The load is further lightened by four street cars being taken out of the service, which is reduced to one car on the C.G.E. and Charlotte street lines, three on George street, and none on the Jackson Park stub.

Owing to the fact that the transformer station near the foot of Simcoe street is not yet finished, the power system could not react as spontaneously as it ordinarily would to the elimination of this particular generator. The available surplus of kilowatts could not be called into use. However, this is only a temporary obstacle that will be removed with the completion of the transformer substation.

Indians Will Make Own Registration

Chief's Firmly Stand Upon Their Position as Wards and Allies

BRANTFORD, July 4.—The Six Nations Indians Council of Chiefs has decided to take a registration of its own on the reserve near Brantford. A special form has been drafted, and will be submitted to every resident of the reserve to sign. The Council is firmly standing against the enforcement of the Dominion Government registration, and will fight the case of Wesley Martin, who appears in the Police Court here on Monday on a charge of not registering. Simcoe and London counsel have been secured to defend him. The Indians claim that as "allies of the British Crown" and wards of the Canadian Government, the Canadian Government has no power to enforce such measures as conscription or registration upon them. Such action can be taken only by the Chiefs' Council, on representations of the need from the Vice-Regal representative of the King himself.

Committed For Trial On Sedition Charge

WALKERTON, July 4.—Moses Filsinger, Reeve of Carrick a township which is peopled largely with Germans, was arrested before Magistrate James Tolton here this afternoon on the charge of having made treasonable and seditious utterances before a number of individuals in the village of Mildmay.

The information was laid against Filsinger by Dominion Police J. E. Grieves and T. A. Muxworthy, of London. According to the evidence adduced at the trial, Filsinger said to Mrs. Jacob Schmidt and her mother, Mrs. Susan Kloepfer, at the latter's home in Mildmay before Dominion elections last December, that they were shipping the women overseas by the carload for the men to use.

The evidence also showed that on a later occasion he told two men in Mildmay that those they were taking over now were sold in England for $8 apiece, like little pigs, by the Borden Government.

At the trial Filsinger admitted saying this, but claimed he had heard it while attending the farmers' conventions at Ottawa and Toronto. Filsinger, who speaks with a rather German accent, has been for some years Reeve of Carrick, a municipality which gave a majority of over 500 against Union Government at the last election.

Upon the conclusion of the evidence the accused was committed for trial, and on the advice of Crown Attorney Dixon, who prosecuted was allowed his liberty on furnishing bail for $500.

WINTER AND WAR

Bitter Cold as a Factor in the Campaigns in Europe.

ARMIES WRECKED BY FROST.

In Most of the Great Conflicts For a Century Past Icy Weather Has Played a Prominent Part—Napoleon's Disastrous Invasion of Russia.

War is bad enough under the best of climatic conditions, but when war and bitterly cold and icy weather mix the suffering is woefully intensified. And yet there has hardly ever been a European war on a big scale in which General Jack Frost has not taken a hand.

Go back a century. Eighteen hundred and twelve was the year when Napoleon made up his mind to invade Russia. Before starting he was careful to inquire of the experts at what date winter usually set in in southern Russia. They told him the middle of December.

It was on June 24 that he invaded Russia with 600,000 men, and he reached Moscow on Sept. 14. That night fire broke ont, and within five days the city was burned to the ground. Even then he remained until Oct. 18 before commencing his retreat.

In the last week of October began the worst frost which Europe had known for three generations. The Thames froze from its source to the sea. The Seine, the Rhine, the Danube, were all icebound. On the Adriatic, off Venice, was seen the amazing sight of floating ice floes. The Dardanelles and nearby waters were frozen. Jack Frost's icy finger lay heavy even upon North Africa. Drift ice appeared in the Nile, and there were snowstorms in Tripoli and Morocco.

As for Napoleon's huge army, it was almost wiped out. Four hundred thousand men perished. They froze to death in battalions as they bivouacked, and when at last, on Dec. 6, Napoleon reached German soil, out of his whole vast host but 130,000 men were left alive.

During the winter of 1853-4 the Turks were battling for dear life along the Danube against hordes of Russians. In the following September 25,000 British troops, a similar number of French and 8,000 Turks were landed in the Crimea.

Again came a terrible winter, and from the west of Ireland right across into Asia frost fell heavy on land and sea. In London it froze for six weeks without a break. From Jan. 14 to Feb. 24 the thermometer was below freezing every night. In the Crimea the cold was fearful, and the English army, disgracefully catered for, suffered horribly. In all the British forces lost 20,056 men, and of these only 12 per cent fell in battle. The rest were destroyed by cold and disease, aggravated by a rotten commissariat.

In 1870 came the biggest war of the latter half of the nineteenth century, the titanic conflict between France and Germany. By Oct. 29 there were 850,000 German troops in France, Paris was besieged, and there began the four months' investment, with furious fighting on both sides.

Again Jack Frost came to the aid of the Germans. A long spell of intense cold made life almost impossible for the half starved French, while the Germans, who had the whole country to draw on, besides their own excellent commissariat, suffered very little. By January the city was in such a terrible condition that it surrendered.

The date of the last great war before that of 1912 in which Turkey was engaged was 1877. The Turks were attacked by an enormously superior force of Russians, with the czar himself in command. Osman Pasha, with 40,000 men, hurried inland to Plevna, a village which stood upon a hill, and there hastily entrenched himself. The Russians had 100,000 men, but Osman and his dauntless band defeated them in four successive battles.

In November winter set in three weeks earlier than usual. The Turks had no winter clothing and little to eat but maize porridge and horseflesh. They suffered fearfully. At last, on Dec. 9, they determined to break out. There were only 30,000 left, but their rush was so tremendous that they carried three lines of Russian trenches before they were surrounded and forced by enormously superior numbers to surrender unconditionally.—London Answers.

Corrupt Prussian Elections.

The present electoral system is indirect; the ballot is open and verbal instead of secret and written; no real redistribution of seats has been made to conform to the great shifting in population since 1849; and the three-class system, the rock on which the state is built, has come to be grossly and perniciously unfair.

Indirect election to the Legislature and public voting are both agencies through which a dominant class may revamp the popular will to suit its own interests. The former cannot be defended by the junketers themselves, for Bismarck condemned it fifty years ago: "I am convinced that indirect suffrage falsifies the result of elections, and that direct elections would bring more talent to the Chamber." On the other hand, there is a serious attempt to justify the open ballot. In Conservative circles the stock argument in its defence is the salutary oversight which it makes possible over the proletariat, whose caprice and material interests would lead them to abuse the franchise if unrestrained. It is certainly true that the Prussian system leaves little room for the personification, repeating, and ballot-switching with which American elections are afflicted. Elections are more honestly conducted. The Conservatives also claim that the open ballot calls out the highest of all Prussian virtues, die echte Buggertugend. It is a test of the courage of a man's convictions, a challenge to his civic sense of duty.

Such is probably the case where the majority of the electorate is free to speak its own mind. But John Stuart Mill wrote: "If the dependent relations are such that the individual voter in any considerable number or to any great degree is afraid of the public ballot, and either abstains from voting or votes contrary to his convictions, then the secret ballot is the lesser evil." This is the condition in Prussia. Intimidation has been so freely used and so frankly admitted by both Liberals and Conservatives that the Social Democrats characterise the whole election system as one of terror. Butchers, bakers, and grocers are terrorized by Social Democratic housewives who threaten to trade strictly within party lines. Beer gardens are boycotted if the management is of a marked anti-Socialist complexion. In return, Treitschke asked in a widely circulated pamphlet: "Why do not our great manufacturers declare that they will employ no workmen who take part in the Social Democratic agitation?"—Review of Reviews.

Not That Flavor.

"You know, there are some hosts who allow their hospital meats to be seasoned with acerbity."

"Do they? We always use cayenne with ours."

PROMINENT MAN ENDORSES TANLAC

And Menard Says It's the Finest Thing of Its Kind on Earth.

"I am getting better results from Tanlac than from any medicine that I have ever used and I am thoroughly convinced that it is the finest thing in the world for troubles like I had," said M. A. Menard, who resides at 142 Augusta Avenue, Ottawa, in an interview recently. Mr. Menard is a prominent figure among the Dominion government employees at Ottawa, having been the building inspector for four years, and now superintendent of the distribution of public printing.

"Off and on for the past four years," Mr. Menard continued, "I have suffered from a very severe and stubborn case of stomach trouble, which seemed to yield to no treatment as I kept getting worse. Last October I got in such a bad way that everything that I would eat disagreed with me. Shortly after I would eat gas would form on my stomach, causing a tight depressed feeling on my chest. I was constantly belching up sour undigested particles of food, and at times felt like I was choking. The gas would press up around my heart causing sharp pains, and there was such a hurting in the pit of my stomach at times I could hardly bear the weight of my hand there. There was a mean taste in my mouth all the time; my head felt heavy and dull, and I often had dizzy spells. My energy seemed to be all gone; I felt bad and out of sorts all the time, and was getting discouraged because it looked like nothing would give me any relief.

"Seeing Tanlac so highly endorsed I decided to give it a trial and without going into detail about my improvement with each bottle I will just say that I am now on my fifth bottle and am simply doing fine. I have never taken a medicine—and I have tried lots of them—that helped me like it has. I am not bothered with my stomach anything like I used to be and I believe that I am getting rid of the indigestion entirely. All that sourness and fermentation and gas is leaving my stomach and I never feel that tight, choking sensation now at all. I seem to be getting the proper nourishment from my food, as I have gained five pounds in the past two weeks. These splendid results give me confidence in Tanlac and I cheerfully recommend it for what it has already accomplished in my case."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by the W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by the Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle and Son.

PATRIOTIC FUND TO GOVERNMENT

Legislation for Its Handing Over to be Introduced Next Session.

MONTREAL, July 4.— Legislation empowering the Dominion Government to take over the Canadian Patriotic Fund and to furnish from the general revenues of Parliament, the funds hitherto supplied only by public and private subscriptions, will be introduced at the next session of Parliament.

This decision was arrived at by the General Executive of the Patriotic Fund at a general meeting held recently in Ottawa. All members agreed that the greatly increased taxation of the past two years, the enhanced cost of living and numerous other calls upon private wealth incident to the war, would make it unfair to call upon the public for contributions to the Patriotic Fund, and that the Government should be asked in future to vote all the supplies required for the fund.

CANADIANS IN FRANCE WELCOME PRIME MINISTER

Sir Robert Borden Was Given an Enthusiastic Reception Behind the Battle Lines—Visited Vimy Ridge—Blood Red Poppies Cover the Ground.

London, July 5. — In France within sound of the guns, with the airmen holding air marches, a great meeting of Canadians celebrated Dominion Day and welcomed the Duke of Connaught, late Governor-General, and Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister of Canada. In a great natural amphitheatre our national holiday was celebrated with enthusiasm never equalled in Canada and an event and programme never equalled in allied armies. Picked men from every division competed in every known athletic sport. Sir Robert Borden said it was the greatest day of his life. He received a wonderful reception when he arose to address the crowd. Some one called out, "How about leave, Sir Robert?" "Every Canadian has long leave to do his best to beat the Hun," said the Premier, which sentiment was echoed with prolonged cheering by tens of thousands of Canadian soldiers around the Premier.

Sir Robert and his colleagues visited Vimy Ridge, which is now ablaze with blood red poppies covering its devastation and graves of those brave Canadians who effected its capture.

A DOMINION-WIDE STRIKE OF EMPLOYEES OF CANADIAN RAILWAYS APPEARS INEVITABLE

The Increases Demanded Were An Addition to the Payrolls of the Companies of $30,000,000.

CONFERENCE TO-DAY

(Special to The Examiner.)

MONTREAL, P.Q., July 5.—A Dominion-wide strike of employees of the Canadian railways appears almost inevitable, according to well authenticated reports this afternoon. It now seems probable that the strike may affect not only mechanical and car employees of the companies, but other employees as well.

Conference To-day.

There was a conference this morning at ten o'clock in the office of the Railway War Board when eight of the senior members of the executive representing the various Canadian roads were in secret session for two hours. When the meeting adjourned no statement was forthcoming, but it is understood that a communication was sent to the representatives of the mechanical and car department employees, and that a meeting between the Railway War Board and representatives of the employees is now being held in the Place Viger Hotel.

More Wages.

Meanwhile it is stated in labour circles that other branches of the railway employees are formulating demands to be made on the Railway War Board for increased wages, with the alternative of a general strike if their demands are not granted. It is stated that a sum of $30,000,000 would have to be added to the pay rolls of the companies if the men's demands are complied with.

So far as can be ascertained the man do not show very much willingness to compromise.

Two Points.

Two points are looked upon as certain. One is that many increases may be granted, must be taken out of the public in Canada freight and passenger rates. The other is that if the mechanical and car employees are granted the increase asked for the various brotherhoods connected with the operating department, engineers, trainmen, etc., will at once come forward and demand similar treatment. Thus the problem is one of the most complicated. The demands of the men at present, it is said, covers higher wages than are now paid to employees on the railways of the United States.

93RD MAN IS MURDERED BY HUN PIRATES

Pte. Robert C. Keeley of Peterboro Battalion Among the C.A.M.C. Staff on the Llandovery Castle.

According to the official list of the staff on board of the Llandovery Castle, the Canadian hospital ship, torpedoed by the Huns, a member of the 93rd Peterboro battalion was among the victims. 195881 Pte. Robt. Carman Keeley, who enlisted with the Peterboro county unit in the spring of 1916, and went overseas with the 93rd, is listed among the C. A. M. C. staff which sailed from England on the trip preceding the fatal voyage, and it is presumed was on the return journey, although Ottawa announces that a few of the men may have secured furlough when the ship reached Halifax.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving memory of our beloved mother, Elizabeth Pearson, who passed away one year ago to-day, July 5th.

Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother,
How sad you made our home.
In life we loved you dearly.
In death we do the same.
The moon and stars are shining,
On a lone and silent grave,
Beneath lies the one we loved—
But whom we could not save.

—Sister and Brothers.

ANOTHER LAKEFIELD BOY WINS A MEDAL

LAKEFIELD, July 5.—The many friends of Capt. M. P. Kennedy, C.F.A., will be pleased to know that he has won the Military Cross for gallantry in action. Capt. Kennedy was the first man to leave Lakefield for service in the great war. He was attached to the Cobourg Battery, which was ordered to the Pacific Coast, as there was decided danger from the German war ships which were in the neighbourhood. The danger over, the Battery was ordered home and disbanded. Captain Kennedy returned to Lakefield again and resumed his practice as a veterinary surgeon. In May, 1916, he went overseas and has seen two years' service in France. He was promoted from Lieutenant to Captain in France. Lakefield is very proud of his record.

RIVERSIDES WINNERS IN EXCITING BATTLE IN TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Beat Matthews-Blackwell Team 6-4 Last Night—Some Fast Fielding and a Double Squeeze Were Features at League's Fixture at Riverside Park.

In one of the best games of the season, the Riversides handed a 6-4 beating to the Matthews - Blackwell team in a City Twilight League fixture at Riverside Park last night. It was a good battle all the way, with Riversides earning the decision, because they played much the steadier ball in the field and bunched their hits with the errors of their opponents. Kirn on the rubber for the winners had the edge on Carson, who did the twirling for the pork packers, allowing the losers only two singles up to the seventh, while he failed to give a base on balls. Carson was only found for nine hits, but two of his four charities blossomed into runs, while his team mates failed him at critical moments.

Sheehy's fast work at short-stop for the Riversides, splendid throws to the plate by Montgomery and Cook and a double play, unassisted, by Montgomery, who tore in at top speed and gathered in Connor's fly back at second with one hand, and then touched second to nail Murray were the fielding features of the battle.

Riversides practically won the game in the first innings. Sheehy, first up, drew a pass. Carson caught him off first, but in the resulting chase Lowe dropped the throw and the runner reached second. He stole third while Carney fanned and scored on Phelan's roller in front of the plate. Phelan stole second and went to third when Jobbitt let Carson's throw get away. Guerin's hard smash sent him home. Guerin was caught off first, and Murray ended the innings with a grounder to Lowe.

There was no further scoring until the fifth, when Matthews - Blackwell broke into the run column. Cunningham was safe when Field dropped his fly. He proceeded to steal second while Close fanned. Lefave was hit, and Cunningham stole third. On a double steal Cunningham scored, beating McCarney's return of Phelan's throw. Carson fanned, but Phelan dropped the third strike and then threw to third too late to get Lefave. Lowe filed out to Cook and Shaughnessy fanned, leaving the base runners stranded.

The Riversides had a big session in their half. Cook got a life to start with, when Lefave dropped his third strike and then threw wild. Sheehy drew a pass. McCarney beat out a slow one to third, and Cook scored on McCaughey's wide throw to Cunningham. The prettiest baseball of the night was then pulled off. With Phelan at the bat the squeeze play was attempted. The batter missed connections, and Sheehy was caught between the plate and third, but after a thrilling chase got back to third in safety. The same play was tried again and worked perfectly. Phelan laid down a perfect bunt, and while he was being thrown out Sheehy scored, and McCarney, by daring base running, came all the way from second on the play. Guerin singled, and Murray followed with another safety to centre, Guerin going to third. Montgomery's perfect throw beat him to the bag, but McCaughey dropped the peg. Kirn's roller to Cunningham nailed Murray at third, Guerin scoring. Field was safe on Cunningham's eror, but was caught off first to wind up the innings.

Matthews gone one back in the seventh, Cunningham opened with a single, but was forced at second on Close's grounder to Murray. Sheehy's peg in attempting to complete a double was low, and the runner went to second. Lefave grounded to Sheehy for the second out, but Close scored on Carson's hard smash which McCarney was lucky to knock down. Phelan threw Lowe out on a roller in front of the plate.

In the eighth the losers drove two more runners over the plate. Shaughnessy singled over third, and McCaughey followed with another over second. A double steal was pulled off, and then Montgomery smashed a hard roller at Sheehy, who made a clever stop and nailed the runner at first, Shaughnessy scoring. Jobbitt fliel out to McCarney, but Cunningham singled to left and went to second, when Cook let the ball get away from him, McCaughey reaching the plate. Kirn tightened up and fanned Close for the third out.

Lowe singled with two out in the ninth, but Shaughnessy struck out and the game was over

GOOD GAME FOR TO-MORROW.

To-morrow at 2.45 p.m. the Orientals play the Riversides at Riverside Park. This ought to be a good game, as the Solomonites have a brand new $100,000 infield that would give Connie Mack's famous quartette a good tussle, and the Orientals have been winning games lately, showing a lot of speed which is no doubt worrying the champion Thistles.

BOWLING NEWS

At the Water street alleys to-night the Can. Gen. Elec. team and the High Rollers clash in the last fixture of the five pin league. This match will be a good one, and will decide the championship of the league, and also the teams winning second and third places in the league standing.

The Spy In War-Time.

Since the subject of espionage is very much to the fore these days, I will go briefly into the theory and practice of espionage, confining myself to what is known to all general staffs as "secret field intelligence." This polite term is given by a general staff only to its own agents; the agents of the other side are known as spies. This is a little inconsistent, of course.

Whether an intelligence officer is a spy or mere scout depends entirely on how he is dressed at the time. If in uniform he becomes a prisoner of war when captured and as a rule he is confined in a fortress. If he has assumed disguise he faces the firing squad next morning.

The fact that an officer has spied upon the enemy in civilian clothing does not make him the less honored among his brothers-in-arms. On the contrary, being selected for the "secret field-intelligence service" is looked upon by the more daring as a rare distinction. A commander would be court-martialled if it became known that he had failed to avail himself, for reasons of "honor," of important information brought in by his agents and had for that reason mismanaged an action. Espionage is a necessary adjunct to any military establishment—so necessary, in fact, that the spies of the antagonists are done to death when caught.—Geo. A. Schreiner in Harper's Magazine.

Appreciated the Thrill of Intricate Aerial Maneuvers Performed by Experienced Pilot.

Thomas D. Schall, the blind congressman from the Tenth Minnesota district, made flights with Col. Charles Lee of the British royal flying corps in Washington recently. It was the first time he had been up in an airplane.

Congressman Schall was not satisfied with the plain "joy ride" Colonel Lee had given him. When they returned to earth after circling over the city at an altitude of about two thousand feet, the blind representative asked for more thrills.

"Fine! Fine!" he exclaimed, as the machine came to a halt. "But, Colonel Lee, if you wouldn't think me a nuisance, I would like to go back up and turn over."

The biplane was wheeled into position again, and off it shot on a trip of real sensations. Climbing rapidly to about two thousand feet, Colonel Lee started the machine into a series of dips and dives, spirals and other aerial antics calculated to make one's hair stand on edge. To complete the thrills the airplane was made to roll over sideways and then drop into a beautiful nose spin.

The passenger's sightless eyes were blinking with delight when his wife ran onto the field to assist him from the machine.

Unfair Comparison.

"Pa, when is a man well to do?"

"When he can afford to spend as much in a year for his clothes as his wife does in a month for hers."—Chicago Record Herald.

Strange Mania for Gambling

ONE would suppose that a man who had "diced at the dawn with death" in Flanders would, when he got home to England for a few days' leave, prefer to sit out in his garden and smoke, instead of hieing him to a gambling house. Undoubtedly the great proportion of men do, but enough of them are still slaves to the gaming mania that they, together with a number of munitioneers and others who have got rich quick, are now making London a paradise for the parasites who run gambling rooms. According to the correspondent of the New York Sun, who is usually to be relied upon, gambling in London is to-day a curse. In his view the police are unable to act because the bankers and their victims are usually people of influence or prominence, and would rather suffer their losses in silence than face the publicity of appearance in court, even if by so doing they could recover the money that had been filched from them.

One woman, who passes for respectable, is said to have made $100,000 by gambling in her apartments in the past couple of years. Particulars of her game were given a few days ago to a London newspaper by an American woman who concluded her letter by threatening to go round to the place and break the windows when she heard of another game. She says that one American officer lost $2,100, another $1,500 and a Canadian $500 just before leaving for the front. These men were decoyed to the place by girls with whom they had struck up an acquaintance in a more or less informal manner. The charming young ladies, exquisitely gowned and turned out, showed a patriotic interest in the officers, but declined to permit them to squander their pay on dinners or other entertainments. Instead they insisted that the entertaining should be done by their friend, the proprietress of the fashionable gambling dump. The delighted and deluded officers were only too eager to make a call, and one followed another with the result recorded by the correspondent.

There is another man living in a fine country house in a delightful district within easy motoring distance of London who is regarded as a model landlord and a fine type of good old English sportsman, who is said to have an income of $100,000 a year. Before the war he had nothing. He has made his fortune out of the games that go on in his rooms in town. He is a rich man because he was one of the first to make the discovery that the war did not end the gambling instinct, but, on the contrary, had the effect of making daring gamblers even more desperate. He found out that men just back from the front where they had been risking their lives a dozen times a day for weeks on end, were just as anxious to risk their money when they returned on leave, if they had been gamblers before they became soldiers. He was somewhat aided by the natural reluctance of the police to interfere any more than possible with the relaxations desired by officers just back from the front.

The officers, going or coming, form only one class of several upon which the professional gamblers prey. A source of considerable income to them is provided by the great number of people who have made a great deal of money since the beginning of the war, manufacturers and contractors from places other than London. A good many of these people have the notion that the swiftest way in which to scrape an acquaintance with the aristocracy is over a green table, the race track and the dog show being under a temporary eclipse. They do not mind the money they lose so long as they can enter on the credit side of the ledger some titled acquaintance. Again, many of them who have become wealthy in a few months have acquired with their wealth a solid appreciation of their own merits as shrewd business men. They have the notion that they can beat the gambler at his own game, with results that might be foreseen by others not so gifted.

Perhaps the most to be pitied victims of these bridge sharks and roulette wolves are the women. London contains tens of thousands of them, many being women from overseas who are living in England in order to be near their husbands in France. They are lonely. Many of them are wealthy. They are marked down by a gambler or his agent and plans are laid for an introduction. From sheer ennui, or from a desire to relieve an ever-pressing anxiety, they fall ready victims to the card-table, even if before they had known nothing about rolling the bones or kindred gestures. Naturally enough, they are not fleeced at the first seance. They are probably allowed to win, and their charming new friends are most cordial in their felicitations. But presently the real work is put on, and the women are cheated out of all the money that they can lay their hands on. The story is told of one who lost $20,000 before her husband could get back from the front and rescue her.

He Was Satisfied.

The Claytons had recently amassed an immense fortune and Mrs. Clayton intended to spare no effort nor expense to break into society.

"I think," said she to her husband one morning, while she was engaged in arranging a musical program, "that we will have a mezzo-soprano."

"All right, all right," replied Mr. Clayton, "go ahead and see an architect, but don't bother me about it."

Now They Don't Speak.

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE WHEN EXCURSION STEAMER OVERTURNS IN IRISH CHANNEL

Five Hundred and Fifty Persons Were on Board—Nearly One Hundred Unaccounted For —Twenty Bodies Recovered.

TERRIFYING SCENES

Special to The Examiner:

PEORIA, Ill., July 6.—Nearly one hundred persons were unaccounted for early to-day following the sinking of the excursion steamer Columbia in the Illinois river, between Peoria and Pekin, Ill., shortly after midnight.

Twenty bodies had been recovered at daylight, and telephone messages from the scene of the wreck indicated that other bodies had been located between the decks of the vessel.

Five hundred and fifty persons were believed to have been aboard the vessel. Scores of survivors, some of them injured, are being cared for at Pekin.

The Columbia was a three deck excursion steamer, 150 feet long. It was owned by the H. F. Mohl Excursion Co., of Peoria, and was under charter to the South Side Social Club of Pekin.

The vessel was returning to Pekin from Al Fresco, a summer resort. A dense fog lay over the river.

STRUCK A LOG.

With the excursionists dancing on the upper deck to the strains of a band, the Columbia ran on a sand bank. She was promptly backed off, but immediately began to list. Later reports indicated that she had struck a submerged log and a hole had been torn amidships.

Panic-stricken, the excursionists rushed to the port side of the boat, in spite of the efforts of the crew to keep the deck load evenly balanced.

Less than five minutes after she had struck the bar the Columbia overturned in mid-channel and sank.

Dozens of men and women had leaped into the water and others were thrown into the river when the boat turned over. Many were between the decks, and it was believed certain that they went down with the boat.

BABIES PERISH.

Shrieks of dozens of survivors who were paddling about the wreck were heard in the village of Wesley, opposite where the accident occurred. Several small boats put off from the shore to pick them up. Calls for help were sent by 'phone to Peoria and Pekin and launches started for the wreck from those points. A special train carrying nurses and physicians was dispatched from Peoria. Survivors declared that four babies, left on the upper decks during the dancing, perished.

Panic Occurred.

PEORIA, Ills, June 6.—Approximately 150 people were drowned or tramped to death at midnight last night when excursion steamer Columbia carrying more than 50 people struck an obstruction in the Illinois River and sank. The excursion party started from Peka fifteen miles distant from here early in evening, spent several hours at an amusement park near this city and when the return trip to Peka was about half completed the steamer bumped into an obstruction in the Peoria shore in the fog smashing big hole in her bow. The pilo signalled full speed astern and as soon as vessel pulled clear of log or rock she began to settle and within few minutes sank carrying many persons down.

Soon after the steamer struck, panic occurred among passengers and many men, women and children jumped into the water without securing life preservers.

Those who could swim reached the shore which was only a few feet away. The second deck of the boat where the dance hall is located, was crowded when crash came and it was here that many were crushed to death in the panic.

IMMEDIATE INTERVENTION IN RUSSIA IS RECOMMENDED BY ALLIED WAR COUNCIL

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Immediate intervention in Russia, both military and economic, has been urgently recommended by the Inter-Allied War Council and General Foch. The Council report is in the hands of President Wilson, has been since July 3, and Allied diplomats believe he will concur in it.

Should he refuse, the possibility is held out to-day that Great Britain France, Italy and Japan may "go it alone" upon the recommendations of the Allied War Council.

Already British, French, Japanese, and American, marines have landed at Vladivostok, it developed to-day. Ostensibly they went ashore following the battle between the Bolsheviki and the Czecho Slovans Sunday, to protect the Allied Consulates.

With them are 2,500 Dalmatian troops, formerly prisoners of war in Russia, and now under the Italian flag awaiting orders from General Foch.

SEVERE DEFEAT.

LONDON, July 6.—Czecho Slav troops have inflicted a severe defeat on Bolscheviki troops in Siberia.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS GET A TASTE OF THE REAL THING

The "Yanks" Made a Pact to "Do Their Bit" on the Eve of Battle —Were Devoid of Fear.

CASUALTIES LIGHT

(By William Philip Simms — United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 5. — None of the Americans who helped the Australians to take Hamel ever were in a big fight before, yet they behaved so well that Field Marshal Haig wired them congratulations and praise.

The Americans had been in France a few weeks, with the British only a very short while, and went into the line just a few hours before the attack. Yet they were so keen and so devoid of fear that a few were caught in the British barrage—they hurried forward so fast.

The Real Thing.

Before the battle, the American Commander made the following speech: "To-morrow you are going to get a taste of the real thing, with some of the best troops on the Western front. They are not going to halt until every objective is reached. Neither will you. You know you won't let anybody beat you to it."

Each company of Americans, on the eve of the battle, made a pact to "do their bit," groups shaking hands on it. According to the Australians, the Americans did their full share.

Thanks to perfect gunnery and the co-operation of the tanks, the Allied casualties were extremely light. Some of the wounded rode back to the dressing stations on top of the tanks, while others escorted prisoners.

Hun Prisoners.

The prisoners appeared but little depressed regarding their capture. They seemed to know nothing about the extent of America's participation in the war, and were utterly unable to believe President Wilson's statement that there are a million Americans in France.

Several prisoners, however, stated that the idea has been fast spreading among the German troops that Germany will be unable to win.

According to captured documents, train robberies by armed bands of German troops are so common in the enemy's rear areas that at least one company has been obliged to arm its trainmen with light machine guns, and give them orders to shoot on the spot any soldier bandits attacking them.

FRANK JENNE SAYS—

War phases have compelled us to know the value of many things formerly overlooked. One of these is the value of hair as a basis in cloth, instead of wool as a basis. Wool gives a warmth but hair gives a coolness in summer. Hair is the basis of pure Alpaca cloth—such as I am showing for summer suits. Have a look at the samples. "Come to Me."

COTTAGERS ARE NOT SATISFIED

Cottagers Association Seeking Right of Way at Burleigh Falls—A Compromise.

The Hydro-Electric Commission has replied to Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., concerning the right of way mix up at Burleigh Falls. The Cottagers' Association engaged Messrs. Hall and Hall and Mr. Burnham to look into the matter, and the Commission replied that it has considered the whole question and that Mr. Fraser, to whom the right of way was leased, together with the property, will permit the public to use the former path on condition that a gate of sufficient width is put up and kept closed from time to time. This will not be satisfactory to the Cottagers' Association no doubt, as the right of way existed before Mr. Fraser and the Hydro-Electric Commission were ever heard of, and as it is a matter of great concern to many thousands of people in the summer and people of the municipality in the winter, the Hydro-Electric Commission undoubtedly will be asked to reconsider the whole question, which, in its present condition, is, to put it mildly, very unsatisfactory to a very large number of people.

Mr. Burnham has asked Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., to join with him in presenting the matter to the Government.

Fuel Commissioner Edgar met most of the local coal dealers last night in a general conference, particularly dealing with the quantities of coal that have been received in the city during the past two years. Mr. M. L. Campbell, a representative of the Trades and Labour Council, was present, and shared in all the information that was presented.

The total quantities of hard and soft coal received in Peterboro for the past two years were not completed for the reason that one or two dealers were not present. Otherwise the list would have been completed last night.

THE SHADOW OF A GREAT RAILWAY STRIKE STILL HANGS OVER THE DOMINION

The Situation is in the Hands of a Few Officials on Both Sides—Conference This Morning

SITUATION SERIOUS

Special to the Examiner:

MONTREAL, July 6.—To-day the shadow of a great railway strike still hangs over the Dominion of Canada. The destinies of Canadian transportation in the immediate future are in the hands of a group of less than a score of men conferring in Montreal since yesterday morning. At ten o'clock, at the offices of the Railway Board, conferences were resumed between the Executive of the Board and the representatives of the federated trades in the mechanical and car departments of the Canadian railways. It was a sober group of men who went into that conference, and before the meeting the opinion was freely expressed by those on both sides of the argument that there was little prospect of reaching an immediate agreement. The Railway Board had offered the men a modified form of the McAdoo agreement, which has been offered to railway employees in the United States which are now Government controlled. The men had refused this offer, as being very little, if any, improvement on existing wage conditions. Both parties seemed determined.

"What will happen if you are unable to reach an agreement?" was asked Charles Dickie, secretary of the Federated Trades, this morning.

"You know what will happen. You know what happens in such cases," was the reply.

"Would there be a danger of an immediate strike or would there be a conciliation board named by the Government to arbitrate the question?"

"Conciliation board, the Railway War Board, as you know, is a semi-Government organization. It might be called a conciliation board of itself."

No Definite Statement.

No definite statement as to the exact proceedings that would follow a failure of the two parties now conferring could be ascertained, although it was said on both sides that a great railway strike, involving every line in Canada, was imminent, but whether that strike would be called immediately or on a day to be fixed at a future time, no opinion was expressed.

The seriousness of the situation was shown by the solemn faces of the Railway Board members and representatives of the employer alike. Yesterday was a busy and anxious day at the offices of the Board, which kept open until six o'clock last night in an effort to arrive at some sort of agreement. It was expected that the men would return later in the afternoon for a further joint conference, based on the offer made to them earlier in the day by the Board, but they did not come, being engaged in Executive session at their own headquarters, the Alexandria Hotel on St. Catherine Street, during the day. Yesterday sessions were held at the Railway Board Offices, at the Place Viger Hotel and at the Alexandria.

Early this morning Charles Dickie, secretary of the employees' organization, telephoned to Secretary Neal of the Railway War Board, and arranged a conference for the morning. This meeting continued throughout the forenoon.

The men, whose chairman is R. J. Tallon, have asked for a flat increase of wages, designed, as they declare, to cover the largely increased cost of living at the present time. The highest wage asked is 75 cents an hour for mechanics, such as blacksmiths, etc., and the wage of 62½ cents an hour is asked for the classes of workers known as specialists. Helpers are to receive 48@ cents an hour. With this demand goes one for an eight-hour day, as against the present nine-hour day.

The railway companies have declared that these increases are excessive, and that if granted they would bring about an increase in freight and passenger rates. During the prolonged negotiations that have been going on in various parts of the country for some two months, it has been found impossible to reach an understanding, and when the matter finally came up for settlement yesterday before the Railway War Board, that body, after a careful consideration of the traffic situation and the position of the railways, offered the men a proposal based on the McAdoo plan in the United States.

ALLIES PREPARE TO LAND TROOPS IN RUSSIAN PORT

Russian Townspeople in Siberia Welcome the Advance Guard of New Army—Houses Decorated.

ANERICA'S ANSWER

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Allied gathering at Vladivostk has provoked the greatest enthusiasm in Eastern Siberia. Russian townspeople in and near Vladivostk, decorated their houses with Allied flags and staged an enthusiastic celebrations, the cables say.

This reception, coupled with the demands of the anti-Bolsheviki factions, and the Inter-Allied Council, led the diplomats here to-day to take the position that America must yield.

Majority decides.

"The majority has decided," an official said. "The President has its decision. We may come in or stay out. But the majority must rule."

Details of the Bolsheviki-Czecho battle at Vladivostk indicate that the defeat of the Reds was decisive. A fortnight ago the Czechs, acting at the behest of the Allies, issued an ultimatum to the Red Guards to cease arming German prisoners of war. The demand was unheeded. At 10:30 o'clock on the morning of June 30 the Czechs attacked.

Sailors Surrendered.

Six hundred Bolsheviki sailors immediately surrendered. The rest of the garrison took refuge in a blockhouse. Two hours' bombardment forced them to capitulate, those not surrendering reteating to the westward along the trans-Siberian railway. Most of those who escaped are believed to have been Germans. According to advices received here both Great Britain and France expect to land several thousand troops in Siberia. Italy for the present will be represented by the Dalmations, while the Czecho-Slovaks will represent the Balkans. Just what part Japan and China will play, has not been learned. This will be announced after the President gives his decision as to the attitude of the United States.

Diplomatic officials, however, are inclined to believe that Japan's army of 500,000 and China's potential army of nearly a million will be used to the best advantage.

Diplomats here not advised of the Inter-Allied Council's plans, now see why President Wilson failed to mention Russia in his Mount Vernon speech. Seeing that the address would be prepared before the arrival of the Council's decision, friends of the President urged him to say nothing that would in any way commit his country to a definite policy.

THEY MEAN BUSINESS

(London Free Press.)

British seamen will not enter a German port for a period of five years and eight months after the war, because of U-boat crimes. Nor will they tolerate a German on a British ship. And the important thing about this decision is that it will be carried into effect.

AUTHORITIES HAVE NO RIGHT TO SUSPEND THE HABEAS CORPUS ACT

Judgment to That Effect Was Handed Down Yesterday

(Special to the Examiner)

MONTREAL, July 6.—The federal order in council of April 30th last decreeing that the Habeas Corpus Act, is suspended for cases under the M. S. A., when declared to be ultra vires and without effect in a judgement handed down yesterday by Mr. Justice Bruneau. The case before His Lordship was that of Joseph Perlman vs. Lieut.-Col. M. A. Piche, and the Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice. The plaintiff claiming that his mrother, Max Perlman, a Russian subject who came to Canada in 1910, was illegally detained in the barracks by Col. Piche. The Minister of Justice intervened in the case to uphold the Order in Council and to prove it declared that the court had no power to issue a writ of Habeas Corpus nor to maintain such writ and that the Order in Council was binding upon all courts.

The Judgment

The judgment orders the immediate liberation of the man, but as he did not have with him proofs of the fact that he was a Russian, subject when arrested and taken to barracks, costs are not allowed. Proof that Perlman was a Russian subject was made after the arrest.

However, the more important points in the judgment are on the issue of the right of the Governor General in Council to suspend the Habeas Corpus Act.

The cases of some thirteen or fourteen foreigners were directly involved in the decision, they having been bunched together for a test case.

The decision is actually the same as in the Lewis case in Alberta. Although the incidents entering into the cases were different, both developed into a contention that the Federal authorities had not the right to suspend the Habeas Corpus Act, and both courts have decided that they have not that right.

"OVER THE TOP."

"Over the Top," was witnessed last evening at the Grand Opera House by a large audience. The production is one of the best photoplays that has been seen in Peterboro for some time. It is a war picture that takes you right over the top as the title indicates. To-night's performance will be the last. There will also be a matinee this afternoon so that Peterboro theatre goers will have two good chances to see one of the best productions of the season.

IMPORTANT CHANGES.

One of the most important features of the new regulations laid down by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment is the decision to treat as civilians all discharged men who after their return to civil life sustain a breakdown owing to disabilities caused by war service and have to undergo further treatment. Hitherto these men have been re-attested as soldiers and the change will be appreciated by returned men generally, who wil be more inclined to avail themselves of the opportunity for further treatment when they do not have to don the uniform and come back under military discipline.

The new arrangements as to the pay of these men, and also of those undergoing treatment in the sanitoria and hospitals of the Department, will also find favour with returned men as they do away with the necessity of applying to the Patriotic Fund for additional relief and centralize the pay and allowances. It has been provided that in addition to the regular army pay and separation allowance a special allowance in lieu of the Patriotic Fund will be paid as follows: Wife only, $10 a month; wife and one child, $12 a month; wife and two children, $26 a month; wife and three children, $31 a month, up to a maximum allowance of $45 per month for wife and children.

The Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Department has made a good start by adopting these regulations which seem to satisfactorily meet the needs of the situation.

THE ITALIAN RED CROSS.

One week from to-day the citizens of Peterborough are to be given an opportunity to assist a gallant ally of Great Britain, when a tag day will be held in aid of the Italian Red Cross. It is to be hoped that Peterborough will rise to the occasion and contribute a sum that will in some measure at least testify to the gratitude that Canadians should feel for the great assistance that Italy has brought, and is bringing, to the Allied cause. Sometimes we are inclined to forget the services of our allies, and in this respect many citizens have failed to appreciate how much Italy has contributed to the success of the cause for which the Allies are fighting. Suppose Italy had gone into the war on the side of Germany and Austria! Instead of the Austrian army being held on the Italian front, powerless to assist the German effort in France, and likely to hinder that effort by compelling the withdrawal of some of the German troops as reinforcements, the Allied nations would now be facing the united armies of Germany, Austria and Italy, united in an effort to destroy the British and French armies before the American forces could be brought into action in sufficient numbers to affect the situation. The Allies have escaped that peril because Italy chose to fight for democracy and for civilization against the forces of militarism and German kultur. And right valiantly have the Italians fought. From their entrance into the war, they have pinned down a large section of the Austrian army, and since the downfall of Russia, have engaged the whole of the forces of the Dual monarchy. The victory of the Italians on the Piave River last month is the most outstanding exploit on the Allied cause this year, and its effect on the general course of the war should be fully appreciated.

The Italians have proved valiant, sturdy fighters, and they have thrown themselves into the struggle wholeheartedly and without reserve in a spirit that merits the sincere admiration and gratitude of the people of the countries for whose cause they are battling.

The coming tag day gives Peterborough the first opportunity this city has had of showing its appreciation of the work of the Italian armies and people. The money that is to be collected will be sent direct to the Queen of Italy and placed at her disposal, to be used in the interests of the Italian Red Cross for the assistance, not only of the Italians, but of the British and French soldiers who are fighting shoulder to shoulder with them against the Austrians. The cause to be helped is a noble one—the opportunity to show our gratitude to our heroic allies is a chance that should not be missed. Peterborough has contributed liberally to assist her own soldiers—let her now show that she is cognizant of the great services performed by the Italians by rolling up a goodly sum for the benefit of the Italian Red Cross.

Don't forget the date, Saturday, July 13th.

SEND MORE CIGARETTES.

The indignation expressed generally by the press throughout Canada at the suggestion from Mrs. Gordon Wright President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, that the women of Canada should stop sending cigarettes and tobacco to Canadian soldiers overseas, has been so great that there seems little danger of any one acting on the advice of Mrs. Wright. This was only to be expected. The people of Canada have heard so much from the boys at the front of the need of cigarettes and the solace and comfort the soldiers find in these little tubes of tobacco, that they are not likely to pay any attention to the idle talk of fanatics, and the only result of Mrs. Wright's outburst at Ottawa is likely to be an increased supply of tobacco for the boys over there.

The necessity of maintaining a steady stream of cigarettes flowing across the Atlantic is set forth by the Mail and Empire in a forcible article which completely refutes and makes ridiculous the assertions of Mrs. Wright.

John Kendrick Bangs, the American humourist, has returned from a visit to the American front in France. He says that what the soldiers want most are cigarettes, and then news from home. What applies to the American troops probably applies also to the Canadians, and ther can be little doubt that the men over there would rather see their rum ration abolished or their food supplies reduced than be deprived of their cigarettes, Mr. Bangs says, and similar testimony has been given by thousands of others, that the first thing a wounded soldier asks for is a "fag." Whatever physiologists may say about the action of tobacco on the heart or the lungs the wounded soldiers find its effect most soothing. It helps them to bear pain with fortitude; it steadies their nerves; it satisfies some craving or demand that is made upon the nervous system in moments of great danger or hardship. When the men are waiting to go over the top about the last thing they do is to throw away the butts of their cigarettes.

Undoubtedly there are tens of thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, of British and Allied soldiers who have learned to smoke since joining the army. Perhaps as many more were pipe smokers in times of peace, but have found that in war-time a pipe and a pouch of tobacco are cumbersome in comparison with the cigarettes, which can be rolled and lighted in a moment, and which takes up no more space in the pocket than a handkerchief. Cigars for many reasons are not adapted to trench line smoking. So the cigarette has gained ground at the expense of other forms of tobacco, notwithstanding the old prejudice against it. When all is said and done it is the cleanest, cheapest, handiest way to use tobacco, and has proved a boon to millions of our soldiers and sailors. It is to them as much a necessity as tea or fresh meat, and any talk that might tend to cause the supply to be lessened by frightening timid folk at home is talk that the German Government would pay for. We ought to hear no more of it in this country.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

That was a glorious celebration of Independence Day that the Australians pulled off in the capture of Hamel. Incidentally some 1,500 Huns severed connection with the German army and will be guests of the British for the balance of the war.

Wonder if Von Tirpitz heard the splash made by the launching of more than half a hundred new ships in the United States on July 4th.

The Italians are still continuing their successes on the Piave. Peterborough people have a chance to show their appreciation next Saturday.

"What we seek is the reign of law, based upon the consent of the governed, and sustained by the organized opinion of mankind." Such is the admirable statement of Allied war aims as set forth by President Wilson.

Hardware and Metal

The tendency in the hardware markets has all been in the upward direction so far as prices are concerned, says "Hardware and Metal". There has been quite a number of changes in important lines, and indications seem to point to still further advances in other lines.

Lead products are in firm market as a result of the higher prices on pig lead in the primary markets. Lead pipe and lead waste pipe were lines on which higher prices were recorded during the week. Ingot lead was also higher in some quarters.

Ingot tin is very scarce commodity in Canada at the present time, and record prices are prevailing. However, a shipment of tin is expected to reach Montreal in the near future. Spelter is firmer. Price on pig iron will in all likelihood hold unchanged in Canada, as it has been decided to maintain the price in the United States after a conference between the Government authorities and steel and iron interests. The price for igot copper has been advanced to 26c per pound to producers in United States, which will have firming effect on all copper products.

Horseshoes is one of the important lines to be advanced in price. Brushes have also been advanced by one of the large makers to the extent of 10 per cent., and it is probable other manufacturers will also follow. Wrenches, steel squares, molasses gates, galvanized fence wire, roofing paint, roofing slate, pipe unions, hand and breast drills, sheathing, seine twine, paper bags, vises, are some of the other lines to show advances. Trade has been somewhat quiet during the week, as the holiday naturally interfered with the volume of business.

STREET CAR UNION STRIPPED OF OFFICERS BY DISMISSALS

An Unrelated Circumstance, Perhaps, But the Officers in the Union Have Become Unhealthy. Some of the Men Believe—Method of Discharge Created Suspicion.

LOCAL OWNERSHIP NEEDED

Of four street railway employees who have been dismissed within the past six months, three were prominent officers of the Street Railway Men's Union. First the financial and recording secretaries walked the plank, and more recently the president was handed the blue envelope. Up to the present, the offices these men held in the union have not been filled. The recording secretary was a delegate to the Trades and Labour Council, and for months past the street railway men had no representative at the meetings of the Council.

Apparently there has been no scramble among the remaining members for the vacancies. It is not suggested that these men were turned out because of their positions in the Union, but the seeming reluctance of their former associates to succeed them leaves the impression that the offices in the "local" are considered somewhat unhealthy.

As in other branches of labour, the street railway men have on several occasions in the last three years applied for increased wages, and the duty of presenting the claims of the men devolved upon the officers. This fact probably has no connection with their dismissals, but some of the men hold a lurking doubt or two on that point. It is generally admitted by the employees that the reasons given by the management for dispensing with the services of these four men were entirely valid. Apparently they had each broken a rule, but the infractions were not regarded as serious in themselves. However, that may be the deputies of the Union were discharged. Their heads were lopped off, just as finally as if their infractions of the regulations had been of a major order. Probably they were, in the opinion of the management, but the question has been asked whether the maintenance of discipline would not have been secured by warning or reprimand, providing the records of the men had been otherwise good.

The street railway is virtually a public utility, and the public may well claim a right to know not so much the facts of the individual cases, as whether the men received what may be termed a square deal. It is said they were dismissed for breaches of rules that were said to have occurred months before they were notified that they had been removed from the pay roll. This method is excusable, but it seems unnecessarily irritating, if not arbitrary. The final authority in the conduct of the business of the railway rests with the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. If, therefore, there has been in these cases any colour of injustice or unfairness, the responsibility would rest in the Toronto and not the Peterborough office. There is no disposition to charge openly that there has been drastic treatment of the four employees, but there is a rankling suspicion, vague and unformed, that there was some ulterior purpose behind their discharge.

It may be stated that the employees are decidedly reticent about the whole matter. The effect on them has been by no means uncertain, but other Union men have not hesitated to question the procedure, and it is from that source that the developments have been reported.

It is generally conceded that these men were satisfactory employees. Two of them at least were as courteous conductors as the public could desire, and their absence when they first disappeared was often commented upon. Moreover, they were long-service men. They have been replaced by new men, and it has been estimated that this exchange nets the coffers of the system about $600 a year, the difference between four maximum and four minimum salaries, or approximately fifty dollars a month. This may not be a pertinent fact, but has been repeated on the street.

The general question of service might be dragged into the discussion, but for the present it is futile to expect any particular change. The subjects of courtesy, continuation of employment, and other incidentals might be averted to, but the complete failure to secure a little extension in one line, and a satisfactory service in the west end, apart from other details, discourages discussion. Regarding the Union, it has not been wrecked, in fact all the men are members, but it cannot be said that the morale of the men has been bolstered. As a private company the Peterborough Street Railway was quite a compact, efficient concern, and if it is to become a success as a public utility the sooner the city acquires it the better, according to the views of the public that depends upon it. The "absentee ownership" with the head office in the Hydro-Electric Commission's quarters in Toronto, admits many improvements, one of which is a definite local control that can be used to the best advantage of Peterborough, and can be called to account for the sins of the commission, and especialy of omission.

The net earnings of the C. N. R. during eleven months of the fiscal year ending May 31st were only $3,412,000, compared with $9,316,000 for the corresponding eleven months of 1917. Is it not about time that operating chiefs representing the people of Canada, who will have to provide the millions required to meet the fixed charges of the C.N.R. out of the national purse, were placed in charge of the road? The figures made public cry aloud for immediate action.

NEW MEMBER OF WAR VETERANS HAS FIGURED IN MANY ADVENTURES

One of the new members of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, Pte. Walter Wayne, of Johannesburg, South Africa, has had an interesting series of adventures since the war broke out. Here is what a Nova Scotia paper has to say about him:

A Halifax Hero in Yarmouth.

Private Walter Wayne, of Johannesburg, South Africa, is in Yarmouth for a short while, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Parker, Clements street. Pte. Wayne, who is only a young man, having only passed his 21st year, has seen a great deal of active service, fighting on the west and east front of German East Africa. He enlisted three days after the war broke out in 1914, and being a linguist of considerable ability he worked for some time along the German frontier in the secret service, and during this time did much valuable work running down German spies working the boundary. Tiring of this he received his discharge and afterwards served as interpreter for British naval officers carrying out their work. After serving a short while as interpreter he joined the South African Horse and was soon at the front and doing active work. In fighting the Germans in Africa Pte. Wayne lost two brothers and one sister, who was a Red Cross nurse when the Germans bombarded the town of Darcielam. This bombardment Pte. Wayne describes as a most heinous piece of work on the part of the Germans.

Later Pte. Wayne developed a fever, which compelled him to give up, for the time being, a fighter's life, and he with others, Jack Grant and Harry Foster, were discharged and sent to Canada to recuperate. Arriving in Halifax a few weeks ago, they all felt the call to do their bit on the European battlefields. They signed up with the CMC. and were billeted at Wellington Barracks on that fatal morning of December 6th.

When the explosion occurred Pte. Wayne was about to leave his companions to go out of the barracks, and as he opened the door to go out he turned to speak to them, — just then the crash came and the door and casing were blown from their fastenings knocking him down, considerable of the wreckage falling on him. With some difficulty he extricated himself only to find that one of his companions had been instantly killed and the other so badly injured that he passed away six hours later. Pte. Wayne also was badly injured, but he immediately went to the rescue of his companions and succeeded in carrying them out and as far as he could bound up their wounds. He then turned to other rescue work and worked valiantly for six days before he consulted a doctor concerning his own condition. When he found a physician Pte. Wayne asked him to look at his right arm. The X-ray was put upon him when it was found to be severely fractured in two places between the wrist and the elbow, and the elbow badly dislocated.

Not until then had the real seriousness and loneliness in the loss of his two companions dawned upon him, and his doctor advised him to leave Halifax for a short while and sent him to Yarmouth the latter part of last week. On Sunday he made the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Parker who immediately took him to their home, made him their guest and gave him a most happy and cheerful Christmas season, which previously had a cold dreary and desolate outlook. In conservation with Pte. Wayne he expressed his appreciation very freely for the many kind acts that have been done for him during his stay in Yarmouth by the Red Cross and the Yarmouth hospital staff. Particularly to Mr. and Mrs. Parker is he grateful for their kindness in the way they gave up their home to a stranger which afforded him the brightest Yuletide they had ever known.

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

Presentation to Miss Annie Garvey

On Wednesday morning, June 26, the pupils of Sunday School No. 9 assembled to bid farewell to their teacher, Miss Annie Garvey. Miss Garvey, who, for the past two years, has been teaching at the above-mentioned school, has won the love and esteem of both parents and pupils and before severing her connections with them as their teacher, was presented with a handsome manicure set and fountain pen, accompanied by the following address:

Dear Miss Garvey,—We have gathered here to spend the last few hours, during which we are to look upon you as our teacher. It has often been our wish that such a day might never come. Time is certain to bring a change to everybody, and to-day it has brought the pupils of S. S. No. 9, Douro, great sorrow and pain.

During the past two years you have been a source of happiness to our lives, while we, no doubt, have been to you at times a source of great annoyance, but for this we hope you will pardon us. While we are making such a sacrifice as to part with you, we also know that it is causing you great pain to leave us.

Before bidding you a fond farewell we ask you to accept this small token of love and esteem, and ask you not to forget us, but if the opportunity ever presents itself to re-

The Danger Of Thin Blood

If Not Corrected in Its Early Stages Consumption May Follow

In no disease is delay or neglect more dangerous than anaemia, a poverty of the blood. It is very common in young girls and in persons who are overworked or confined within doors. It makes its approach in so stealthy a manner that it is often well developed before its presence is recognized.

But taken in time there is a specific, a tonic medicine which increases the number of red blood corpuscles thus enabling the blood to carry the life-giving oxygen to all the tissues of the body. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have had unbounded success in the treatment of this stubborn disease because of this wonderful property. The correction of anaemic conditions by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is as certain as anything in medical sciences. Miss Jessie McLean, Trenton, N. S., says: "I was as weak as it was possible for any one to be, and yet be able to go about. My blood seemed to have turned almost to water. I was pale, the least exertion would leave me breathless, and when I went up stairs I would have to stop and rest on the way. I often had severe headaches, and at times my heart would palpitate alarmingly. A good friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have reason to be grateful that I took the advice. Soon after beginning the use of the Pills I began to get stronger; and by the time I had taken seven boxes I felt that I was again enjoying good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blessing to weak girls, and I shall always warmly recommend them."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Pretty Blouses For Summer Wear

Midsummer brings more charming blouses to this store. The most recent arrivals seem to have gathered their motive from the fleecy clouds of summer, they are so airy and beautiful.

The model above is the sort of blouse that most women find irresistible-filmy of material and fashionable in design, a delight to behold and to wear. It is made of coral georgette and daintily embroidered in blue, rose and maize silk. Yoke formed by hemstitching in the back, shawl, collar and hemstitched cuffs, price $13.00.

The model on the right is a dear little blouse of flesh colored georgette with such a pretty, distinctive collar made in points with insets of real fillet lace. Tiny tucks and wee silk buttons form a simple and very effective trimming in the front. It is priced at $11.75.

THE CROP PROSPECTS IN PETERBORO COUNTY

The Wheat Crop Will be Light—Oats and Barley Very Promising—What Peterboro County Farmers Have to Say Regarding the Crop Prospects.

The crop prospects in Peterboro County are fair and unless something unforseen happens the farmers will have little to complain of. The wheat crop is a little light in places, and will hardly be up to the average; also the corn crop, which has been backward, owing to the inclement weather.. The oat and barley crops are good. Peterboro county farmers have the following to say regarding the crop outlook.

STRAW IS SHORT.

William J. Crowe, of Cavan Township, says this year's crop is just fair. Last year's crop was far better. The oat crop is the best. The barley is very good but the wheat is light and seems to be stunted, most of the straw being very short. The corn is bad owing to the cold weather and generally the hoe crop is backward. Conditions are not as good this year as last.

OPTIMISTIC REPORT.

Mr. W. H. Kidd of Indian River, who travels up and down the country side a great deal says the crops look excellent, especially the barley which is the best he has seen in years. The corn is poor but that was expected on account of the cold weather. From the farmers he has interviewed, the wheat is fair and not as bad in this part of the country as the farmers near L'Original and Morrisburg report. The oats ought to be a bumper crop.

"I see that they had a bad hailstorm at Madoc, in the neighbouring County of Hastings, and that all the tomato vines were stripped," said Mr. Kidd.

VERY OPTIMISTIC.

Ernest C. Harper of Smith, reports that everything looks as well as can be expected in view of the cold weather that has been prevalent this spring. "The wheat crop is a little light, but I have seen many worse."

He says that the hoe crop is poor and that he is afraid he will have no corn at all.

"The hay crop will be poor this year, too," he added.

WHEAT IS FAIR.

Edward Archer of Smith Township, says that the wheat is fair, although it could be better.

"I never saw a better crop of barley in my life," says Mr. Archer.

"My hoe crop is not bad, although many of my neighours say that their crops are poor."

Further, he says the corn was all killed, but this was expected from the inclement weather which has characterized this spring.

WEATHER TOO COLD.

R. A. Deyell of Otonabee Townsays: No, this year's crop is not as good as former years. Too much cold weather. Why, I'm not going to have any corn at all. The frost has simply killed every head. If my turnips don't turn out any better I'm afraid that I won't have any to ship. The wheat is very poor. The hay will be poor and the barley is just fair. Oats is the only really good crop I have."

POTATOES SMALL.

Charles W. Rutherford, of Emily Township, says that all around there the crops look good. "My spring wheat looks pretty good and so does the oats and barley," he says.

"The barley especially is a good crop. My potatoes are rather small, but there are plenty of them and perhaps they will grow much bigger."

Mr. Rutherford says his corn is the only crop that he could call exceptionally poor."

THE HOE CROP.

"The hoe crops are poor owing to the heavy frosts, and I will not have half the usual crop of corn," he said. "The spring wheat is fair and looks better than most of my neighbours."

"You'd better say that we need lots of help out this way," concluded Mr. Thompson.

EASTERN ONTARIO.

Eastern Ontario reports that the hay crops are light.

Kingston, July 5.—The hay crop throughout the district is reported to be light. The grain is looking well, but corn has not had a good start, and unless real warm weather continues it will not be a success. The early growth of pasture was pretty good, and farmers with dairy herds have done well at the cheese factories considering the difficulties experienced in obtaining mill fodder, which they usually depend upon in the early summer to accelerate the milk flow.

Haying is expected to commence within the next two weeks.

PETERBORO SOLDIER HAS A GOOD WORD FOR THE Y.M.C.A.

Gunner Clark Thinks the Great War Veterans Are Mistaken—"Best Thing That Ever Came to France."

WHAT THEY DO

Mrs. William Clark, 633 Rogers street, has received a very interesting letter from her son William, in view of the controversy that is raging around the Y.M.C.A. Gunner Clark enlisted in the 4th Field Battery of the First Contingent and was wounded badly at the second battle of Ypres:

France,

Dear Mother,— We have had very little Canadian mail lately, but it is beginning to come in better the last couple of days.

I was over to the ball game this afternoon and our team won 17 to 2. Some score, wasn't it? We have a good team. We have had fine weather here for the last couple of weeks.

I must say a good word for the Y. M.C.A., as I see by the papers that the Great War Veterans are knocking them pretty hard in Canada, but I think they are mistaken this time, for all of the boys out here think that the Y.M.C.A. is the best thing that ever came to this country. They run a canteen where one can buy canned fruit, tobacco, biscuits and many other things that we need at Canadian prices. Whereas, if you go to civilian stores or another canteen you have to pay about double the price. When there is a scrap going on the 'Y' is right on the job with lots of hot tea, coffee and biscuits, and in the summer cool drinks, such as lemonade and lime juice. They are also great promoters of sport. They supply baseball outfits to every Canadian unit in France free, also good prizes are given at the sports we hold.

Now I will close for this time, trusting to hear from you again soon, and with best wishes to all, I am, ever,

Your loving son,
Gunner W. J. Clark, No. 42080.

HOW THEY OPERATE.

Have you ever watched the bugs eat? They don't all do it the same way. Some bite out small portions of plants, then chew and swallow them in quite a human way. Other bugs belong to the nursing bottle class and suck their food—the juice or sap of plants. Most bugs are partial to tender young garden plants.

The chewing class is killed by feeding them with poisons; the sucking class by remedies which kill by coming in contact with their bodies and smothering or dissolving them.

The chewing insects are easiest to recognize since they eat the plants. They do a good deal of damage when they are worms. In maturity they become bettles, moths and butterflies and are a still greater menace.

The worms and bettles should be killed by spraying or dusting on the plants arsenate of lead or Paris green. Some of the chewing insects, like the cutworms, are killed by poisoned bait like bran mixed with molasses and Paris green. Garden slugs are also killed in this manner.

ENEMY AGENCIES ARE AT WORK IN SOUTH AFRICA

Premier Botha Says They Are Intriguing to Stir Up Strife—No Means Too Despicable.

SERIOUS TROUBLE

PRETORIA, July 6. — Premier Botha, of the Union of South Africa, has issued a statement showing that serious unrest exists in South Africa. Strong police and military measures are being taken to cope with the situation.

Premier Botha said that had not prompt and effective military measures been taken the situation would have culminated in a grave disturbance, and probably serious loss of life, The Boer leader added that the Government had information pointing to the existence of a movement, having for its object the submersion of the constitution by violent methods.

Continuing, Premier Botha, in his statement, says:

"There is good reason for suspecting that enemy agencies are at work in this country, and that they are intriguing to stir up strife, not only among Europeans but also among the natives, and no means or matters are deemed too despicable so long as they can attain their object."

Serious Troubles.

There have been few serious troubles in South Africa since the outbreak of the war, although early in the conflict a rebellion broke out in which the establishment of a republic was planned. Premier Botha, who, although he fought against the British in the Boer War, has been one of the strongest supporters of the Empire in the present conflict, personally took the field against the rebels and crushed the rebellion, late in 1914.

Little news has been coming out of South Africa recently regarding the situation there, although a despatch on June 17 indicated that there had been political complications. The Finance Minister at that time was quoted as declaring that the political situation had become "far better." At various times there have been outcroppings of the idea of independence, and a year ago, in a speech in Cape Colony, Premier Botha found occasion to condemn the Republican propaganda, declaring that it was to South Africa's interests to maintain the constitutional connection with Great Britain.

Botha's Statement.

Pretoria, July 5.—The text of Premier Botha's statement follows:

"As Prime Minister of the Union I feel it to be my duty to place before the people a statement of affairs in our Union, of which everyone should know. The people must be aware of the state of tension now prevailing—a tension necessarily following on the political activities of the various political organzations. But other agencies have for some time been at work to bring about trouble.

"In view of the disturbed political and industrial situation, I therefore desire to inform the people there is good reason for suspecting that enemy agencies are at work in this country, and that they are stirring up strife, not only among Europeans but also among the natives, and no means or methods are deemed too despicable so long as they can attain their object"

Rumours in London.

London, July 6.—South African troubles have been the subject of rumours in London for some days. It has been known that serious strikes have been in progress in the Transvaal mines, and it has been reported that these had an anti-Government purpose, and had been stirred up by German agents or irreconcilable Boers.

A message from Johannesburg to Reuters said that all the natives who had refused to work on Wednesday later had resumed their duties.

A correspondent of the Times, telegraphing from Capetown on Monday, said:

"The movement was originated by international Socialists working on the educated natives, and was helped by the effect of the increased cost of living."

MISSION CIRCLE'S FINE OUTING

The Mission Circle of the George Street Methodist Church had an enjoyable outing at Chemong Park last evening, nine of the cars taking the merry makers out to the park. A feature of the occasion was a baseball game in which Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas figured prominently. The batting of Mr. Felix Brownscombe was notable, but his tendency to drive the ball into a potato patch interfered with his work. Mr. Arthur Rodgers made a very impartial umpire.

"SAFETY FIRST" TO BE EXTENDED TO FREIGHT BY THE RAILWAYS

Losses Through Damage Claims Have Become a Serious Financial Drain, and a Loss to the Country's Production By Breakages.

NEW ORDER COMING

Blame the railway is the first thought of the shipper whose goods have been damaged in transit. The public presumes that the entire responsibility for the care and security of goods in carriage rests upon the transportation companies; and claims for damages have steadily mounted to such sums that the G.T.R. Company this week held a conference of its department heads, station agents and freight shed foremen to discuss the question, to determine the causes and to endeavour to prevent them.

A crate of eggs packed into a crazy, flimsy container arrives at its destination with six dozen scrambled. Immediately a claim is filed on the railway that carried it. Remember that the same crates used when eggs were eight or twelve cents a dozen are serving to-day when they are on one side or the other of fifty cents. At least the design of the crate has not changed. Not so long ago, cheese was shipped without restrictions. Boxes were light and fragile and often too weakly thrown together to offer sufficient protection to the eighty-pound cheese each carried Naturally, boxes piled in cars bounced on to weigh scales at country points, and otherwise maltreated were frequently damaged through which the railways incurred heavy losses. When the officials examined tabulated statements revealing the copious leak through these damage claims, they decided that the company had suffered enough, that they had too long been the goat. As a result, shippers of cheese were required to use a standard box, stoutly built, offering protection to the cheese, and thereby saving it for consumption, safeguarding the reputation of Canadian cheese in the English market and finally reducing the unnecessary drain on the railway treasuries.

A similar problem in the shipping of eggs faces the producer, shipper and railway companies to-day. It is understood that the present egg crate will soon be condemned, and inventive geniuses right now may take on the contract of designing a strong, if possible, light, container that will effectually solve the problem of preventing the present heavy loss in the carriage of eggs.

And this determination to eliminate avoidable losses applies not only to eggs, but to everything that is frangible. The old days of wrapping articles in brown paper and twisting a string around them, at the same time trusting to providence and the railways to bring them safely to their destination, these good old days are gone. At least the new vision the officials' glimpse leads them to the decision that the old methods must be discarded. And as in the highly commendible and successful "safety first" campaign, the public must be educated. It is understood that the plans are not ready yet for general announcement, but it is expected that they will be gradually put before the public.

Fruit from California for the eastern markets are shipped across the continent in light veneer boxes. This is now regarded as insufficient protection. Home deliveries of fruits grown in this province are equally precarious because of the thin containers. Apparently these conditions will lead to a new order of things in shipping methods.

The shortage of labour and cars as an outgrowth of the war, prompted the authorities to request the railways to adopt a heavy loading system. Cars were detained at shipping points until they were filled in order that there should be no waste of freight space. But this practice may be modified, for the reason that damage claims have increased as a result of the piling up of packages in the freight cars. The containers were too often not stout enough to support superweights. In short, this compliance with the request from the directing authorities has occasioned increased loss to the railway companies, and, moreover, has caused the destruction of food that is already too scarce and valuable.

The aim of the railways is to deliver goods securely. It is their first desire to avoid damage claims and the red tape their settlement involves. And it is to this end that the public, especially shippers, will be urged to co-operate by using containers that will prove efficient and generally satisfactory.

GERMAN LIES

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

According to the Buffalo News pro-Germans in the United States are going among the negroes telling them that the American colored troops are being placed in the most dangerous places at the front. That of course, is quite in accordance with the pro-German method. Canadians were told, likewise, that Canada's soldiers were assigned to the hottest sectors. The trouble is that there are so many ordinarily sensible people who fell for these German lies.

High and Fancy Shoe is Doomed

Nothing Higher Than Eight Inches and Only Four Colours, War Trade Board Rules—Manufacturers Expected to Acquiesce

The high and fancy shoe is doomed. The fair sex, for the remainder of the war, will have to get along with plain, unadorned footwear. The Canadian War Trade Board has had the matter under consideration and proposes to make a number of regulations. These have been submitted to the boot and shoe manufacturers, who are meeting in Montreal. It is understood that they have no objections and the new orders regulating Canadian footwear will be issued at once. They will be very similar to regulations which have been made in the United States.

The proposals of the War Trade Board are that women's shoes shall not be higher than eight inches. Now ultra-fashionable shoes are twelve inches or more high. It is also proposed to make only four colours. There will be white and black shoes and two shades of tan, light and dark. It is also proposed to limit the styles to as few varieties as possible.

Question of Import Raised.

The manufactures, it is expected, will approve of the regulations. It is likely, though, that they will ask the War Trade Board to take up with the Canadian and American authorities the question of import trade. While the United States has made restrictions on its boot and shoe trade as proposed in Canada these restrictions apply only to the domestic market. Manufacturers can export fancy shoes.

This has been done largely to hold the South American trade, which the Americans have been endeavouring to capture. Brazil and Argentina cities want the latest styles and the American exporters have been catering to them. To prevent a loss of this trade the restrictions were not made applicable to foreign markets. It is pointed out by Canadian manufacturers that as a result American firms could ship fancy shoes to Canada even if regulations were placed in force in this country.

Prefer Action by United States.

The Canadian makers think that as Canada and the United States are Allies nad both countries are enforcing the regulations for war purposes in order to conserve leather for the army needs the two countries should be treated as one and export of fancy goods to Canada should be prohibited and vice-versa. The point could be met by Canada placing a ban on the import of such goods, but it is felt that there would be less danger of international friction if the United States rather than Canada, took the action. This whole phase of the question will be discussed at the Montreal meeting and representations may as a result be made to the Government.

It is understood that as in the case of the United States the Canadian restrictions will not apply to export trade. However, as the Canadian Manufacturers do little exporting and have difficulty supplying the home market this will make little difference.

That fact alone is sufficient testimony to the excellence of this product.

For the Maxwell clientele is composed of that class of buyers who select carefully and who demand full value for their money in quality and in service.

Nor do they accept mere promises—being careful buyers they demand proofs.

Perhaps the very fact that we never have made a claim for this car that has not been backed up by proof in the form of official records, accounts in part at least, for the predominance of Maxwells.

Another reason—and unquestionably a potent one—is the fact that there are no freak features, no inventions, no radical innovations in this product.

We do not attempt to invent new devices or to supplant tried and proven units with others of our own discovery.

Every unit in this Maxwell—motor, clutch, transmission, axles, steering gear, etc.—is of standard type—though designed and made a little better, we believe, by the Maxwell organization.

For five years this model has remained practically unchanged.

Refined in details, body design changed from time to time to keep pace with changing fashions—for Maxwell buyers demand style as well as efficiency;—

But in all essentials of chassis design the present model is identical with that of five years ago—because that first Maxwell was right at every point.

250,000 owners endorse your judgment when you select a Maxwell Motor Car for yours.

Peterborough, July 5, 1918.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—You will please pardon me for taking up your valable space in order to state my views on, the "Hayseed" vs. "Farmer Will" argument.

It is absolutely necessary to say that both are partly right, but both are somewhat wrong. "Farmer Will" is correct when he states that a farm and a farmer's work is no picnic. No, no! Not on some farms of which I have personal knowledge. There are some farmers who conduct a little "hell" all their own, and woe betide the unlucky 'hayseed' who by chance, finds himself there.

Possibly 'Farmer Will' has not looked about, and as a result has not observed the attitude of some of his brother farmers toward their hired help.

It is rather hard to figure out just what kind of a man 'Farmer Will' is from his letter. He is possibly a good man to work for, one who treats his hired help as being equal, in sensibilities and feelings, to himself.

'Hayseed's' letter may have rubbed him a little on a raw spot. These things may account of his vigorous upholding of the farmers' side of the question. However, one is necessarily a little skeptical about this when his letter is ready over carefully. It is a little too bitter and sarcastic in some places to permit of the idea, that he and his brother farmers are 'near angels.' The relation between the two would be about seventh cousins, at a guess.

'Hayseed's' letter is a little extreme in some of its statements. It may be that both of the writers were a little soured or prejudiced in their views. You know there are all kinds of people in all walks of life. They range about fifty-fifty, both sides of the fence, good and bad.

All 'Farmer Wills' are not devils. All 'Hayseeds' are not devils or 'tired Jakes.'

Please preserve 'yours truly' from the kind (?) mercies of this particular 'Farmer Will.' Also from the able (?) help of this particular 'Hayseed.'

"No, no! Not for ours. Please keep moving; nobody wanted."

It might be a very wise plan if more farmers and their hired help could find a little more in common. Nearly everyone likes to see smooth-running machinery. Why not apply a little oil or graphite in this case, and also in the present time of war?

I am convinced that the above is good advice so therefore it will (not likely) be accepted. Thanking you for this space, I remain,

Yours truly,
An Amused Reader.

FIXED PRICES HAVE CREATED VAST PROFITS FOR INDUSTRIES

Federal Trade Commission Says Corporations Prey on Public With Avarice—Huge Coal and Steel Profits.

REPORT ISSUED

WASHINGTON, July 6.—A report on war time profiteering sensational in its revelations has been submitted to the Senate by the Federal Trade Commission following its investigation into the operations of the beef packing, coal, steel, copper, oil, milling and other industries under war conditions.

The report leaves no doubt that under the conditions brought about since this country entered the war, many industries have yielded profits so enormous as to be almost beyond belief. In the words of the commission, "certain members of trade have prayed with shameless avarice upon consumers."

Outrageous Profits.

Declaring that genral trade is in a high state of prosperity at the present time the commission asserts that many industries are making unusual profits while others are charged with making outrageous ones.

One of the features of the report is the revelation that the price young policy of the Fuel Administration, the Food Administration and the War Industries Board aimed to get maximum production while restricting prices in practice has led to profits in many instances of a size evidently never dreamed of by its framers.

Profits of the steel industry in 1917 under Government price fixing, it is alleged, were nearly half a billion dollars for the year. Profits of the Steel Corporation alone for the year were 29.4 per cent., as compared with 15.6 per cent. on 1916. Profits among the copper companies have ranged from 1 per cent. to 107 per cent. Four of the principal packing companies made profits of $140,000,000 in three years.

263.7 Per Cent. Profit.

Flour millers exceeded the maximum margins and ran up to 38 per cent. on the investment. Among the meat packers who come in for special mention among the alleged profiteers, Morris & Co. had profits of 263.7 per cent. in one year.

One bituminous coal company made a profit of $1.85 on every ton of coal it mined, while the people were paying the higher prices fixed by Dr. Garfield. An average of bituminous coal prices showed a profit of 54 cents a ton, as compared with 10 and 15 cents a ton before Dr. Garfield "stabilized" prices. Anthracite coal profits doubled while the people in many sections shivered.

"The outstanding revelation which accompanied the work of cost finding is the heavy profit made by the low cost concern under a Governmental fixed price for the entire country," says the report.

"The commission has reason to know that profiteering exists. Much of it is due to the advantages taken of the necessities of the time as evidenced in the war pressure for heavy production. Some of it is attributable to inordinate greed and barefaced fraud."

APPLE CROP MAY NOT BE SOLD

Some Ontario Districts Will Have Better Yields; Pears and Peaches Poor.

Ottawa, July 6. — The fruit crop report for the month of June just issued by the Department of Agriculture, indicates a slight falling off in prospects of the Canadian apple crop as compared with the previous report issued just after the blossoming period. Reports from Nova Scotia are not optimistic and it is doubtful if the yield will reach four hundred thousand barrels as compared with seven hundred thousand barrels last year.

In Ontario the best prospects are in Prince Edward County, Georgian Bay and in the western counties. In these districts the yield while considerably below the average, will be much greater than last year. Early varieties give greater promise than late ones. Spys and Baldwins are very late in all districts.

In Eastern Ontario and Quebec the latest reports strongly emphasize the severe winter injury which has wrought havoc in the young orchards, and seriously affected most of the old famous orchards. In British Columbia the crop is still expected to about equal that of last year, and would have been a very heavy one but for the frost injury of May 24.

The Niagara pear crop will be about 40 to 50 per cent. normal. At Burlington there has been severe winter killing, and the crop is very light. In other parts of Ontario, as well as in Quebec and Eastern Canada, the crop is a failure. There is a heavy crop in British Columbia.

The Niagara peach crop is not likely to exceed 40 per cent. of normal. The decrease is due to very severe winter injury.

The crop is practically a complete failure in all other parts of Ontario. In British Columbia the yield is not likely to exceed 60 per cent of normal. The losses due to May frosts are about 25 per cent. The British Columbia plum crop has also been reduced 25 per cent. by the frost.

Eggs and Poultry

Ottawa, July 6. — Markets are very firm and advancing. Forty-three cents reported paid for eggs at some country points while other shippers are asking forty-four and five, cases returnable. Winnipeg advancing — jobbing forty-one. Western provinces shipped twenty-seven cars east during June.

Poultry markets are firm, Montreal jobbing live hens, thirty-three, dressed thirty-six seven.

HEALTH OFFICIALS INSPECT SANITATION AROUND STONEY LAKE

Dr. Adam Wright, chairman of the Provincial Board of Health; Dr. Clinton, district officer of health, and Dr. Amys, M.O.H., have completed a thorough inspection of the sanitary arrangements at the hotels in the Stoney Lake district. Every year finds improvements, and the present sanitary equipment is almost perfect. The steam boats have not yet satisfied the authorities, nor have the lumber companies bringing down drives of logs.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Practically all hope for rescue of six men missing from the torpedoed American transport Covington had been given up to-day.

Ashburnham Patrioiic Asso. is Very Energetic

One of the big events for next week is the Summer Fair to be held on the grounds of His Honour Judge Huycke, 'Engleburn," East City, under the auspices of the Ashburnham Patriotic League. This organization is one of the most progressive in the city and are doing their utmost to make this new feature a decided success.

The Fair will be open both afternoon and evening, and numerous booths, and varied amusements will be in full swing all the time. A fine musical programme is to be rendered and the band will be in attendance. Supper is being served for 25c., and if the ladies can handle all who will be on hand to participate in a good meal at this price they are to be congratulated on the effort, and they will undoubtedly make good the reputation of the Association in this regard.

TWELVE NEW "POLICEMEN."

Silent Ones Were Installed on Saturday—Are a Success.

So well have the new "silent policemen" assisted in regulating traffic and prevented accidents that Chairman O'Connor of the Kingston Board of Works ordered twelve more and they were placed in position on Saturday afternoon. They have worked wonders and more are now on the way to be placed at the corners.

The additional ones were placed along Wellington Street and one was put up at the corner of Brock and Division Streets. The ones which are expected will probably be placed around the gore at Clarence and Bagot Streets. City Engineer McClelland spoke appreciatively of the aid the "silent policemen" were to traffic. Two of the "policemen" were knocked down yesterday, one at the corner of Brock and King Streets, and the other at the Post Office corner, but they were quickly replaced.

THE ACT MUST BE ENFORCED

Regulations Effect Children Under Fifteen Years of Age.

An Agent of the Children's Aid Society writes to the Head Office and asks: "Has there been any relaxation in the rule prohibiting children under fifteen years of age from attending the picture play houses unless accompanied by a parent or adult? Dozens of these children are at these performances every night and the Chief of Police and others say that the law is not expected to be carried out."

Much Surprised.

The question was referred to the Provincial Inspector having the direction of this law, and he replied: "Am very much surprised to learn that any Police Officer looks upon this regulation as a dead letter. The Act contemplates that the Municipal Police shall enforce the Act and the Council should see that men are appointed to this position that are competent and willing to carry out the various duties connected therewith."

AMERICAN BOAT REACHES PETERBORO

The "Amorita" Docked This Morning—Came From Clayton, New York.

Gaily flying the Stars and Stripes at the stern, the yacht "Amorita" sailed up to the government wharf this morning about 9.30. She has on board the owner, Carl Leafendorff, his wife and two daughters. The yacht hails from Clayton, N. Y., and left that place early Monday morning. Of the schooner type and with only one deck, she made good time, crossing Lake Ontario, and sailing along the Canadian shore. Thursday nigh she was docked at Belleville, and entered the Trent river at Trenton about midnight last night. Mr. Leafendorff, who is a millionaire brewer at Watertown, N. Y., states that they had no trouble whatever in entering this country. "We intend to leave sometime to-day for Clayton, and thus end our little pleasure cruise," said Mr. Leafendorff.

DISTRIBUTED FLAGS.

Mr. Leafendorff's daughter was distributing British and American flags among the awe-struck youngsters who gazed mutely at the first boat that has entered the Trent Canal from the United States since it was formally opened.

The American visitors asked numerous questions about the country, and the city. "How large was the city?" "Where there many soldiers on the streets?" "Where the flying corps men still at camp at Deseronto?" and many other questions concerning Canada's war activities.

FORD FARM TRACTORS NOW AVAILABLE

Ex-Mayor Duffus Prepared to Supply the Farmers' Demands

Following a business interview in Toronto, with the manager of the Ford Motor Co., Ex-mayor Duffus has returned with completed arrangements for selling Ford Farm Tractors, of which more than 1,000 have been distributed among farmers in the Dominion by the government.

This Tractor is recommended by hundreds of farmers as highly satisfactory, and a great boon for greater production.

Mr. Duffus is prepared to fill all orders for immediate use or for service next year, and strongly advises all contemplating the purchase of a Ford Farm Tractor and every farmer should have one—to place their orders now, as prices are liable to advance from time to time owing to uncertain conditions of both labour and material markets.

It is now generally conceded that for any nature of hauling and all kinds of farm work, the Ford Farm Tractor for practicability, economy and satisfaction, excells anything of the kind yet offered to the world.

Remember, JOS. J. DUFFUS is the dealer for Peterboro and vicinity, with garages at Peterboro, Norwood and Millbrook. 1d1w

Bonar Law Believes Fateful Hour of War is Here

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, July 6.—The coming German blow will not be less dangerous because of the time employed in preparing for it, but it is comforting to know that our men are prepared and the Allied armies confident of the result, said Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at a dinner last night.

"It is impossible to foresee the future," he said, "but I do believe that the fateful hour of this war is upon us, and if in another three months our enemies have won no strategic object, then their campaign will have failed and it will, I hope, be a decisive failure."

The Germans possessed the most perfect military machine that ever existed, but the Chancellor said he believed that when history of the war was written, it would be seen that Germany had made greater military mistakes than an other power.

M. FINE'S NEW STORE

Opening Day Attractions Bring Crowds of Shoppers

After ten years of steady and continuous attention to a young and growing business, Mr. M. Fine, clothing and dry goods merchant, branched out this week, in a much larger and more commodious store premises, situated at 427 George street. Mr. Fine is somewhat of an optimist; and, with that spirit of plodding industry and tenacity to business which characterizes his race, has gained valuable experience in shrewd buying and close selling. The result has been that his business became so successful that larger premises was found necessary; and to-day he is holding his first opening inducements to the public in his new business home.

These new, large premises, which have been fitted up in a modern and attractive manner, is well lighted both from without and within. Two large front show windows give splendid room for displaying woods, and prism lights from above allow an abundant flow of light to make the store bright and cheerful.

On the south side of the store is arranged a series of handy clothing racks, properly protected from dust; and on the north side a general display of dry goods and household furnishings are conveniently arranged in shelving and drawers. Rows of tables occupy the centre of the store, filled with various kinds of ladies' goods, small wears, and other articles.

The millinery department is in the rear section of the store, where good light is secured from the windows off Chambers street. Here, also, are a number of silent salesmen and other furnishings, which make a retired and convenient place for fitting and trying on of hats and ladies' garments.

Mr. Fine's private business office is also situated in the rear of the store, where a good view of the whole store is gained.

Heavy Losses Of Life, Etc.

believed many of these perished. When the boat settled on the bottom the water reached the staterooms immediately below the pilothouse on the listed side. The pilot when he found his boat was sinking sent distress signals and within a short time boats from various directions came to the rescue and began to pick up those struggling in the water, but on account of the darkness their efforts were badly hampered. The police of Pekin early to-day estimated the number of dead at 150, but Captain H. F. Meht, of the steamer said he believed the number of dead was not more than 100. The search for bodies was abandoned at 4 o'clock this morning until daylight came. Approximately twenty had been recovered only, a portion of whom had been identified This morning the hurricane deck of the steamer was visible above the water.

WILD ESTIMATES.

Coroner Clary, of Pekin, said to-day that it was impossible to make an accurate estimate of the death toll. He believed it would reach 100. He had been told by members of the crew that scores of persons were below decks when the boat struck. If that is true, he said, few of them probably escaped.

Many survivors were still huddled on the river bank at daylight. They were being taken to Pekin as fast as motor cars could make the run. Wild estimates of the number of dead were made by those who escaped. Many asserted that less than 300 survivors had been accounted for out of the 550 said to have been aboard.

Telephone messages were sent to Chicago for professional divers. The boat lay in midstream with superstructure above water. Expert swimmers were trying to locate bodies on the upper deck. Most of the victims, however, were believed to lie on the lower decks, and it was regarded as unlikely that many other bodies could be recovered without diving.

With the break of day, divers went down into the sunken steamer to bring up bodies of 100 or more victims of the disaster, believed to be between the crushed decks of the boats. Almost at the same hour hearses began arriving from Pekin from the scene of the disaster, bringing in the first bodies. Soldiers detailed from Camps Bradley and Herring were in Pekin early to preserve order. All known victims were residents of Pekin or the neighbouring villages.

WATER! WATER!! WATER!!!

The war garden early in July usually has a hard time holding its own against the heat and drought. Vegetables look rather wilted and need a good deal of wateringif they are going to keep on growing There is nothing to equal the naturl rainfall, but we cannot order th weather and must take what is handed out to us by Providence.

Vegetables are thirsty cratures. They want a good long driik, not a mere sprinkling. Often they may look well watered when they have only had the most superficii bath. They should never be watere in the heat, but rather in the cool of the evening. The heat-loving vegtbles, such as tomatoes, corn and so on, can get along with little watr; but celery, lettuce, cabbage, and other greens must be watered abundantly.

The one crop that needs most attention now is celery. Wter it well, and keep on cultivatin. Hill it as it grows, but be carefulnot to get the soil above the heart. Go on setting out late celery as fastas you can find room for it in the spaces left-vacant by the thinning of early vegetables.

HULL MAN HAD SUFFERED 20 YEARS

Valin Says That He Has Never Found Anything That Equals Tanlac.

"Positively, I have never taken a medicine that has done me so much good as Tanlac, for it not only fixed me up all right, but it has greatly benefitted my wife, also," recently said Joseph Valin, a well-known carpenter, living at 13 Verchaire, Hull, and who has been a resident of the town for twenty years.

"During the last twenty years," he continued, "I suffered very much from stomach trouble and indigestion, and although I was taking some sort of medicine most all the time I never seemed to get any better. I can't complain of my appetite, but nothing I would eat did me any good. My food just seemed to sour and lodge in my stomach in a hard lump. I would feel so tight across the chest that I would almost choke and I was constantly spitting up gas and undigsted food that left a mean, bitter taste in my food. I would have awful pains in my stomach and in my back right between my shoulders, and would be in such misery day and night that I could hardly sleep when I went to bed. I felt tired and worn out all the time, had no life about me and never felt fit to work or do anything else.

"After I had read so much in the papers about the way Tanlac was helping others I thought I would try a bottle. I am now on my second bottle and it has done me a world of good. That gas has stopped forming and I seldom notice a sign of my old indigestion now. I don't have that tight, choking feeling in my chest any more and that bad taste in my mouth is gone. I am never tired and worn out like I was and I get up in the mornings feeling fine and ready for a hard day's work.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

The Grocery Market

The interesting feature of the week is that of an advance of 10c per 100 pounds in the price of refined sugar, says this week's 'Canadian Grocer". This applies to the product of Atlantic Sugar Refineries and is the result of higher freight on raws across the line. The outlook for revised prices on fuel also have a bearing. Price changes are not numerous, these being confined to some advances on fruits and vegetables, and also to a few declines for the same lines. Future tea markets promise to rule high, particularly for Japans. Nuts are scarcer and prices firm. Lobster and salmon prices rule higher. One line of soap is up 30c per case; as is also a brand of baking powder. American barrel pork is down to $53. The sale of flour substitutes is still maintained on an active basis and supplies of these are very good, with rye flour quotations lower. Corn, strawberries, and raspberries of the canned varieties are getting quite scarce. Trading is maintained on a reasonably satisfactory basis.

There has been a sharp advance in the price of imported potatoes. The optimistic reports of earlier in the year have had to be revised, and it is at present stated that the Virginia and Maryland section will show a far lighter yield than was at first anticipated. Weather coditions, too, have had their effect. There are fair supplies of molasses arriving, but the price remains higher; prices on maple syrup are also strong.

In Toronto—one of the most important situations developing during the week is the change in conditions in the coffee market. Serious frosts in Brazil and the taking over of the entire Jamaica crop for war purposes has at one sweep materially curtailed the available supplies for general consumption, and has made a substantial advance of probably two to three cents a pound a practical certainty. Already the Brazilian market has been shooting upward, and prices have reached a figure that show advances from $2 to $2.50 on the Brazilian spot market. The effect of these conditions will probably be felt in Canada within about a week's time, as stocks on hand are not plentiful enough to ward off an advance for any length of time.

There is a stronger feeling in sugar, and one company, the Atlantic Sugar Refineries, have advanced their prices 10 cents. This advance has been made necessary by the increased costs of production, which include the increased freight rates imposed in the United States and the constantly advancing item of exchange. This is the only company that advances its prices at the present time, and there is no present indication that any of the other low quotations will be advanced.

The Tea Trade.

In teas there is the rather unusual situation of a very strong primary market with a sluggish local demand. The local conditions are, of course the result of the recently imposed tax upon tea. While it is not believed that this tax has slowed up the actual consumption of tea to any extent, it has certainly limited retail demand for the moment. There is a very strong feeling in new crop Japans, and this, with the taking over of 60 per cent, of the Indian crop by the British government, leaves a very limited supply of tea to meet the general needs. There is a very strong impression prevailing in the trade therefore that it is only a matter of time before another advance in tea will become a necessity.

There is a very strong market indeed for spices. Cloves have reached phenomenal prices on the New York market, owing to scarcity of stocks. White pepper is also very scarce and is ranging higher in price.

Cerial Food

There is a strong demand for cereals too, due to the recently imposed order requiring the sale of a certain proportion of substitute flour with every pound of wheat flour sold. This has made brisk business for the mills manufacturing these substitutes.

The fruit and vegetable market is unusually active, with many new lines appearing. There is a somewhat easier feeling in fruit and in vegetables, too, with the exception of potatoes. Imported potatoes have advanced surprisingly, owing to scarcity of supply.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

A GOOD WORD FOR KITCHENER.

(Hamilton Spectator)

Kitchener has a population of about 15.000, and has been subject to adverse criticism. Yet, when it is noted that nearly $50,000 was collected there in the first of a three-day drive for patriotic funds, it should cause some in Hamilton and other places, noted principally for their lip loyalty, to hang their heads in shame.

FARMS FOR SOLDIERS

(Minneapolis Journal)

In a recent address at Los Angeles, Secretary Franklin K. Lane, one of the men of vision of the Cabinet outlined what he thought should be done to prepare for the home-coming of the soldier-millions, after the war has been won and the world made a safe and sane place to live in. Said he: "In short, at the conclusion of the war, the United States should be able to say to its returning soldiers. 'If you wish to go upon a farm, here are a variety of farms of which you may take yolr pick, which the government has prepared against the time of your returning.'" Secretary Lane, is preparing to ask Congress to authorize a survey of the waste lands, arid lands, swamp lands and cutover timber lands.

The following address to Rev. C. W. Barrett, was read by Mrs. Alf. Higgins and a purse presented by Mrs. Theodore Crawford.

Lakefield, July 5th, 1918.

Dear Friends,

The sad necessity of saying good bye to you and your family is now before us. We feel we could not let this opportunity pass without giving expression to some of the regrets that we feel at losing you from our midst. We have regarded you both as the kindiest of friends. During your stay with us we have always found you arranging yourselves on the side of right, you have stood for all that is noble and worthy in life you both have given generously your time and talents to help on every good cause and anything that tends to the uplift of the life of the community, and to the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

There is no means of measuring how much the church and neighborhood really owe to you for the examples of true Christian character and of sterling integrity you have at all times set.

While we deeply regret your departure, we find that our loss is others gain and while you may feel that your work here is finished, yet it is not, as your influences will live on in the lives of those around you and though absent in body, your examples will still continue to /be a benediction and a blessing.

In times such as these, words fail us, and what we would say, we cannot, so we feel that we want you to have some tangible evidence of our esteem and friendship and ask you to accept this purse. May this serve to remind you of the many friends in Lakefield, and while seperated as pastor and congregation, there will be no separation in friendship, as we trust in the future we may have glad opportunity of a pleasant word and familiar smile of our one time pastor.

Signed on behalf of the Lakefield Methodist Congregation.

Mr. Barrett replied very suitably in his able way explaining his thanks for the kindness of the Congregation at the present time and during his stay amongst them.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A TRUE STORY

A TRUE STORY.
CHAPTER CXI.

"But that isn't fair!" I returned when Mrs. Sexton said men took their bad natures home to their wives.

"It isn't fair, but it is natural. You can't give notice to leave them in the lurch as the office force might do." She laughed gaily at my expression. "Now, dear, I am going to tell you a story than we will have something to eat; and finish our talk after luncheon."

"Years ago I knew a couple who thought they were unhappy together. She was a gay little butterfly girl, he rather a staid man of some ten years older. He was very fond of her, but naturally reserved and quiet. She loved life and gayety, he preferred to spend most of his leisure time in their beautiful home with his books, his pictures and his music. He never put an inhibition upon her, however, she could mingle with her gay friends as much as she would. She thought because he did this, because he did not appear to be jealous that he didn't love her. She called his refusal to escort her to the gay parties she loved, neglect. She met a young man, rather a nice fellow as men go, and thought she loved him. He told her he loved her, that he couldn't live without her, would make her happy always if she would go with him. In some way her husband found this out, and offered to give her her freedom—offered because he loved her better than he loved himself. She accepted. She got a divorce. But she did not marry the other man. When she had left her husband, when it was too late, she discovered the wealth of his love for her, it's worth. She would have given all she had in the world to win him back.

"But why—"

"He died two months after she secured the divorce!"

"How awful. And after she left him she found out she loved him. Why didn't she go back then?"

"She was too proud. I think she hoped that when her husband saw she did not marry the other man he would come to her. That girl was my own sister. She ruined her own life and that of a good true man because she didn't understand either herself or him. She it was for whom I wore mourning when I met you. She never knew a happy moment after he died, although she tried to appear so for my sake. Now we'll have luncheon," as the little maid appeared at the door.

A Quiet Luncheon.

Mrs. Sexton's simple story had made a grea impression upon me, perhaps more that luncheon had been at once announced giving me no time to talk about it. I was distrait, quiet at through the meal which was delicious, and daintily served, although very simple. I told her so, and it seemed to please her.

After luncheon we returned to her living room and she said briskly:

"Now, my dear, we will disect Merton Gray."

"I don't know—that—I want to."

"Oh, but I do! He is young, handsome, although not so good-looking to my way of thinking as your husband."

"No one can be better looking than George!" I interrupted. "I think him the handsomest man I ever have seen."

"We agree on that then. Merton is rich he is generous—I hink. He is companionable. But there is one thing in connection with him that I fear you have overlooked. He is an artist. He has won a certain position. He is established here making money looked up to; res ected. If he takes you away he will have to give up all that. He will have to make another start in some other place. People will blame you. They will say you ruined him his future. In time he might come to say so too. I do not say he would but he might. How that would hurt you can imagine as well as I."

"But if he loves me well enough and"—

"Dear Mrs. Howard. It isn't of him I am thinking; it is of you. Do you love him well enough to endure anything that may come to both of you if you take this step. You will hurt your family—I have said nothing about that until the last. But from what you have told me they would consider it a terrible disgrace; and would be hurt accordingly. Yet even they have no right to spoil your life. It is your own. I am only trying to have you be honest with yourself. Remember dear that no matter what you do, what happens, you have to live with yourself. That is one person from whom you cannot get away, no, not for a minute. It would be terrible to do something that made it unbearable to be on friendly terms with ones-self, wouldn't it?" When she said that I knew, knew that I could not go with Merton.

May I use your telephone?"

"Certainly."

I called Merton Gray's studio. He himself answered.

"I can't go with you, Merton—Yes, it is final," I added in response to a question. Then he asked "may I come and see you?"—yes—I am at Mrs. Sexton's, come and take me home. Come in half an hour."

To-morrow—Helen Makes a Promise Before Merton Gray Arrives.

Old Ideas Die Hard

But when you tire of treating eczema internally as a blood disease and apply Dr. Chase's Ointment you will soon be convinced which form of treatment is most effective.

Naturally and gradually the skin is healed as you apply this soothing, antiseptic ointment. The new skin is soft and smooth, and you only wonder that you did not try this treatment sooner.

DEALING WITH A THIEF.

It Was an Unusual Method, but It Proved Effective.

Governor Thomas Chittenden of Vermont is remembered for his great kindness of heart as well as for his ability and force of character. He was the first governor of the state and lived in the liberal manner that belitted his office. His cellar, as was the custom of those days, was well stocked every fall with provisions.

One winter night the governor's rest was broken by sounds coming from his cellar. He left his bed quietly and with a candle ready to light, made his way in the direction of the noise. As he reached the cellar he struck a light and saw a man taking great pieces of pork out of his meat barrel and stowing them away in a bag.

The governor approached the intruder and in a commanding voice said: "Go on, sir! Fill up that bag and be off. You ought to be ashamed of yourself to disturb honest people at this time of night!"

The thief shrank back, evidently much frightened.

So stern was the governor's manner that the man was compelled to obey.

"Now, begone!" went on Governor Chittenden. "When you are again in need of food come to me and say so, and I will give you more. Do not pilfage my house at night. If I ever have the smallest reason to suspect you of another such act you shall be punished for this offense as the law provides."

It is pleasant to know that the man came to the governor the next day to ask for employment, in order that he might pay for what he had taken, and that work was found for him, which he performed steadily and well.—Youth's Companion.

The Inevitable Comment.

A committee of investigating scientists approached a lady.

"Madam," said Professor Prewips, the spokesman, offering her a magnificent chrysanthemum of rare and lovely hue—"madam, permit us to present this flower to you as a token of our high regard."

She clasped the splendid blossom in her lily hand.

Breathlessly the committee awaited her response.

"How beautiful it is!" she answered. "What an exquisite shade of purple! I should love to have a dress of that color."

Dr. Prewips nodded knowingly to the committee, as if to say, "I told you so."

The committee winked at the professor and whispered, "You win."—Newark News.

The Pecan.

It is interesting to record that the first grafting of a pecan tree was accomplished by a negro slave, and it is doubtful whether any other member of the black race has ever performed an economic service to this country that is so signal in its importance. In 1847 Antoine, the slave gardener of Telesphore J. Roman of Louisiana, grafted sixteen trees of the variety that is now known as the Centennial. He later succeeded in grafting 110 other pecans, and these were the only grafted nut trees in America before 1865.—Archibald Rutledge in Outing.

Napoleon's Piano.

A curious footnote to history is found in G. L. de St. M. Watson's book, "A Polish Exile With Napoleon," to the effect that the emperor's evenings at St. Helena were solaced with music from a piano which was imported from England at a cost to Napoleon himself of £122 ($610). The musician was perhaps Mme. Bertrand. At any rate, the piano was bequeathed to her and was removed by her from the island after Napoleon's death.

Taming a Fox.

Foxes as a rule are treacherous and shy, yet I soon found that they responded to gentle treatment and affection. I became quite friendly with four foxes and used to go in and out of their cage several times a day and invariably took with me a handful of raisins. I found they were very fond of any sweet fruit, especially raisins, and it was not long before they would eat them freely from my hand. At first I had to approach cautiously and not dare to attempt to place my hand on them. But by and by I petted them almost as freely as I would a dog, and they ceased to show any fear in my presence. It was the same with the coyotes and the lynxes or wildcats.—Detroit Free Press.

Metals and Metaphors.

"It is most amazing," said a metallurgist, "how the world relies on metals for its metaphors and similies. Thus an orator is silver tongued or golden mouthed. An explorer is bronzed by African suns. A resolute chap has an iron will. A sluggard moves with leaden feet. An ostrich has a copper lined stomach. A millionaire has tin. A swindler is as slippery as quicksilver. A borrower has brass."

BLINDING HEADACHES FROM CATARRHAL IRRITATION NOW QUICKLY CURED

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With all This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old-fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headaches. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

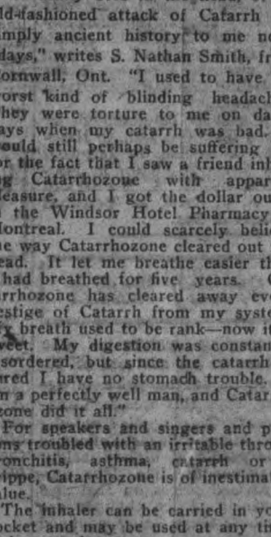
For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S LONG WAISTED DRESS.



The style of dress shown in No. 8798, when worn with a pair of bloomers of matching material, makes an ideal everyday outfit for Miss Young America. The dress is slightly long waisted, and it has a long, graceful surplice closing which extends over to the left side. The wide shawl collar of white piqué is effective on a colored linen dress. The long sleeves gathered into deep cuffs or the short, loose sleeves may be chosen. The skirt is very easy to make, for it is all in one piece and is gathered all around to the wide belt. The skirt and sleeves might be made of embroidery flouncing, with the waist and collar of plain material, making an attractive little lingerie.

The girl's long waisted dress pattern No. 8798 is cut in five sizes—6 to 14 years. As on the figure the 8 year size requires 3¾ yards 27 inch or 2¾ yards 36 inch material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction. This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

Few People Know This

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

Ocean Salt.

The oceans occupy three-fourths of the surface of the earth. A mile down in the sea the water has a pressure of a ton to every square inch. If a box six feet deep was filled with sea water, which was then allowed to evaporate, there would be two inches of salt left in the bottom of the box. Taking the average depth of the ocean to be three miles, there would be a layer of salt four hundred and forty feet thick covering the bottom, in case all the water should evaporate. In many places, especially in the far north, the water freezes from the bottom upwards. — Family Herald.

The Proper Way.

"I wish you wouldn't growl so much," declared the wife, an ex-actress.

"Why shouldn't I growl when the meals are cold?" retorted the husband.

"You took me from the stage to be your wife."

"I did."

"Then if you disapprove of the way I play the part kindly express your disapproval by means of hisses."—Kansas City Journal.

HABITS ARE TYRANTS.

Changing Them Too Suddenly Is Apt to Produce Bad Results.

Those who form sudden resolutions to break off their habits, no matter whether they are good or bad, may be laying themselves open to an illness.

A man who for the last twelve years has made a rule of spending one week of his holiday each year in bed departed from the custom last year and for the first time throughout that period had an illness which kept him from business. The human body can shape itself to practically any conditions or habits, but if those conditions are discontinued suddenly one is almost sure to be ill.

In fact, it is the opinion of a well known physician that any kind of habit is bound to "hit back" if it be discontinued too abruptly. No man can suddenly switch off meat to a vegetable diet, for instance, and remain well.

Here is a common instance of how the body adapts itself to environment. A man is kept to his bed for two or three weeks. When he gets up he finds it difficult to walk for the first day or two. He puts down this trouble to weakness. But his legs are not really weaker. It is simply that their mechanism is upset.

De Quincey is a notable example of the way habits become chains, which, if broken, bring illness and often death. The famous writer had accustomed himself to taking four ounces of laudanum a day. He would certainly have died if he stopped this daily dose.—London Mirror.

Blaine's First Stump Speech.

James G. Blaine made his first appearance on the stump in the canvass in Maine in 1856. He went to Farmington to hear Senator William Pitt Fessenden speak and with no intention to speak himself. But Mr. Fessenden did not arrive on time, and some of his Augusta friends put Blaine forward to take the platform. He likened his situation to that of a farmer who had a horse for which he asked $500. A horse trader offered him $75 for the animal. "It's an awful drop," said the farmer, "but I'll take it." The story took and so did the speech that followed.

IF Canada's Great Lakes are not, as some geographers and geologists say they are, the oldest lakes in the world, it cannot be denied that Lakes Superior, Huron, Erie and Ontario form the most wonderful chain of inland oceans on the earth and are the oldest waterway, and for that matter also the oldest highway in North America. For it was on the waters of these great lakes that the early French explorers and adventurers, such as Nicollet, Marquette, La Salle, Champlain, and others sailed, in the first quarter of the 17th century, in search of the undiscovered Western Sea. Further, taken in conjunction with the St. Lawrence River, river stretches and canals, they form the longest navigable inland waterway in the world, the total distance from Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior, to the Straits of Belle Isle being 2,260 miles.

It was of these mighty inland seas in Canada that Joseph Howe once said in a speech at a convention at Detroit: "Yonder lie Canada's great lakes, which can furnish sufficient power to run the industries of the whole world, and within which the British Isles might be dropped and never raise the tide." Romantic enchantment and adventurous history suffuse the waters and shores of Canada's Great Lakes. To realize this one has only to recall that the European pioneers who three hundred years ago first penetrated into the heart of the North American continent did so by their waters, taking first the St. Lawrence, Ottawa, and Mattawa rivers, then through the Lake Nipissing and French River into Georgian Bay, then through Lake Huron to Lake Michigan, then through the Sault or Rapids of St. Mary's River into Lake Superior.

On the Great Lakes trip, taken in any one of the Canadian Pacific steamships, such as the "Assiniboia," the "Keewatin," and the "Manitoba," as palatial, large, swift and safe as an ocean liner, a tourist or pleasure-seeker can take an inland voyage of a thousand miles, and whether the voyage be from Montreal to Detroit or Chicago, and other American ports or vice versa, the tourist will experience the sense of ocean distances, but with a feeling of security and of calm and quiet, which the turbulent ocean can not give. The tourist may see, for instance, Mackinac Point, the scene of Chief Pontiac's massacre of a British garrison, beautiful islands about which glide white-winged yachts and other small craft, the giant head of Thunder Cape, the beautiful St. Mary's River and rapids, the Canadian locks at Sault Ste. Marie, Canadian Pacific sky-scraper elevators at Port McNicholl, Georgian Bay and scores of other scenes of natural beauty and objects of absorbing interest. Truly the Great Lakes have given Canada an enviable name amongst the nations, and the Great Lakes trip once taken, will never fade from memory.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TO-DAY'S SHORT STORY WAS WRITTEN BY A PETERBOROUGH BOY

Our short story to-day is from the pen of a local boy. It is entitled "Mrs. Hanshy's Twins," and will appear in two instalments. The story was written by Paul B. Gliddon, son of Mr. Rupert Gliddon, musical director of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music:

The robins had come back from the south to join the woodland chorus of welcome to spring. The little whetstone, sometimes dignified by the title of river, had just had its annual boom and the receding waters had left yellow marks high up on the young trees and shrubbery which fringed the bank. The rushing, whirling waters of the week before were settled into calm again and glided along with scarcely an audible murmur, while chattering Blue-jays swung in the overhanging branches and gratified their vanity with glimpses of their own images, mirrored in the placid surface of the stream. The changing of the seasons meant little more, to the half-hundred inhabitants of the Whetstone Valley than the simple changes of the daily routine of life—chopping, sawing, hewing and hauling, must cease, and the work of ploughing, sowing and reaping be taken in turn.

Among the first settlers of this valley were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hanshy. They had come from "Down East," when the valley was young and the forest trackless. Andrew Hanshy had hewn a home out of the forest. It was a combat of brawn and pluck against the giant oak and the sturdy hickory, but these foes were forced to yield. The valley blossomed and bloomed and the Hanshys were representative of its best citizens.

The only children of Hanshy's were James and Thomas—twins. Perhaps Nature had seemed niggardly by limiting the number of Hanshy offspring to two, but she compensated in a different way. James Hanshy stood six feet five in his socks, and Thomas, under similar conditions, measured six feet three.

Mrs. Hanshy insisted that Thomas was two inches shorter than James when born, and the truth of the statement was vouched for by the little wrinkled Dr. Horton. While Mrs. Hanshy prided herself on her impartiality, the two-inch discrepancy in height frequently influenced her to unconsciously sympathize with Thomas, for in the simplicity of her soul, she looked upon him as a dwarf, when compared with his taller brother, and she often called him the little twin.

Everybody in Whetstone Valley knew Jim and Tom Hanshy as the Twins, or as Mrs. Hanshy's Twins, and the sign of the possessive carried with it right and title, for the Twins were as completely Mrs. Hanshy's at twenty-five as when, in their childhood days the fond mother had soothed them to sleep with sweet lullabies, and she was the court of last resort when questions of equity arose.

Alexander Sargent, a Yorkshire Englishman, had come into the valley soon after the Hanshys. Nell, the only that the likes and dislikes of the twins were identical. She had found this out as their playmate, and now that they called on her on alternate Sundays, she could find no reason to change her early formed opinions. The two young giants were the joint owners of one hundred and sixty acres of most fertile land in the Valley, and all mothers in the settlement looked upon either of them as a "good catch." Nell Sargent took conscious satisfaction in the knowledge that she was the only the girl in the Valley to whom the Twins paid court, and with the return of spring she had visions of many a ramble through the field and forest with Jim and Tom. They had caught the spirit of her fancy for the wild music of the woods, and the flowers she loved best might always safely be regarded as favourites of the Twins. When her blunt old father teasingly asked Nell if she was going to "marry both of Mrs. Hashy's Twins" she replied quite indifferently, that he would have to consult Mrs. Hanshy on the subject.

It was "meeting night" in the Valley and the Twins were gone from home. It was Tom's turn to escort Nell Sargent to the little church which stood on the side of the hill a mile from the Hanshy farm. Jim had gone alone. Mr. Hanshy was dreaming in the chimney corner and he awoke with a start at the unexpected sound of his wife's voice: "Andrew Hanshy, the Twins are in love."

"So I reckon."

"And you may also reckon, Andrew Hanshy, that it's the worst thing that has happened in our family; we're coming to a crisis."

Mr. Hanshy reckoned they were. Mrs. Hanshy was always looking for a crisis and Mr. Hanshy was not a man to try to relieve her of any gloomy forebodings. He had found it a very satisfactory policy to always agree with her. From the beginning the management of the Twins had been conferred upon the mother, and the father had never disputed her right. He had never asked questions, made suggestions, or advanced opinions, but listened and agreed upon all matters arranged by Mrs. Hanshy for the benefit of the Twins. He had some curiosity to know how she would meet the latest crisis, but he knew that he would learn all by keeping silent and waiting.

Mrs. Hanshy reckoned that the Twins had been see-sawing between the Hanshy and Sargent homes long enough, and Mr. Hanshy indulged in an acquiescent nod, "Two big boys mustn't keep on sighin' their souls out for one little gal," argued Mrs. Hanshy. "Nell Sargent is good enough to come into our family. I don't just like to see a gal romancin' through the woods half of the time, and Nell's notions about warblin' birds and daisies and blossoms are of no account to a young woman in this wilderness but these fanciful things can be got out of her head in time. Anyhow there ain't a mother of a son in the settlement that wouldn't be proud to have Nell Sargent as a daughter-in-law.

And Mr. Hanshy agreed with her. As a matter of fact he liked Nell Sargent, not only because she was the belle of the Valley, but because he liked her spirit, that could put so much life into a wilderness in which he found nothing but dreary toil. When Mrs. Hanshy decided that she should meet the crisis in the morning her husband knew what it meant. One of the Twins must cease his attentions to Nell Sargent. He silently wondered upon which one the blow would fall, but he feared the worst for Jim.

The next morning found Mrs. Hanshy dreading the task she had set herself, but she was as resolute in her purpose as ever, and at the first opportunity addressed herself, point-blank to her two stalwart sons.

"James and Thomas Hanshy, I've a disagreeable duty to perform, but we can't meet a crisis by hemmin' and hawin'. It's mighty unfortunate that Nell Sargent wasn't a twin. I've wished she was a hundred times, but she isn't, and you can't both have her; she's for only one of you."

IN MISERY FOR YEARS

Mrs. Courtney Tells How She Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—"For years I was simply in misery from a weakness and awful pains—and nothing seemed to do me any good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and got relief right away. I can certainly recommend this valuable medicine to other women who suffer, for it has done such good work for me and I know it will help others if they will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. LIZZIE COURTNEY, 1036 6th Ave., West, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Why will women drag along from day to day, year in and year out, suffering such misery as did Mrs. Courtney, when such letters as this are continually being published. Every woman who suffers from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, nervousness, or who is passing through the Change of Life should give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

Cement From Beetroots.

Experiments in French factories have resulted in the production of an excellent cement as a bye-product of beet-sugar refining. The first step in the production of sugar from beets is boiling them. It had previously been customary to throw away as valueless the scum formed on the cauldrons. But it was discovered that this scum contains large quantities of carbonate of lime. It is estimated that 4,000 tons of the carbonate can be recovered from 70,000 tons of beets. To this quantity of the carbonate 1,100 tons of clay are added, the resultant product being a good cement. The beet scum is pumped into large reservoirs and allowed to evaporate for a certain length of time before being mixed with the clay. It is then stirred or beaten for an hour before being fed into a rotary oven such as is used making Portland cement.

A Mighty Ice-Block.

The largest mass of ice in the world is probably the one which fills up nearly the whole of the interior of Greenland. It is believed to form a block about six hundred thousand square miles in area, and average a mile and a half in thickness. According to these statistics the lump of ice is larger in volume than the whole body of water in the Mediterranean, and there is enough of it to cover the whole of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland with a layer about seven miles thick.—Family Herald.

Railways in India.

India has 85,000 miles of railway and 80,000 miles of telegraph, compared with 1,600 miles of railway and 11,000 miles of telegraph in 1861.

GREAT PATRIOT SAVED GREECE

Labors of Venizelos Covered Many Years.

WHAT DOES FUTURE HOLD?

He Has Worked Ever Since Entering Public Life as a Young Man for the Regeneration of His Country, and Now at Last the Goal of His Ambition Is In Sight.

HOW far will his star lead Venizelos? Who can say? This star is also that of Hellenism; for since 1887, when at twenty-three years of age he was elected liberal deputy of Crete, all his actions have been linked with the regeneration of his country. We may be certain that he will continue to guide Greece not only toward national grandeur, but toward a superior moral ideal. The era of Machiavelli and Bismarck is ended. It has already lasted too long. We have arbitrarily tolerated in statesmen customs and methods which in a ordinary citizen of average honesty would be judged dishonorable. No, political success does not go necessarily with intrigue. On the contrary, we believe that if it is to be durable, it must be impregnated with morality. Flattery, lies, tricks, abuse of power, that which is criticized and condemned in private life, should not serve as a springboard for a public man. If this terrible war should have taught us only this lesson, it would not have been in vain.

"For the new order which is to arise from it new men will be needed. Venizelos is one of them. Only yesterday the art of leading, or rather of fascinating, other men had devolved upon fine orators, clever men of affairs.

But character should once more take the first place, for it is the source of noble and useful action. In speaking of Venizelos, it would be well ta evoke also the great shade of Garibaldi, the insurgent patriot, the soldier of humanity. The man who has known how to risk his life for his country, for humanity, has the right to demand from others great sacrifices. He who is sincere and loyal to such a point that his manner of life corresponds to his doctrine deserves to be heard, believed, and followed.

Having fashioned himself, Venizelos is in process of refashioning his people after that ideal which Anglo-Saxon democracy has formulated and for which she herself is fighting. For its dramatic and symbolic significance the life of Venizelos could from now on be inserted among the "lives" of Plutarch or the "Representative Men" of Emerson.

Amicable Adjustment.

"Calm yourself, my dear. We've settled it between us. You're neither of you going to get one."—Fliegende Blatter.

The Lesser Evil.

"I hate a barber that talks politics all the time, don't you?"

"Can't say I do. I'd rather have him talk politics than hair tonic."—Washington Herald.

LOST BY AN EYELASH.

When James R. Keene Laid For Him a Big Bet on Besom.

Although James R. Keene was known as the nerviest of Wall street operators, he was anything but a betting man on the race tracks. He dearly loved to win valuable stakes, and he won nearly everything in this line except the classic English Derby. His horses rarely carried anything but an infinitesimal wager. Big wagers were few and far between with him.

One day when his Ben Brush colt Besom was making his racing debut at Sheepshead Mr. Keene visited the paddock in company with his trainer, Jimmy Rowe, and inspected the colt minutely. Keene was very fond of Noonday, the colt's dam, and he talked proudly of his expectations of Besom. The colt had worked exceptionally fast, and the race looked as sure as sure things can be regarded on a race track.

The result of the conference with Rowe was that Mr. Keene decided to make one of his rare large bets on Besom to win. The news of the Keene wager created almost a sensation in the ring, and the price against the colt went tumbling.

The race was run, and Besom lost by an eyelash. He went out with Berry Maid, and the two raced stride for stride like a team. When it was Besom's turn to stride his nose showed in front, and when it was Berry Maid's turn she showed a scant advantage. So it was all the way. Mr. Keene watching the contest through his field glasses without a murmur. The crowd was on its toes. As they passed the judges it was Berry Maid's turn to stride. Then the apple of Mr. Keene's eye at the time lost the verdict, and the vice chairman of the Jockey club lost one of his few wagers on the turf.—New York World.

Walnuts, Five a Penny.

From one of Steele's letters to his wife we learn the price of walnuts in Queen Anne's reign. "I send you seven pen'orth of walnutts at five a penny which is the greatest proof I can give you at present of my being with my whole Heart yrs."

Outside the letter Lady Steele has written, "There are but 29 Walnutts," so apparently her "passionate lover and faithful husband" had given in to the temptation of eating a few before sending them. He made ample amends for this on the following day by a gift of "half a hundred more."—London Standard.

Strong Objection.

Very strenuous objection is being taken at Chatham to the Natural Gas Act passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature, and to the suggestion that there should be an increase in the price of natural gas.

Enemy Artillery Active During the Night—Italians Pushed the Austrians Back Four Miles From Venice.

OFFICIAL REPORT

Canadian Press:

LONDON, July 8. — Australian troops last night advanced their line astride the Somme slightly on a front of 300 yards, according to a report from Field Marshal Haig to-day. Several prisoners were taken. The German artillery displayed activity in the Somme region during the night. It was similarly active north of Albert, in the vicinity of Beaumont Hamel and on the Flanders front in the neighbourhood of Bethune

Successful Raid.

The statement reads:

Last night Australian troops advanced their line slightly on a front of 300 yards, astride the River Somme, capturing several prisoners. A successful raid carried out by Scottish troops south of La Bassee canal, resulted in the capture of a few prisoners. The enemy's trenches were also entered east of Hazebrouck by Australian troops. A few prisonen were brought back. Hostile artilley has been active astride the Somme as a result of our operations and also west of Beaumont Hamel and in theneighbourhood of Bethune.

ROME, July 8.—Italian troop yesterday advanced their front line in the region of Col al Prible. In Monte Grappa region Italians gained further ground, northward of Massik, on Saturday. Eight enemy aeroplanes were destroyed yesterday in air battle, the War Office reports.

ITALIAN FRONT.

Special to The Examiner:

WITH ITALIAN ARMIES IN THE FIELD, July 8.— The latest Italian victory pushed the Austrians back four miles farther from Venice as a result of one of the most stubbornly fought actions of the war in the wet tangle of dykes and mud filled canals in the lower Piave.

The Austrians had strongly fortified every house, mill and infrequent dry spots in this region. Italian artillery materially aided in the victey by preventing the enemy bringig up food from the mainland.

Thousands of soldiers fought in water up to their waists, often losing their weapons and battling like primitive men with their hans and teeth. In many instances, Italin soldiers with vaulting poles, leaped over wire entanglements in front of machine guns and knifed Austria gunners.

So far more than 1,300 mchine guns and six trench mortars have been captured.

CORRESPONDENT SUSPECTS TRAPS IN EASY BRITISH VICTORY

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, July 8.—The ease with which the Australians and Americans carried out their attack in the Villers-Bretonneux region on Thursday should be a matter for reflection. The new line enables the British to command for some 5,000 yards a series of long, gentle slopes to the south of the Somme. To achieve such an extremely easy success in a bit of country for which the Germans fought so fiercely must obviously arouse suspicion. Even granting the perfect planning of our attack and its admirable performance, more resistance should have been met and the defeat should not have been so complacently accepted.

GERMANY WILL DEMAND THE RIGHT TO POLICE CITIES

Huns Will Also Demand Free Passage of Troops as Result of Assassination of German Envoy.

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

(Special to The Examiner.)

STOCKHOLM, July 8.—Germany will demand the right to police Moscow and Petrograd under the guise of maintaining order as a result of the assassination of Count Mirbach, the German Ambassador to Russia, according to information from diplomatic sources to-day.

The Germans who charge that the murder is the work of the Entente, will further demand a free passage of troops to the Murman coast by way of Petrograd. The Russian inhabitants of that region in anticipation of a German-Finnish invasion already have declared their allegiance to the Allies and are expected to join forces with Allied troops guarding the supply base there.

Bolsheviki Will Accede.

The Bolsheviki either will accede to the German demands or will abdicate. The former action is more probable, as Premier Lenine is reported to have prepared an apology which will be forwarded to Berlin at once. The Russian Baltic fleet is in peril of capture unless the sailors blow up their vessels.

Russian Social Revolutionaries here believe members of their party killed Minister Mirbach. They declare that terroristic plots have been formed against Lenine, Trotsky and all other Bolsheviki leaders.

TAIL LIGHT OUT ON AUTOMOBILE.

MINIMUM PENALTY WAS IMPOSED THIS MORNING.

Mr. Frank Adams and Mr. Harry Rush acting police magistrates, presided at the police court this morning in the absence of Police Magistrate D. W. Dumble.

A Charlotte street grocer was fined $5 for having his tail light out. He said that he lighted it as soon as he was informed that it was out. Mr. Rush imposed the minimum penalty.

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE SOMME, July 8.—"It has been a revelation," Lord Milner, British War Minister declared to the United Press after reviewing a regiment of American troops from a division which participated in the capture of Hamel.

"I didn't expect it. They have the bearing of veterans. They drilled across the field as though it were a parade ground. Really they are fine. And I am told they fight better than they march. Australian officers are tremendously pleased at the showing of the Americans and say they are their kind of soldiers, which is the highest compliment they can pay."

Peterboro Boys Shipwrecked

Sergt.-Major Sam Mills and Private Herman Giroux Were on Board Wrecked Transport.

That a number of Peterborough soldiers were on board the "City of Vienna," a Canadian troopship, which went ashore on the Atlantic coast during a dense fog, is revealed in a letter received this morning by Lieut. Col. J. Mills, of this city, from his son, Sgt.-Major Sam Mills. A few days ago Col. Mills received a telegram from his son announcing his safe arrival at Halifax. At that time it was believed that he had merely concluded the overland journey to Halifax, preparatory to embarking for overseas. It now develops that the telegram was intended to convey to Col. Mills the news that Sergt. Mills had landed safely as Halifax after being shipwrecked. In his letter received this morning. Sergt.-Major Mills states that several hundred men were taken off the stranded vessel by a United States patrol boat, and within half an hour from the time they were taken off the vessel, commenced to go to pieces. They lost all their equipment with the exception of the uniforms they wore when they were rescued. The "City of Vienna" ran ashore during a dense fog on Tuesday last. Private Herman Giroux is another Peterborough boy who was on the vessel when she ran ashore. No lives were lost.

AID FOR THE RUSSIANS

United States May Give Economic Assistance—Conference Over Sunday.

PROTECTIVE STEP

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, July 8. — An "army" of trade and business experts, supported by a sizeable police force of inter-Allied troops, will be sent to Russia to aid in establishing order.

The United Press to-day, seeking to clear up considerable confusion as to the Allied course toward Russia, is able to state semi-officially that the above programme has been definitely determined upon and will be put into effect very soon. There will be no "military intervention" now.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—New developments in the Russian situation—assassination of the German Ambassador at Moscow and the anticipated demand of Germany for additional control over the Russian government, gave impetus to-day to the American-Allied efforts to reach a decision by the Allies in the form of aid for Russia.

The killing of the German envoy—Count Mirbach—was accepted here as certain to provoke sharp German action with the resultant need for quick decision by the Allies.

Economic Mission.

As a result fresh significance was attached to the over Sunday consideration of the problem at a conference between President Wilson, Chief of Staff March and Secretary Baker. As affairs appeared to shape up today and officials still were mainly mum, the American-Allied course will run thus: First, an economic mission will be sent to Russia to study Slav needs and to extend American aid. Second, this mission will have military protection. Third, as supplies are forwarded to assist the Russians in their efforts to help themselves, other troops will join as a solely protective step to guarantee that supplies do not fall into German hands.

The Protective Force.

The size of this protective force still is a question to be determined. The reported deflection of the Murmuansk coast population to the Allies may furnish an agency helpful to the Entente plans, inasmuch as England particularly has desired that aid go in via that coast.

With the people friendly to the Allies a force to fight the Germans could be gathered and the Entente forces would not be molested.

The position generally taken here is that the re-establishment of the eastern front rests mainly on the Russians themselves. However, a protective Allied force could serve as an inspiration to the Slavs, it is argued, while the United States-Allied economic assistance would hasten the rehabilitation. Japanese Ambassador Ishii returns to-day from Magnolia, Mass., where he had a conference with Colonel House, presidential adviser. It was generally believed here to-day that the announcement of this Government's course would come in the form of a statement delivered by President Wilson to Congress, probably early this week.

Corporal Dowling's Trial Opens in London To-day

Prisoner is Accused of Joining a Hostile Force While a Prisoner in Germany—Landed on Irish Coast.

THE CHARGES

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 8. — The trial by courtmartial opened here today of Corporal Joseph Dowling who landed on the Irish coast in a German collapsible boat, two months ago and who since has been a prisoner in the tower of London. Corporal Dowling, in civilian clothes was brought to court in an automobile ambulance, handcuffed to a British soldier and accompanied by a non-commissioned officer armed with revolvers.

Lord Cheylesmore presided over the court. Corporal Dowling who is slim in build, of medium height and of a wide awake appearance pleaded not guilty to the formal charges which are under three heads, first that while he was prisoner of war in Germany, he joined a hostile force; second, that he endeavored to induce others to join; third, that he participated in an attempt to land a hostile force in Ireland.

NATION MADE PROHIBITION AS A WAR EMERGENCY

Canadian Press.

WASHINGTON, July 8. — Nation wide prohibition as a war emergency measure and water-power legislation urged by administration were before congress when it went back to work today with all hopes of an extended summer vacation abandoned.

The prohibition issue came up in Senate with eleven million dollar emergency agricultural appropriation bill which had right of way under motion adopted by senate last Saturday night before the house unexpectedly blocked the recess plans. Leaders expected bitter fight.

A SERIOUS COUNTER REVOLUTION BREAKS OUT IN MOSCOW

Severe Street Fighting Between the Bolsheviki and the Social Revolutionaries.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, July 8.—A serious counter revolution has broken out in Moscow according to a despatch carried to-day by the Wolff Bureau. Severe street fighting is going on between Bolsheviki and the Social Revolutionaries with the former getting the upper hand.

Machine Guns Used.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Fighting took place in Moscow between Bolsheviki forces and Revolutionary Socialists following the assassination of Count Von Mirbach, German Ambassador, according to despatches to-day from Switzerland. On leaving the German Embassy, the despatch says, the assassins took refuge in a house occupied by Revolutionary Socialists. This building was defended by machine guns.

EXHIBITION BOARD MET SATURDAY

Present Main Building Will Be Moved to Another Part of the Grounds.

A meeting of the Exhibition Board was held on Saturday evening to consider plans submitted by W. H. Barry architect for further improvements to the grounds.

Mr. Barry was present and the plans submitted showed a fine management of the ground with improvments to present buildings and the addition of a new one.

The contract will be let immediately for the moving of the present building to another part of the grounds and its putting in shape for some class of exhibits.

Civic Holiday which is usually as quiet as a rainy Sunday in Peterboro, will be taken hold of by the board and an effort made to put a bit of life into it.

A good programme will be arranged for and as there are no holiday fares this year, it is expected the people who remain at home will be glad of the entertainment.

MISS RANKIN FOR SENATE.

WASHINGTON, July 8. — Miss Jeannette Rankin, Representative from Montana, announced to-day she will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Senate, to succeed Senator Walsh, who will offer for re-election in November. The nominating primaries will be August 27, and Miss Rankin said at present there is no other Republican candidate.

RECORD SHEETS FOR GARDEN PRODUCTION

A number of the Peterboro amateur gardeners who have gone in for production this year on a fairly large scale have received record sheets from the Ontario Organization of Resources Committee, with a request that records of their crops be kept until the end of the season. The plan offers a simple method by which any man's garden enterprise may be tabulated from month to month with the final results easily counted at the end of the season. The statement he will then have available will be of interest not only to himself, but also to the committee, which it is understood, hopes by this means to obtain an estimate of the work done this year.

Other citizens who desire to participate in the making of these records, should write Mr. S. B. McCready, of the Organization of Resources Committee, in the C. P. R. Building, Toronto, and ask for the blank sheets that are sent out.

JAPAN MAY DECLINE TO TAKE A HAND

Will Wait Until the United States Consents to Act in Siberia.

Special to The Examiner:

TOKIO, July 8.— After two weeks negotiations over the request by the European Allies that Japan intervene in Siberia, it may be stated that Japan will not consider intervention until the States joins the other Entente Allies in the request. It is generally believed that the Japanese government favours intervention provided the United States consents, but the attitude of President Wilson on the subject is thought here to be unchanged.

SUNDAY ICE CREAM.

Peterboro could do with a few civic legislators of the calibre of Mayor Church. The Toronto Chief Magistrate shows his usual consideration for the rights of all citizens in his attitude on the Sunday sale of ice cream. The Police Commission of Toronto had recommended the closing of ice cream parlours on the Sabbath, but Mayor Church condemns the by-law as class legislation, and states that it will be further considered. Toronto's civic head remarks that while Canadians do not want the wide-open European Sunday, ice cream is a necessity. "The poor man has not the facilities for keeping it like the rich one and should not be barred from getting it if he wants it," says Mayor Church, and there is no doubt that he is expressing the views of a very large number of citizens. As a result of his stand further consideration will be given to the measure, and it is likely to be defeated.

If Mayor Church condemns the stopping of the sale of ice cream as class legislation, how would he regard the local bylaw that has resulted in the closing of resturants on Sunday? Peterboro is already getting some unsolicited and unenviable advertising over the foolish regulations that have been passed, and a Kingston paper advises all visitors going to Peterboro to see that they take an adequate supply of provisions with them And our Limestone City contemporary might have added, "or arrange to get their meals in Millbrook" following the line of argument used by one Alderman.

ACTION NEEDED.

The assurance of the City Aldermen to the deputation which waited upon them last week in regard to the coal question, that they were doing everything that they had the power carry out, is causing considerable comment, especially in view of the intelligence that comes from Guelph and other places as to how the situation is being handled. The members of the local council are asked to note that the civic authorities in Guelph have taken vigorous measures to equalize the distribution of coal and to prevent discrimination on the part of the dealers. The first step taken after the appointment of a Fuel Commissioner by the Guelph city council, was to issue instructions to the various coal dealers that no more coal was to be delivered to any citizen already holding one ton or more, and that in the case of a resident who had no coal in his possession, not more than 3,000 pounds was to be sold. This initial step has had the effect of preventing citizens from getting an unduly large amount of coal, and at the same time of giving to all citizens a chance to secure at least a quantity of fuel The Guelph Fuel Commissioner will open an office, and is arranging a system of distribution so that all orders for coal will have to come through the Commission, preventing hoarding, and enabling the city authorities to keep an accurate account of just how the coal is being handled.

There is every need for the adoption of such a system in Peterboro. Coal dealers are only human, and it is but natural to expect that the customer who has been in the habit of buying large quantities of coal, paying cash for it, and having it delivered during the summer months, will be favoured by the dealers, in preference to the poorer citizen, who formerly bought his coal in half ton or ton lots, as he needed it throughout the winter. The customer who buys fifteen or twenty tons is therefore under the present system of leaving everything to the judgment of the dealer, having little difficulty in securing a supply of fuel. It is the smaller consumer, forming the great mass of the population, who is meeting with no success in his effotr to buy the four or five tons that would be enough to carry him through the cold weather. Many a citizen, who formerly only bought in half ton or ton orders, has secured enough money to pay for a winter's supply, and now finds himself up against a stone wall. The dealers won't take his order; he is told to wait, and "perhaps we can do something for you in a week or two," but in the meanwhile he sees the coal trucks bringing ton after ton to the big houses down the street, and naturally he worries over the situation. He has been haunting the coal offices for weeks and can get no satisfaction, and yet the people of the big houses have no trouble; truck after truck load arrives, and the rattle of the coal down the chute into the cellar is a sound that grows rather irritating when the citizens in the smaller homes in the neighborhood realize that their request for fuel has been refused.

The City Council seem strangely afraid of dealing with the question in a masterful manner; they seem to hesitate to interfere in any way with the coal dealers. But there must be a measure of interference if there is to be a square deal for everybody As long as the dealers are left to handle the situation the customer, who has always purchased coal in large quantities, is going to still get plenty of coal, while other citizens will have to take their chances.

Peterboro does not want a repetition of last year's experience, but as sure as this is July, and that there will be cold weather next winter, such an experience will be the lot of this city again, unless the council shows more energy and a more virile grasp of the situation.

The Council are not doing all that they have the power to perform. The rationing system adopted by Guelph and Kitchener, show that there are other means of dealing with the problem. It is not enough that the local Fuel Controller should know where the coal is going—most citizens know only too well where most of it has disappeared—but he should be able, if the Guelph Commissioner has such power, to order the dealers not to deliver any more coal for the present to citizens who already have a quantity. There are houses in Peterboro which secured a large amount of coal at the close of the winter, and recently these same residences have received another bountiful supply, while hundreds of other citizens are unable to buy a ton.

The City Fathers should not make the mistake of thinking that the visit of the deputation last week is the last they will hear of the coal situation—it is the biggest and most vital problem they will have to deal with this year, and appointing a Fuel Commissioner should be regarded as only the first step. It is expected that the city authorities will see that Peterboro gets the whole 80 per cent. of the normal allotment for the winter and that the coal coming into the city is equitably divided.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM.

The housing problem, which has become acute in many Canadian cities, and which has grown so serious that the Ontario Government has appointed a committee to investigate the conditions and recommend a solution, is admirably treated in the July number of the "Conservation of Life," issued by the Dominion Commission of Conservation. The article describes at some length the new town of Rosyth, which is being built by a housing company, promoted by the Local Government Board of Scotland for the accommodation of Admiralty workers and also the housing schemes carried out by the British Government at Well Hall, Woolwich, London. These two places are quoted as examples of what Great Britain is doing to provide homes for her workers, at the same time as she is prosecuting the war, or rather as a part of her policy in promoting that object. "Conservation of Life" truthfully remarks that "so little has been done in Canada to increase housing accommodation since the war started."

In Canada, as in Great Britain and the United States, there is the same need for increased housing accommodation in connection with war industries and the same difficulties in securing the provision of such accommodation by means of private enterprise. Capital which is available in normal times for building purposes is no longer obtainable. Such capital as is available can only be had at a much higher rate of interest than before the war. In addition to the increased cost of capital, and the difficulty of obtaining it, there has to be faced a greatly increased cost of material and labour, so that the building of houses to-day will probably involve a total cost of from 30 to 60 per cent. above that of houses that had been built immediately before the war. When erected under such adverse conditions houses cannot be made to pay an adequate return on the cost of erection. Under the operation of the law of supply and demand it will take a few years of shortage of dwellings to force the rental values to a height which will enable new buildings to pay a proper return to the investor. It is natural, therefore, that the private builder should suspend operations for the present and engage in work of a less precarious kind. It is almost certain that prices will recede to some extent after the war and this will involve loss to those who build under present conditions.

Faced by such a situation, a country at war can only act in one way if it wants to secure the maximum of production according to its population and other resources. It must step in and assist with the provision of houses, or at least with the provision of capital, and share the greater part of the responsibility for any loss that may accrue as a result of building houses during the war. It is not suggested, of course, that governments can do a large proportion of the building that is required to meet the present shortage. All that they will be able to do will be to lessen the shortage that is directly connected with war industries and shipbuilding plants. In war industries must be included the production of food, and the building of additional cottages for workers in rural districts is one of the great needs of Canada. When the various governments have done everything that can be done to stimulate the provision of dwellings needed for war purposes, there will still remain a housing problem of great dimensions to be solved by the country and requiring urgent attention in the near future. The solution of that more general housing question will be easier if war housing is undertaken in Canada as it is in the other allied nations.

A serious feature of the problem which will steadily grow worse is the question of accommodation for returned soldiers. Many Canadian Tommies are returning, bringing British brides with them; the wives of others who went to England when their husbands went to the front, all coming back in ever increasing numbers. Already they are finding difficulty in securing houses. In manufacturing towns such as Peterborough where the development of industries has caused an influx of workers from smaller places, houses are already in great demand. What will be the situation in a few months?

"We see, however, that there is not only a scarcity of houses in the neighbourhood of industrial plants dealing with war production, but a general scarcity which is likely to become more acute and a great national evil in the near future if some attempt is not made to increase the supply of houses and arrest the emigration and doubling up of families which is resulting from the present shortage."

AN ESSAY ON CRITICISM

(London Advertiser)

J. A. Cross, a farmer residing near Brantford, was fined $500 for stating that "we had just as well be under Prussian rule as under Canadian." He also stated that the Government had treated exemption granted to farmers before election as a "scrap of paper."

Concerning the decision the "Advertiser" would say:

(Censorship regulations framed by Union Government prevent it from being printed.)

Concerning the Goverment which thus protects itself from criticism we would add:

(Ditto regulations framed by Union Government prevents this also from being printed.)

It's a shame to waste so much white space to indicate that one dare not discuss such a matter as the fining of the Tuela Heights farmer. But it may make the matter plain to our readers, even though it is quite dangerous to go thus far. Incidentally, this is one of the easiest ways to write editorials.

Although it is yet too to make an estimate of the in- se expected throughout the whole he Canadian Prairie West, it is expected that the average in- se will be less than that of the hern Alberta Wool Growers As- tion. In other words, an in- se of approximately twenty-five cent. is looked for in the wool of Western Canada over that of year. Shearing has now begun will be in full swing before the le of June. The comparatively low price of the land herealso gives the farm sheepman in western Canada an advantage over his brother farther south.

It is only during the last three or four years however, that the sheep industry has begun to make any marked adway on the farms in Western anada. The high quality of the wo together with the great demand nd the good prices, has opened the eyes of the farmers to the possibiliti of the industry, and it is growing fast as the difficulty in securing breeding stock will allow.

It is to the farms that we are to look for a further development of the sheep industry. The opportunities for sheep raising on the range are becoming scarcer every year. That this circumstance is an advantage to the industry in the more intensive farming districts there can be no doubt. Up to a few years ago it was difficult for farmers in such districts to take headway in competition with the sheepman, whose flocks ranged on a large stretch of country. Though prices of wool and mutton have also given a great impetus to the farm sheep business, and the combined development of the industry will contribute to the world's food and clothing supply.

The illustrations show scenes on sheep farms of Western Canada.

Concrete Roads.

The surprising differences in the amount of power needed to haul loads on different kinds of roads were shown in tests made recently. The resistance to a truck's power offered by a dirt road was 99 lbs. per ton, by a gravel road, 82 lbs. per ton, and by concrete to which has been added some other surfacing material, 50 lbs., while the best showing of all, namely 30 lbs. per ton, was made on a smooth concrete highway to which no other surface material had been added.

Using as a standard a three-ton truck with a capacity load and a speed of 12 miles per hour on an unsurfaced concrete road, the truck, it is said, will make 7.2 miles per hour on surfaced concrete, 4.8 miles on gravel roads, and 3.6 miles on dirt roads. It is estimated that if all the highways travelled by the 400,000 motor trucks in America were concrete, the annual saving in their operation would be over $237,000,000 per year, as compared with the cost of operating them on dirt roads.—Popular Mechanics.

Unwanted Pleasure Boats.

Pleasure steamers have not shared in the prosperity which others have achieved through war. At an auction at the Baltic Exchange, London, the Thames paddle-steamer Royal Sovereign was bought for £8,300 by a syndicate, who intend to allow the vessel to resume her pleasure trips between London and Margate and Ramsgate after the war. The vessel, which is of 891 tons, gross register, was sold by order of the Fairfield Shipbuilding & Engineering Co., by which the vessel was built in 1893 at a cost, it is understood, of about £50,000.

The passenger paddle-steamer Koh-i-noor, built at a similar cost, was bought, as she now lies in the Gareloch, by T. W. Ward, Ltd., shipbreakers, for £6,200. The Koh-i-noor is of 884 tons and was built in 1892; she is rather smaller and older, therefore, than the Royal Sovereign.

Crown Prince Called Down.

Some years before the war the German Crown Prince got a very neat call-down from Miss Bernice Willard, a Philadelphia girl. It was during the Emperor's regatta, and the two mentioned were sitting with others on the deck of a yacht. A whiff of smoke from the prince's cigarette blowing into the young lady's face, a lieutenant near by remarked:

"Smoke withers flowers."

"It is no flower," said the prince, jocularly, "it is a thistle."

Miss Willard raised her eyes a trifle.

"In that case," she said. "I had better retire or I shall be devoured." The party saw the point

OLD TIME TRAINED NURSES.

Removing and Burying the Dead Was Part of Their Duties.

In their "History of Nursing" the authors, Miss Nutting and Miss Dock, quote from an article written in 1764 which gives an insight into what was required of the trained nurse in the eighteenth century. The article says:

"This occupation is as important for humanity as its functions are low and repugnant. All persons are not adapted to it, and the heads of hospitals ought to be difficult to please, for the lives of patients may depend upon their choice of applicants. The nurse should be patient, mild, compassionate. She should console the sick, foresee their needs and relieve their tedium.

The domestic duties of the nurse are to light the fires in the wards and keep them going, to carry and distribute nourishment, to accompany the surgeons and doctors on their rounds and afterward to remove all dressings, etc.; to sweep the halls and wards and keep the persons of the patients and their surroundings clean, to empty all vessels and change the patients' linen, to prevent noise and quarreling and disturbances, to notify the steward of everything they see which is wrong, to carry out the dead and bury them, to light the lamps in the evening and visit the sick during the night and to watch them continually, giving them every aid which their state requires and treating them with kindness and consideration."

A Mild Bluff.

"Why has the robin a red breast?"

"Nature's camouflage, I'm inclined to think. He wants to make old Boreas believe he is wearing a chest protector."

One Use For Style.

"The Whifferbys put on a great deal of style, considering the fact that they hardly know where they will get tomorrow's dinner."

"Some method in their madness, though. The more style they put on the more apt they are to be invited out to dinner."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

What is Your Baby Worth to You?

Babies under two years of age feed absolutely on milk.

Milk, therefore should be absolutely Pure, Clean and Safe.

"The Food of the Child is the Hope of the Nation."

Raw milk causes infant deaths. No strainer or filter can accomplish what Pasteurizing and Clarifying can do.

Dirt, bacteria, udder waste, etc., irritate and inflame the intestines of children. It is said to be more dangerous to be a baby than be a soldier on active duty.

Pasteurizing kills 99 per cent of the bacteria in milk.

No epidemic of diseases has ever been traced to Pasteurized Milk.

Pasteurized Milk does not interfere in the least with the nutritiousness or digestibility of milk.

2,400 Men in This City Are Available For Farm Work

Cards Sent by the Organization of Resources Committee Were Completely Listed and Filed—Men May be Called On to Help Farmers if Labor Shortage is Felt.

Peterborough has 2,400 men available for farm work. Some of them are inexperienced but willing, others are experienced and unwilling. Their records, however, are all filed away together in specially constructed boxes, alphabetically arranged on the card index plan, and are being sent to-day to the Organization of Resources Committee. The cards are duplicates of those signed by the men themselves, and were prepared for this particular facility in connection with the work of the Organization of Resources Committee at Toronto. The boxes were designed by Mr. Dobbin, and completed work is the essense of neatness, simplicity and efficiency. As stated before, many of the retired farmers and hired men now loafing or working in the city have written absolute refusals to do farm work. Others are willing to help with the harvest, but the city-bred men are more than willing to help whenever and wherever required. There are some exceptions to this spirit of voluntarism, but they are comparatively few.

Must Have License For Sale of Ice Cream

Grocers are once more reminded that they must have a license from the Food Board to sell ice cream. It matters not what other licenses they hold, and the average grocer has a stack of them, he must buy a special one for the retailing of ice cream. It will cost him five dollars, and some of the dealers have been deterred by the fee, a result the Food Board probably hoped for when they made the "ante" five dollars.

MEDAL FOR LOCAL SOLDIER

Reg. Sergt.-Major Dunkerly, of Peterboro, who went overseas, with the 39th Battalion, and afterwards was transferred to the 2nd Battalion in France, has been awarded the Meritorious Conduct Medal for good work overseas. Sergt.-Major Dunkerly was before the war drill instructor of the 57th Regiment, Peterboro Rangers.

LITTLE CHANGE IN STRIKE SITUATION

Railway Men Are Still Negotiating With Railway Board.

Canadian Press:

MONTREAL, July 8.—Representatives of Federated Trades of Mechanical and Car Department of Canadian Railways, have wired to all local unions asking for power to call a strike if the Canadian Railway War Board continues to refuse to grant their demands. The replies received favour a strike.

The final conference between Unions and the Railway Board will take place to-morrow, and if the reply from the Unions is in favour of a strike, as it is expected it will be, and no acceptable terms are submitted by the Board, then a short ultimatum will be issued by the men, it is stated, and a date for a general strike of the shopmen throughout Canada will be set. Following the announcement by the Railway Board on Saturday that all amendments of McAdoo award extended to railway employees in the United States had been awarded to the Brotherhood, the situation looked brighter for a while. The Brotherhood officials, however, decided that it wanted none of the McAdoo award and were prepared to discuss the schedule of increases presented by themselves to the Board only.

HALF A MILLION NEARLY READY

American Army is Making Rapid Strides.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 8. — In a month or less General Pershing will have more than half a million men under his direct command on the western front ready for the fighting line, according to information received by members of the Senate Military Affairs committee to-day.

The 251,000 Americans now in the fighting line according to General March, Chief of Staff, do not include Americans brigaded with the British and French. In addition to these all the troops sent over during June are still in training. There are nearly 300,000 of these, although by the first of August will be ready for battle duty.

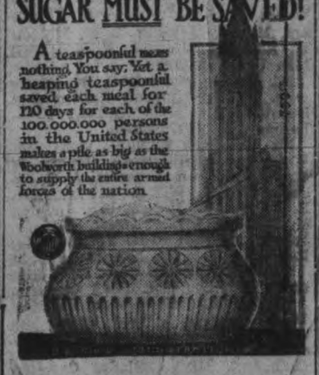
SUGAR MUST BE SAVED!



A teaspoonful means nothing, You say. Yet a heaping teaspoonful saved, each meal for 110 days for each of the 100,000,000 persons in the United States makes a pile as big as the Woolworth building—enough to supply the entire armed forces of the nation.

DELEGATION WILL VISIT TORONTO

Stoney Lake Cottagers Will Present Their Case to Hydro Commission

To-morrow a delegation, consisting of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., and representatives of the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association, will visit Toronto, and wait upon the Hydro-Electric Commission in connection with a right of way that the cottagers are seeking at Burleigh Falls. Some time ago the Hydro Power Commission took over a strip of land at the falls in connection with the control of the power resources. The strip of land provided access to the lake from the Burleigh road, and was used to a considerable extent by the cottagers. Subsequently the Commission leased the strip of rock (as it is) to a Hamilton man by the name of Gordon Fraser, and as a result the cottagers claim they have been denied the use of a right of way to the lake. The cottagers claim they have no objection to the Comsion using the property in any way that may be considered advisable but they do object to the action of the Commission in leasing the property to a private individual to the exclusion of the rights that they have enjoyed for over thirty years.

Murder of Ambassador is the Beginning of Russia's Awakening

Opposed to the Terror of the German Sword Has Come the Terror of the Russian Bomb—Action Has Been Delayed.

BLOOD WITH BLOOD

(By J. W. T. Mason.)
(United Press War Expert.)

NEW YORK, July 8. — Nihilism has returned to Russia. The assassination the German Ambassador, Von Mirbach, at Moscow, is the beginning of Russia's reawakening. The same measures of desperate self defence enforced on the people by the absolutism of the Romanoffs, have been called again into play by the ruthlessness of German dictation to the present Slav government. Russian liberty, enmeshed by the Hohenzollern militarists, is taking to bombing its way to freedom. This new phase of the revolution was bound to occur sooner or later. The people who risked their lives for liberty under the Czar are not of the brood to be cowed forever by German mu ism. Opposed to the terror of the German sword has now come the terror o the Russian bomb. Germany canno destroy this new enmity of force. Nihilism flourished best when efforts a its suppression were most relentless. It is strange that the famous Nihilist leaders have not gone into actio against the Germans before this. But there probably has been some reluct ance to set the terrorist bands a work anew for fear they might inter rupt the successful working out of the revolution. Now, however, that Ger man influences are plainly seen to b insidiously trying to undermine the revolution, there is no reason why Nihilism should not resume its forme policy of meeting blood with blood The Germans are placed in a very difficult position by the assassination of their Ambassador.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE FOR POTATO BLIGHT

In answer to a number of enquiries the following formula is published. When properly prepared, it is good for both bugs and blight and is recommended by the Department of Agriculture:

ARSENATE OF LEAD FOR POISONING POTATO BUGS.

Preferred by many growers owing to the fact that it does not burn the leaves, and remains much longer on the foliage than Paris green, not being washed off to the same extent by rains. The powdered arsenate of lead is used in the strength of two pounds to 40 gallons of water, the paste form in the strength of 4 pounds to 40 gallons. For use in small quantities one tablespoonful of the paste arsenate of lead is sufficient for one gallon of water.

POISONED BORDEAUX MIXTURE FOR BLIGHT PREVENTING.

Copper Sulphate (bluestone) 4 lbs.
Unslaked lime ..... 4 lbs.
Water (1 barrel) ..... 40 gallons

Dissolve the copper sulphate (by suspending it in a wooden or earthen vessel containing 4 or 5 or more gallons of water.) It will dissolve more quickly in warm water than in cold. Slake the lime in another vessel. If the lime when slaked is lumpy or granular it should be strained through some coarse towelling or a fine sieve. Pour the copper sulution into a barrel, or it may be dissolved in this in the first place; half fill the barrel with water; dilute the slaked lime to half a barrel of water, and pour into the diluted copper sulphate solution, then stir thoroughly. It is then ready for use. (Never mix concentrated milk of lime and copper solution)

A stock solution of copper sulphate and milk of lime may be prepared and kept in separate cavered barrels throughout the spraying season. The quantities of copper sulphate, lime and water should be carefully noted. Bordeaux mixture deteriorates with age and should be used as soon as possible.

TO POISON MIXTURE.

For poisoning the mixture when using it for the potato beetle, use 6 lbs. of copper sulphate, 8 ounces or more of Paris green, or 4 lbs. of paste arsenate of lead; or preferably 8 oz. of Paris green, and 1 1-2 lbs. of powdered arsenate of lead, to 40 gallons of water

THE ORANGEMEN OF THE CITY PARADED TO KNOX CHURCH

About Six Hundred Members Turned Out—Impressive Sermon by the Rev. F. J. McKenzie.

Orangemen to the number of bout six hundred, representing the different Orange lodges of the city, lat evening marched to Knox Presbyterian church, where an inspiring semon was delivered by the Rev. F. J. McKenzie. At six-thirty the Orangemen gathered at Victoria Hall and were assembled for the parade by Mr. Clarence Lufman. The parade was eaded ed by the Salvation Army band and was followed by the ladies' Imy Ridge Lodge. Next in order cam the True Blues or juvenile lodge and finally the senior lodges. Knox church was nearly filled to capacity for the occasion. The pulpit was tastefully decorated with a large Union Jack, in front of which was the honour roll of the church.

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, I hav no charity, I am become of sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbol."

The greatest thing in the worl is charity, which begets love. The der we grow the more wonderful d we find the world. We used to thir of our friends who had gone away, perhaps to the great west, but now all our love and thoughts are take up by our men overseas, in the trenches in France and Flanders. Agai I repeat that charity is the greatest thing in the world. This is recogned by the great Orange order which has given so liberally of its blood to the cause of freedom, the Empire an of charity. In the constitution of the Order we find among the qualifications named for admittance a love of righteousness and obedience a great and lasting faith in God, humanity and compassion, coupled with kindness to our fellow men perhaps less fortunate than we, an enemy to brutality, also faithfully regarding the Protestant religion, looking to the happiness, welfare and prosperit of his king and country, a hatred of swearing and swearing, prudence in all our acts, coupled with sobriety, and last of all charity to our fellow men.

Good Acts.

Some men think that money is the greatest thing in the world. And by have many arguments on their si. The wonderful hospitals that alleviate the sufferings of humanity re built with money. The lumber is head from the great trees of the forests nd turned into the glossy and smoth interior of the hospital. Then the ciate instruments which the surgens use in their acts of mercy, they all cost money. Many and almost countless are the good acts that money creates.

Then some think that justice is the greatest thing in the world. That the man who spends his life trying to give everybody a fair chance without impartiality is doing one of the greatest things in the world.

Heroism is regarded by some as the greatest thing in the world. The almost unbelievable deeds of our Canadian boys in the trenches at the front, the countless acts of heroism on land, on the ocean, in the air and under the water, are the greatest things in this world. No doubt a great deal can be said of heroism.

Personal Purity.

Then personal purity, both in deed and speech, is thought by some people to be the greatest. Also honesty of purpose, which seems entirely lacking in the Teutonic mind. We must concur in saying that this last is a very great one. We must admit that our country must step higher in its political life, and we must use the franchise to see that honesty of purpose in politics will be obtained.

All these things are great, but charity is greater. Charity is the greatest thing in the world. There is no man in whom the love of God truly dwells who does not possess love.

Vote of Thanks.

A vote of thanks was tendered Rev. F. J. McKenzie by the Orangemen at the hall on their return from the church.

SPECIAL MEETINGS OVER THE WEEK END.

MUSICIANS RETURNED TO TORONTO THIS MORNING.

The Quartette from Toronto, who conducted the meetings last week end at the Salvation Army Temple, went home this morning. Their singing and playing both at the concert Saturday evening on on Sunday, was much appreciated indeed.

Their addresses also were of a very high order and the crowd was much benefited.

A hearty invitation was extended for their return soon.

THE AMERICANS LIKE BRAIN DRILL

Americans Are Given Odd Mental Training.

LONDON, July 8.—American soldiers, who prize mental as well as physical efficiency, are showing much interest in a "brain drill" recently introduced into the British army. Its purpose is to teach the British soldier to think quickly and to concentrate his mind on what he is doing.

An officer lines up a company and, as a preliminary to the brain drill, puts the men through some simple calisthenics.

"Now," he explains, "when I say 'Do this,' you'll do it; but if I say 'Do that,' you won't do it. He carefully illustrates the motions to be done and then the motions not to be done.

"Ready! Do this, do this, do this." The men obey. Suddenly his arms shoot down by his side. 'Do that," he commands. Unthinkingly, half the men fall into the trap he has set. Amid the laughter of the rest, they are ordered to fall out and stand aside.

When all except two or three have been eliminated the game is changed. The men are formed into two lines, facing one another and about sixty yards apart. A cap is tossed on the ground midway between the lines, and then the men in couples, one from each line, walk slowly up to it and try to snatch it before the other can touch him. If while the cap is held by the snatcher the other manages to put his finger on him before he can jump away, the cap must be dropped and the contest renewed. At last one whisks the cap away and is off.

"Crows and cranes" is another feature of the drill. Again the men are lined up about ten yards apart, the officers standing between.

'Those on my left," the officer says, "are cranes and those on my right are crows. If I shout 'Crows,' the cranes will dash off and the crows will chase them. But if I shout cranes, the crows will dash off and the cranes will chase them. Now, are you ready?

For nearly a minute he stands, giving an imitation of an automobile engine running free at full speed. "Cr-r-r-r-r-r-r.' Both sides stand tense and eager, awaiting the word.

"Crows!" he enunciates at last.

Half the cranes bolt instead of dashing after cranes. Inattention again. However, the quick-witted among the crows are after the cranes in a jump.

"This is all to teach you to act on the spur of the moment," the officer tells the men. "It may be a case of life or death whether you or the German moves first. You may be the quick or you may be the dead."

Panting, the men march off. They like the brain drill.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

Victory Bread for Canada. How many people realize what it means? For one thing, after this, no woman will be able to buy flour without at the same time buying a certain proportion of substitutes.

In effect it means that no bread can now be made in Canada, either in the bake-shop or the home, without a specified percentage of substitutes.

For those who are doubtful about the use of substitutes and the proportions necessary to make bread, a special booklet containing bread recipes and dealing with all the substitutes available on the market, has been issued by the Canada Food Board. It can be obtained direct from Ottawa or from any of the provincial committees at five cents a copy.

Let every woman watch out for the "Victory" label on the loaves she buys. If it is not there then it is her duty to report the baker for he is breaking the law.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

GIVE THE MEDICINE

(New York Herald)

"Make Prussia hate war," says Secretary Lansing. Sure! Give the Prussians and all other Germans so much of war that they will not talk war or think war for at least a century. A Southern contemporary suggests that the way to accomplish that is to "rearrange the Prussian landscape so as to make it harmonize with the landscape of Beglium and Northern France." If that is the only way, it will be done.

INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE

(Buffalo Express.)

The Red Cross organization is international and its rules have been subscribed to by all the nations, including Germany and her allies. An international court should be constituted to try all individuals who violate these rules and to pronounce the death sentence against them. The Germans would thereby be notified that a first condition of peace would be the acknowledgment by them that such acts are crimes and the surrender of guilty persons to be executed. It should be emphasized that government officials who order such crimes should be held equally guilty with the agents who commit them.

"OURTOWN."

8th July, 1918.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—I visited your city last week and had the pleasure of seeing and hearing your town council. From inquiries I found that a very strong delegation were attending your Council chambers, as a protest against the unfair way the coal is distributed in your town; being interested in this important matter, "coal distribution," I may say I followed them and entered, "incognito."

I studied the features and forms of your aldermen and mayor, also the questions of the labour delegates and the explanations given to them.

I must certainly congratulate the fine appearance of your aldermen and mayor. Their photos would adorn any album?

No profiteers, or rather millionaires appeared to be amongst them, although there may be in the near future. Still there appeared to me a couple who are getting two fat. I feel sorry for them, for I am afraid they are already too fat and unable to enter the gates of heaven—or any other gates—not even sideways. I must certainly acknowledge that Mr. Coldem was the most prominent and up-to-date speaker amongst your aldermen. But it seemed to me, simply a waste of precious time—no satisfactory results gained, but simply what Paddy shot at—nothing.

The working classes can practice pulling sleighs in your town. The aristocracy of your town appears to be in good health and will be prepared for the winter—by all accounts.

In conclusion I may say it appears to me, your coal distribution is simply in a state of chaos. I beg to inform you, that we are having a special meeting night for this important question, "coal distribution" and hearing of the labour delegates in "Ourtown" and will furnish you a copy next week.

Yours sincerely,
Mayor of "Ourtown."

P.S.—God help us, if we cannot do better than your town.

CAR TURNED TURTLE.

Peterborough Man Was Driving Car When Accident Happened.

A couple of people were seriously injured at Maynooth on Sunday evening when an automobile driven by Jack Rody of Peterborough turned turtle. Miss Ellen Flynn had her arm broken and Miss Nainie Rody was injured internally and is in a rather serious condition. The accident occurred on a hill near Mr. M. Reynold's residence. Near the foot of the hill the car struck a stone and skidded, landing on its side in the ditch. All the occupants were badly shaken up and some of them were cut by flying glass as the windshield was broken. Dr. Embury was called and attended to their injuries.—Bancroft Times

Harry Smith Has Steadily Advanced Since He Enlisted.

Smith, of Toronto, and a nephew of the Misses Denne, 723 George street, recently attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He is a Peterborough boy, and a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston. His work in the army has won steady promotion and now at the age of twenty-eight years he holds a rank that few men of his years have won at the front. In a letter to his Peterborough relatives recently, he gratefully acknowledged the receipt of a gallon of maple syrup, but never mentioned his promotion. The news came to his father in Toronto, however, and will be greeted by his many friends in Peterborough with feelings of deep pleasure.

MAKES GOOD BREAD WITH SUBSTITUTES

Food Board Expert Demonstrates What Can Be Done.

OTTAWA, July 8.—W. P. Linn, who has charge of the bakery section of the Canada Food Board, has demonstrated in two Ottawa bakeries that a satisfactory loaf of bread can be secured with the use of 20 per cent. of a wheat uour substitute mixed with wheat qour of present Government standard.

These tests were made in the Slinn, Shouldis and Balharrie bakeries, Ottawa, on several successive days, using as substitutes corn flour, oatmeal, etc. The loaves in all cases were attractive and the bread sweet and palatable. The cost of manufacture was no higher than that of bread made entirely from Government standard flour.

The Food Boarad has sent to licensed bakeries a formulae for bread containing substitutes for wheat flour. These have all been tested and proved to be satisfactory.

FORD AUTO PLANT IN CANADA CLOSED

Labor Troubles and Difficulty in Getting Material is Explanation

WINDSOR, July 8.—Notices posted in the plant department of the Ford Motor Company of Canada Saturday morning informed the employees that it had been decided to close the factory indefinitely. No reason for the shut-down was given. Gordon L. Maegregor, vice-president and general manager of the company, is out of the city, and subordinate officials in his absence did not care to discuss the matter.

The announcement, however, created no surprise in certain quarters, where for some time it has been an open secret that labour troubles, together with the increasing difficulty in procuring materials promptly, has made the matter of keeping a full force at work rather a difficult one. Demands made by the workmen last week for a sharp increase in wages to 62½ cents an hour, with a minimum of $5 for an eight-hour day, appears to have brought the question to a culmination, which turns out unfavourably for the men.

Between 700 and 800 employees are affected by the closing of the plant. In addition, the Kelsey Wheel Company, the Dominion Stamping Company, and the Fisher Body Company, which have been working on Ford orders, will also be affected more or less by the cancellation of orders.

NATIONAL STRIKE OF RAILWAY MEN THROUGHOUT CANADA IS MORE IMMINENT THAN EVER

The Die May Be Cast Tomorrow Morning, Following a Conference With War Board and Representatives of the Federated Trades.

CIRCULAR SENT OUT

(Special to The Examiner)

MONTREAL July 8.—A national strike of railway men in Canada is today more imminent than ever. From authoritative sources today came information that tomorrow morning following a final conference of the railway War Board with the seventeen representatives of the federated trades in the mechanical and car departments of the Canadian railways now in Montreal, the die may be cast and a strike order sent out to unions from Atlantic to Pacific. Since Friday when it was announced that there was grave danger of a Canada-wide strike, the pot has been simmering. Friday afternoon the men refused to accept the offer of the railway War Board which was the McAdoo award in vogue in the United States with certain amendments. Following the meeting at the Place Viger, where this refusal was announced the men declared that they would no longer await the pleasure of the War Board and took the initial steps towards a strike.

Drastic Action.

The committee of the federated trades, representing railway men from all parts of Canada came to the conference armed with power to call a strike if they deemed such drastic action necessary. Members of the committee declare that the men are confident of obtaining the result they seek if a strike is decided upon. But after a series of executive meetings Friday evening the committee concluded, not unanimously, but by a majority vote that they would "pass the buck" to the members of the unions, placing the responsibility upon the latter. Accordingly on Friday night, there went tout from the men's headquarters in the Alexandra Hotel, St. Catharine Street, circulars addressed to the unions in all parts of the country. These circulars forwarded by mail informed the membership of the negotiations that had been carried on and of the progress made to date and called for a telegraphic reply in each case of "yes" or "no" on the strike question. It was decided thus to approach the membership in order that the committee should have overwhelming power, and absolute backing in any move they might make.

This morning it appeared to be the unanimous view of members of the committee that the reply in practically every case would be a refusal to accept the terms offered by the War Board and a vote to strike.

The men held no conference with the railway War Board today. They were watchfully waiting for replies to their circular. The next meeting has been set for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning by which time it is expected that there will be some definite information on hand as regards the attitude of railway men's unions throughout Canada.

AN ULTIMATUM

The time in the interval will not be sufficient to allow replies to be received from all sources, but it is expected that enough replies will have been received to indicate the tenor of the general response. All points east of Winnipeg will certainly be heard from. If the reply is as the members of the committee expect it to be, it is probable that a short ultimatem will be handed to the railway War Board, setting a date for a general strike unless better terms can be offered.

CONVERT IRISHMAN CALLS TO ROOSEVELT

Arthur Lynch Appeals to Colonel to Aid Irish Recruiting.

To Win Men's Souls— Ex-President Urged to Help Make Clear to Erin.

DUBLIN, July 8. — Col. Arthur Lynch, Nationalist member of Parliament for West Clare, who recently accepted a commission in the British army, and has come to Ireland to assist in the recruiting campaign, has sent an eloquent appeal to Col. Roosevelt for co-operation in Irish recruiting. He asks Col. Roosevelt to send a message to the Irish people, or to come himself to Ireland. In the course of the communication Col. Lynch says:

"Send me a word of encouragement, or, better still, my great and splendid friend, come yourself in all your prestige and power of influence and help me win the souls of the young men of Ireland to the allies' cause.

"There are grave and deep difficulties, lamentable stories of cheated hopes, unrecognized rights and hatreds for wrongs inflicted in the past. But one feature throws these matters into proper perspective, the fact that the Germans are thundering at the gates of Paris, are hammering at the Channel ports. If they win, it will be needless to make plans for aid or dream dreams of liberty. Potsdam will take care of Erin.

"When the Stars and Stripes was raised over the cause; when once Old Glory had blown out her folds, the emblem of Liberty, a sign of protection to millions of Irishmen, I had hoped that opposition to the allies would cease. But ancient wrongs and present resentment proved too strong.

"We must win the souls of these young men. Ireland must and shall fill with great deeds the page of history reserved for her. The western front is the mecca of true believers in liberty. Therefore, once more, write, or come, my illustrious friend, and join your genius and authority to my faith and enthusiasm, and we will do the magic thing and lift the squabble into the atmosphere of deeds that will shine bright in the eye of time."

Col. Lynch was elected member of Parliament for Galway City in 1901, and for West Clare in 1909.

Colonel Deeply Interested.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 8. — When informed to-night by the Associated Press of Col. Lynch's appeal to him for assistance in the recruiting campaign in Ireland, Col. Roosevelt displayed deep interest in the proposal. He said, however, that he could make no formal comment until he had received personally the message from Col. Lynch.

Summary of Crop Reports Issued by the Department Reveals Uncertain Conditions

Late Frosts Have Injured Crops in Many Parts of Canada—Weather is Too Cool—Hay is Poor—Crop Prospects in Manitoba Are Poor.

THE SITUATION IN ONTARIO

Ottawa, July 3, 1918. — A summary of the telegraphic crop reports received on the condition of the field crops throughout Canada was issued to-day by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics as follows:

Atlantic Provinces — In Prince Edward Island splendid growing weather has assured an excellent hay crop. Grain and potatoes are well up to the average. The frost on the 20th and 21st damaged beans, tomatoes and early potatoes in some sections. The roots and corn are making good growth. In Nova Scotia (Kentville) June has been cool and very dry. Frost on the 21st reduced the bean crop 15 per cent. Corn has made inferior growth. Grain and roots are looking well. Hay very poor; about 40 per cent. of normal. Apples are a fair crop; about half a million barrels. In New Brunswick (St. John) excepting the local frost in some sections which damaged the beans and tomatoes, June has given favourable weather for seeding and growth of crops. More grain has been seeded than usual. The hay yield will be large. The pastures are excellent, and dairy production good.

Quebec. — Bonaventure. — General growth medium. Hay is fine. Eighty per cent of grain has germinated well. Frost caused damage to beans and other vegetables. Much rain and temperature cool. Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere—Hay will give an average crop. Wheat is good on drained land but rather backward on the whole. Other grains only fair and rather late. Potatoes are promising on dry land. Cap Rouge—Meadows and pastures look very well Grain and silage corn are suffering from excess of precipitation and lack of heat. Potatoes are good on high land and poor on low spots. Swedes are coming up nicely. Actonvale—Gardens injured by the recent frosts. Cereals have good appearance. New prairie hay good; prairie hay over two years, medium. Pasturage very good. Cold weather to date greatly hindered development of vegetables and hay. Makamik—Hay suffered from winter killing. The condition of cereals is very good but growth is late. Potatoes are late in coming out. Shawville.—Crop conditions are fair; wheat and peas good; oats and corn backward. Some spots touched with frost; hay crop very thin, but improving rapidly with recent rains. Root crops and potatoes fair; beans doing well, but late.

Ontario.—Ottawa and District—Hay is poor to fair. Of wheat, which is but little grown, the crop is only fair. Oats promise well. Corn for silage is very backward. This crop is also poor in south western Ontario, owing to bad seed which failed to come up. All kinds of roots and also potatoes promise well. Pasture has been good on the whole.

Saskatchewan. — The Provincial Department of Agriculture reports (June 25) that while the whole province has more or less been affected by the recent drought, the crop in no district is entirely ruined. Rains throughout the province have proved beneficial, arriving just in time, in many districts, to save the situation. Indian Head.—The early part of June was dry accompanied by hot winds, which retarded the growth to a considerable extent. However, during the past week rain fell on the 24th, 25th and 27th. This with cool, cloudy weather has greatly improved crop conditions, and the prospects at present are for a fair average crop. Scott—Owing to drought late sown grain has failed to germinate Early sown oats have been frozen off badly. Rain must come immediately if any crop is to be harvested in the prairie section. Conditions are more favorable in the northern part of district.

Alberta. — The Provincial Department of Agriculture reports that during the past month growing conditions have been somewhat irregular. In the early portion growth was hindered by the cool weather, and lack of moisture, with strong winds in a few districts. Warmer weather prevailed after the tenth with light showers. Crops injured from early frosts, but recovered rapidly as the weather became warmer. Good growing weather after the middle of the month, and all crops, excepting in a small area, where more rain is needed, progressed very favorably. While the conditions have not been ideal an average crop over a very large portion of the province is assured Hay, however, will be shorter than usual, but there is good promise of an extra yield of vegetables. Warm weather and frequent showers during the past week have greatly brightened the outlook for the harvest. Lacombe—First three weeks of June were windy, warm and dry. Early sown crops made slow growth, being delayed by insufficient moisture and in certain areas by the drifting sand During last week rain fell over the greater portion of central Alberta, supplying immediate needs of grain crops. Hay will be light.

British Columbia. — Agassiz.—The weather conditions during June were decidedly unfavorable for growing crops. Cereals, roots, hay and pasture badly in need of moisture. Live stock in fair condition. Summerland. — June drop in all fruits very heavy. Present indications show only medium crop in apples, pears, plums and aricots. Peaches on the trees well attended to have good crops Hay crop will be short. Grain will be light under dry farming. Season very dry and getting hotter. Sidney, V. I. — Drought conditions continued during the month. Hay averaging one ton per acre, has been harvested in good condition; autumn wheat is fair. Spring grains short. Small fruits and vegetables, roots and potatoes will yield low. Orchard fruits fair. Rain is needed.

Easiest Way to Remove Ugly Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture.) —

Here is a method for removing hair or fuzz that is unfailing and is quite inexpensive: Mix a thick paste, with some powdered delatone and water, and spread on hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. No harm or inconvenience results from this treatment, but be careful to get genuine delatone.

AS GOOD AS LEATHER

Portland Woman Wearing Shoes Made of Wood, and Like Them.

If it wasn't for the pioneers humanity would be helpless. The wife of Lieutenant A. J. Huntington, of the 162nd Infantry, resident in Portland (Oregon), has long been of the opinion that shoes are too high in price, and, having the courage of her convictions and possessing also a desire to save leather for the army, she occasionally wears a pair of neat wooden low shoes.

These are painted black, with a patent leather effect, and are really very convenient and classy in still life, though the rigidity of the sole is some backset. The lieutenant sent the shoes from France, where that style of shoes is much in use.

With rubber tires to dispense with the staccato rattle on cement walks, mother and girls might save pin money and get along, and with a few old pairs around the house would never be out of kindling wood. — Seattle Post-Intelligeneer.

ITALIANS HAVE ESTABLISHED THEIR OBJECTIVE ON THE PIAVE

Effects on the Austrian Ranks by Even Limited Casualty Lists Are Evident—War Weariness Exists Among the Enemy Troops.

CROP IN UKRAINE IS BAD

OTTAWA, July 9.—The following is a summary of the war situation for the past week cabled to Canada by the British Ministry of Information and issued here by the Director of Public Information:

There have been minor operations on all the allied fronts in the west. The It alians conducted minor offensives on the northern front and between the branches of the Lower Piave. The operation in the north resulted in the capture of certain important peaks previously of great assistance to the enemy in attacting. On the River Piave the Italian objective has been established on an eastern branch, thus shortening and strengthening the front. The process of clearing the Austrians from between the two branches of the river still successfully proceeds yielding a considerable number of prisoners.

Retreat of Casualties.

Serious effects produced in the Austrian and Hungarian ranks by the even limited casualties lists permitted by the Austrian Government are evident. The Hungarian Premier reduced the correct figure by nearly half, yet even so the indignation produced was considerable, and in reality in both the Italian theatres the true figure is being daily largely increased. Numerous prisoners examined include officers, non-commissioned officers and men of Austrian and Hungarian divisions. All agree that conditions in the front line are very bad, and although officers and men are not actually starving, "they are always hungry."

War weariness among the troops is considered caused by the poor food and under-feeding. The prisoners also agree that the accounts given of the internal situation are not exaggerated. There is great dearth everywhere and disturbances, often engineered by disaffected soldiers returning from captivity in Russia, who after a month's leave do not wish to re-enter the army, are reported.

Crop is Bad.

To make matters worse, this year's crop is bad; no food is being sent from the Ukraine, and the poorer people have practically no subsistence.

Desires Peace.

The population earnestly desires peace, but say that the war is continued for the benefit of the Germans and the wealthy classes. Hungarian troops complain of ill-treatment at the hands of the Austrians. Hungarian officers and men desire only to go home. Germany is frankly hated, and the general feeling is that the whole war is being waged for the sake of the German Emperor.

DEFECTIVE SHELLS MADE FOR C.E.F., SAYS SHELL INSPECTOR

Shoulders of Shells Were Expanded to Meet Requirements After Rejection.

104 OUT OF 600 WERE REJECTED

LONDON, Ont., July 9.—The charge that shells rejected at the London Manufacturing and Machhine Company were afterwards expanded to bring them up to the proper size, was made by W. R. S. Carless, assistant Government inspector, at the hearing in the Police Court yesterday, on a charge of illegal rectification of shells by Lewis Elsie, superintendent, and W. A. Odver, foreman.

The s pecific charge was that the defendants did unlawfully commit an act of fraud or deception on his Majesty in connection with the sale or manufacture of military stores. The accused elected to be tried by jury. The evidence of the assistant Government inspector was rather sensational. He declared that on one examination in the factory he rejected 104 out of 600 shells and stamped them rejected because of the low diameter of the shoulder. Later he discovered that these shells were again presented for examination. He found that the shoulder had been expanded. This was illegal, rectification of any shells being allowed only where special permission from the Munitions Board has been secured.

When asked by the court as to what effect such acts would have on the shells the inspector stated that the expansoin weakened the shoulder of the shell, it made the shoulder thin and they might burst in the guns or when leaving the muzzle and kill the allied soldiers using them. On the other hand, he said, the narrow shoulder interfered with the ranging of the shells. If they were being used in a three-mile barrage they might drop at 2 1-2 miles and kill advancing allied troops.

Local returned officers say they had seen men so killed by weak shells while at work at their guns, and also stated that in barrages they have seen shells fall short on their own men.

Are Sent For Trial.

LONDON, Ont., July 9.—W. Oliver and L. Elsie, two shell factory employes were sent for trial at the coming assizes for alleged illegal rectification of shells at the London Manufacturing and Machine Company.

When bail was fixed by the Court at $1,000 each, Crown Attorney McKillop strenuously objected. He pointed out a similar case at Brantford where bail was refused. Their employer furnished part of the bail.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

"DAMN!" O. K., SAID BISHOP.

Y.-M. C. A. MAN GETS RUFFLED AT THE KAISER AND SWEARS.

Sam rhymes with "dam,' but in nowiee ordinarily could it be connected with a minister named Sam. And yet—

The Rev, Dr. Sam Leland, New York Methodist minister, was on his way to France. The boat was the Oronso, and history tells what happened to it.

Three minutes after a British destroyer picked up the survivors, Rev. Dr. Leland approached A. E. Hungerford, leader of a group of Y. M. C. A. secretaries

"Can a man resign from the Y. M. C. A.?" he asked. Hungerford looked at him, trying to determine if the minister was scared.

"To enlist in the army?" continued Leland.

"Of course," said the Y. M. C. A. leader.

"Damn!" said Rev. Dr. Sam. "I'll do it!"

A famous English bishop was told the story to see what he thought of the use of a swear word at such an hour. "It was the only language justified," he said.

A LETTUCE TIP.

Lettuce should be sown three times during July, and the young seedings must be kept well watered. In fact, all lettuce should be kept very moist to prevent it from running to seed too quickly.

Good, crisp lettuce is something that all war gardeners are keen to have, and frequently it is a disappointment to them to find it going to seed and coarsening in the process.

If you have not planted your lettuce in a shaded place, you might build a cheesecloth frame over the plants that are beginning to head up, and spray them night and morning during the warm weather. This is the real secret of good, crisp lettuce.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

Helen Makes a Promise Before Merton Grey Arrives

CHAPTER CXII.

"I am glad dear!" Mrs. Sexton said when I resumed my seat beside her. "Very glad. Now I want a promise from you. I want you to talk things over with your husband very simply, very plainly, very lovingly. Take care you choose your time well. Don't try to talk to him when he acts annoyed or worried. But some night after dinner, when he is at home with you, tell him that you want to know just what he really expects of you; how you feel about everything save only his friendship for Julia Collins, or any other woman. Do not mention that, else he will think you only prompted by jealousy. Will you promise?"

"Why, yes—but I have tried to talk to him."

"Talk more intimately than you have done. Talk as one man to another. Take the ground that he isn't being fair and square with you. I imagine that will have more effect with him than anything else. Tell him you have seen me, and that I said I was flattered because of your improvement, your gain in poise, your greater understanding of social matters. It won't hurt you to praise yourself by repeating what I have said — hurt you with him, I mean. Don't be too meak, my dear, too easily hurt by what he says. He probably doesn't mean it in the way you take it. Please him; but in doing so, do not lose your individuality. That was what attracted him to you.

Lemon Juice For Freckles

Girls! Make beauty lotion at home for a few cents. Try it!

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

Remember that, when you are discouraged. There comes Merton, I will leave you now. He will not care to see even me."

Before I could object she had glided quietly from the room.

Friendship Instead of Love.

"Helen!" Merton came to me with outstretched hands. I laid mine in them and smiled at him through a mist of unshed tears.

"Merton!" I answered, even to the intonation, as he had spoken.

"Did you mean you did not care enough? That you will not go with me?"

"Yes, Merton. I was not fair. I see it now. Because of an occasional bit of jealousy, a little unhappiness that may come to every married couple, I was soothed and comforted by your love. I thought I loved—cared—for you more than I did for George. But Merton it isn't so. I never could be happy if I left him —we would not be happy. Forgive me for making you think I—cared. Will you, can you?"

"Are you sure this time dear?" he had grown very white.

"Very sure," I answered so low he bent his head to hear. Then releasing my hands he put one of his under my chin and raising my face he looked long and earnestly into my eyes. Then he bent and kissed me, just once.

"I have nothing to forgive," he then said. "That is if you will keep me as a friend. It is far less than I had hoped to be; but perhaps more than I deserve. It is for you to forgive me, Helen."

"Let us forgive each other," I tried to speak lightly, "and like two good friends never mention this again, but try to forget it. Shall we?"

"Thank you, Helen. You are an angel." We talked a few moments more then he took me home. I was happier than I had been in a long time.

Helen Keeps Her Promise.

That very night when George came in I saw at a glance that he was in a particularly genial humor. I would keep my promise to Mrs. Sexton at once and have it over. As always, I dreaded approaching George with anything that looked like fault-finding. But after dinner he said:

"I think I shall remain in to-night. I have a magazine I want to read."

"That's nice! Would you mind talking a little first?"

"Anything of importance? I am keen to get at the magazine."

It was not very encouraging, but I went on:

"Yes, very important to me. I'll promise not to be long." I hesitated. It was going to be harder than I thought. "I saw Mrs. Sexton to-day." I finally commenced, "and she said awfully nice things to me. That's what made me want to talk to you." I had no intention of tell him of anything she had said save her praise of me, but I wanted his attention.

"Yes—what did she say?"

"She said she was flattered in my improvement, my gain in poise, my greater understanding of social matters. Those were her exact words. Wasn't she nice?"

"Very. But she only said what was so." I was so surprised at his answer I could scarcely go on.

"If you feel that way why didn't you sometimes say so?" I exclaimed forgetting her caution, everything save that he had withheld praise he knew my due. "Why don't you tell me when I please you as well as when I displease you? It isn't fair! You find fault and make me unhappy when I do the slightest thing you do not like, but you never make up for it by telling me of the things that I do which you do like. I have tried to change myself, to make myself all over to suit you, and I seem to never please you in spite of it. Please George be a little more fair with me, won't you?"

"If you have finished your tirade I will read," was all my answer. All I deserved for talking as I had, for not controlling myself.

To-morrow—The Reaction.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

French voile, batiste or dimity will make up most attractively and at little expense with the aid of pattern No. 8785. Filet lace is the trimming which was chosen for this model, but Valenciennes lace may be substituted if desired. The new feature of the waist is the unusually large collar, which hangs to the waistline at front and back, giving the effect of a bolero. The waist closes underneath this collar at centre front and is softly gathered at the shoulders. A small roll collar of lace finishes the V neck, and the large collar is edged with the same. The sleeves are given in two lengths and the neck may be in either of two outlines. The two-piece skirt is gathered all around to the slightly raised waistline, and there are three applied bands of lace at knee depth.

The lady's dress pattern No. 8785 is cut in four sizes—36 to 42 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 4⅝ yards 36 inch or 4 yards 44 inch material, with 10¼ yards 3 inch lace.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction. This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acids and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Paternal Germany.

A government, says a writer in the Twentieth Century Magazine, which tells you how to carry your umbrella, which forbids ladies who wear long hatpins to enter railway trains, which fines you if you throw cigar stubs or papers on the street, which does not permit your children to make a noise so that others are disturbed—such a government does restrict individual liberty, but just as certainly it enlarges the common liberties and pleasure of everybody. The government thus eulogized is that of Germany, which the writer quoted prefers to our "go-as-you-please" system.

LUDENDORFF IS BRAINS OF HUN

Germans Pin Hope of Victory to Him.

SKETCH OF HIS CAREER

He Preaches the Gospel of Ruthlessness In Its Most Advanced Form and by Doctoring All Reports He Keeps Up the Morale of the Teutonic People Who Think They Win Every Battle.

SPEAKING in the Reichstag some little time ago Haase, the Socialist leader, said: "The truth, gentlemen, is that Count von Hertling is only a sign, which covers the all-powerful military party; the real ruler is Ludendorff." If Ludendorff is, indeed, the real master of Germany, the real brains of the German war machine, what more fitting than that our readers should meet him and learn something about him? The notion that the Kaiser is the brains of Germany is dispelled by the fact that the German army has some first-class brains in its round skull, and a glance at the photograph of the Crown Prince would establish his own alibi. For a long time Hindenburg was supposed to be the master spirit of the Central Powers' military exertions, but those in a position to judge are almost unanimous in saying that the best brain in the high command of the German army is behind the broad, bulging forehead of Ludendorff, whose title is Lieutenant-General Quartermaster, and in whose honor a bridge has been named by the Kaiser.

Hindenburg, they say, is the arm; Ludendorff is the brain. In a recent article in La Revue, Captain Carre, of the French army, discusses Ludendorff, and lays emphasis upon the creed of force and cruelty of the man as revealed by his utterances and his acts. In appearance Ludendorff does not impress like Hindenburg as massive and trooper-like. If there is any science of physiognomy, Ludendorff is a much swifter, clearer thinker than Hindenburg. The latter frequently indulges in furious bursts of passion, and makes his subordinates shiver, which, perhaps has something to do with the great respect shown him by his butler-like colleagues. He bumps the table with his fist, and gives vent to profanity, and one recalls other men who have built up a reputation for force of character on no better foundation than a formidable countenance, rude manners, and the lavish use of the word "hell."

Ludendorff is quite as ruthless as Hindenburg, as the following passage, which is translated from an interview by the New York Times, indicates: "War is not any more a war of armies, but a struggle of nations against nations. All the means used to weaken an enemy nation become legitimate — by killing women and children, for example, one destroys the mothers and future defenders of the country."

One of the most important duties discharged by Ludendorff is not directly a military one. He may advise Hindenburg as to strategy, and that Hindenburg relies upon him in this matter is indicated by the fact that the people of Berlin call the Field Marshal "Wassagstdu?" This is the result of his answering questions so frequently by turning to Ludendorff, and saying, "What do you say?" Ludendorff may plan the great strokes of the war, but his most useful service to Germany, perhaps, has been his manipulation of official report". If one had no other source of information than German bulletins, he would inevitably come to the conclusion that Germany had not lost a battle, had not made a mistake, had not been checked, since the struggle began. It would be impossible for any censorship, any official conspiracy, to impose upon one of the allies the reports that Ludendorff has invited the German people to accept. They have accepted, and therefore their "will-to-win" remains strong.

Speaking of these reports, Capt. Carre says: "Cunning, tortuous, a forger and a liar, thus appears Ludendorff in the course of this special work."

Air Saves Dam Gates.

Extraordinary measures employed last winter at Keokuk Dam to prevent ice on the upstream side from damaging the spillway gates have been vindicated. Recurrence of damage wrought during previous winters was averted in the face of conditions as severe probably as any that may be experienced hereafter. An elaborate pneumatic system, designed to agitate the water before each of the 119 gates and prohibit the formation of ice during below-zero weather, was installed. The arrangement consists in part of a supply main, 4,270 feet long, extending across the dam from the power house. It carries dried air under pressure to discharge pipes placed midway between the piers at points a foot in front of each gate and 10 feet below the surface. These tubes are held vertically and fitted with needle-point valves. Each is able to deliver two cubic feet of air into the water every minute, although this is more than is normally necessary. The result is the maintenance in front of each gate of a semi-circular open space. While protecting the gates, the scalloped opening allows the ice, sometimes more than two feet thick, to bear against the piers. The system has proved its ability to melt the ice faster than ordinary expansion can move the enormous field forward toward the spillway gates. — Popular Mechanics.

Two Kinds of Onslaught.

It is related that at a recent luncheon at Oyster Bay, Col. Roosevelt remarked that he considered America should have maintained a larger standing army, going on to say that—

"Perhaps then Germany would not have dared to murder our wives and babies by the hundred on the seas."

A pacifist objected to this.

"Large standing armies," he said, "mean enormous expenditure — an enormous war tax."

"Well," answered Col. Roosevelt, "isn't a tax on our purse a thousand times better than attack on our person?"

The two young giants stood blushing before the mother whose every suggestion had been law to them, and from whose verdict there was no appeal. Their powerful frames quivered in every muscle while the little woman put the finishing touches to the seal of their fate. No stern judge was ever more deliberate in pronouncing sentence upon a prisoner at the bar than was Mrs. Hanshy, when she concluded: "James Hanshy, I'm terribly sorry for you, more sorry than I can tell."

And Jim understood. Stepping over to his mother, he caught her little round face between his two big sun-browned hands and stooping, pressed a kiss to her lips. Turning to Tom, he gave him a hearty shake of the hand and then walked out of the house to begin the duties of the day. Mrs. Hanshy knew that the incident was closed forever. The Twins had never questioned her right to decide between them, and they never discussed her rulings.

It was Sunday again, Jim's Sunday, but Tom knew what was expected of him. He feared that Nell would ask why Jim didn't come, and he was quite relieved when she did not mention the Big Twin's absence. She knew that something had happened. "up at the Hanshy's," but she would have spared Tom, as she would have spared Jim. Was she sorry? She knew she would miss Jim, but Tom's absence would have been a source of equal regret to her under similar circumstances.

Time grew apace, and Gossip took wings and flew through the Whetstone Valley, with the message that Nell Sargent and one of Mrs. Hanshy's Twins were to be married. But Gossip didn't wait for particulars and when asked: "Which one?" was unable to give a definite answer.

Tom told Jim of his approaching marriage in June, and the information was accepted as a matter of course. Tom and Nell were to ride to the country-town to have the ceremony performed, and all the people of the Valley, young and old, were to be invited to the Sargents' home for a feast and frolic and to welcome the return of the Bride and Bridegroom.

The gleam of a perfect June morning was over everything; the sweetness of the clover fields was everywhere. Jim was on hand to bid Tom and Nell Godspeed. He lifted Nell into the saddle, watched them ride away, and then he stood motionless, gazing after them until they reached the turn in the road; then he walked back to the Hanshy home.

It was afternoon, and the bride and groom would soon return. Mr. and Mrs. Hanshy were leaving for the Sargent's. Jim was not ready to go down. The little mother looked at him with more compassion than she had shown since deciding the Little Twin should have Nell Sargent. He was quick to read her heart, and he stooped and kissed her.

The Valley folks were gathering at the Sargent home, but Jim could not go down—not yet. He wandered down the road in the direction from which the bride and groom would come. They were not in sight. He thought of his happy days with Nell. He turned from the road and was soon on the banks of the Whetstone. He was a boy again and Nell was with him. He ran down the steep embankment, catching a branch here and there as he went, to keep from falling headlong, and he fancied that he could hear Nell laughing at the grotesque spectacle he presented. The murmuring ripples sang of Nell. Bending over he dipped his hands into the water and drew it back and forth, remembering how pretty Nell's hands had looked when she had allowed the water to thus run, sparkling through her fingers. He climbed up the bank and found the big beech tree, with "Nell and Jim" cut into the bark, and then he wondered if the bride and groom were coming.

Going back to the road, Jim saw the dancers whirling about on the raised platform, under the wide-spreading branches of an oak which stood in front of the Sargent home; and he, now and then, caught a note from old man Hardy's screechy fiddle. And then he thought of the briar-patch beyond the cloverfield, where the wild roses were in bloom. He would get a bouquet for the bride, and as Jim Hanshy plucked the roses, he spoke to himself:

"I wonder where I'd 've been today if Tom 'd been the Big Twin? and what would Tom be doing now? Would he be watching for someone to come down the road that he didn't want to see? No; he wouldn't. That wouldn't be like him. Tom would 't hang around here and make me feel like I'd robbed him. But what could he do? Perhaps he'd mount the fastest horse on the place and ride—and ride—and-never-come-back; or maybe he'd——"

A rattlesnake sounded its chivalrous warning. Jim figured that it was about a few feet away, and he knew it was coiled, ready to strike. It gave him an idea. His brain whirled and he thought quickly. Dropping upon his knees he closed his eyes and thrust out the hand which held the wildflowers, in the direction from which the sound came; he waited—but only for a moment. He felt the fang of the reptile sink into his flesh, and he jumped to his feet. Tightly grasping his wrist above the wound to arrest the circulation Jim walked slowly to the house. There was no hurry, the poison would do its work fast enough when released.

The merrymaking at the Sargents was still in progress but Tom and Nell had not yet returned. Once, now half afraid he would see them, Jim looked down the road again. He had found a pencil and a scrap of paper and had written all he had cared to say. He caught the echoes of laughter from the Sargents, and he heard Hardy's fiddle, but he was weary and faint. He would lie down to rest, and rest, and dream-dream of Tom's bride.

Back from the little church which stood on the side of the hill were Tom and Nell Hanshy. Their lashes were wet with tears that came unbidden as they covered the new mound of clay at their feet with the sweetest flowers they could find in all the Valley. At the Hanshy home sat the father, silently watching the lengthening shadows of a summer Sunday afternoon. The little mother was listlessly leafing a Bible, hoping to come across some passage that would bring comfort to her heart. A scrap of paper released from the pages of the book fluttered to the floor at the little woman's feet. She picked it up, read, and then re-read it to her husband:

Dear Tom—
All that is mine I leave for you and Nell.—Jim.

"Andrew Hanshy," said the little woman; "that's the Big Twin's will."

"So I reckon."

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by most druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

SINGING MICE.

Sound Made by the Animals Is a Rapid, Whole-Toned Trill.

Many people have heard of "singing mice," but almost nothing is known as to the meaning of their performance.

One of the most precise descriptions of the song is given by Mr. C. A. Coburn, who says: "The sound is best described as a rapid, whole-toned trill, involving the tones c and d. The quality of the tone resembled somewhat that of a fife or flute, but each tone ended with a slight throaty click." The song can be heard at a distance of from 15 to 20 feet. It is usually heard late at night or early in the morning, but that may be partly due to the fact that these are usually quiet times. Mr. Coburn mated a female singer with an ordinary mouse, but none of her many children had her peculiarity. Nor did it occur in the second or third generation. Some have suggested that singing mice are suffering from some disease of the lungs or vocal chords, or that they have asthma, but this is only guessing. One curious point is that the few singers that have been examined have all been females.

The song is not at all like the ordinary squeaking of mice. Dr. Elliott Coues writes of a mouse he had given to him that "in a few moments the little musician piped up and sang very prettily; it was not squeaking, but singing, musically and rhythmically, in a high key, with a thin and wiry but not displeasing quality—something like a weak-voiced canary bird."

We ought to find out something more definite about this curious peculiarity. The kettle "sings," the cat purrs, the dog snores; what does the mouse do?—My Magazine.

Her Ear For Music.

"What is that tune your daughter is playing?"

"Which daughter?" asked Mrs. Cumrox, "If it is the older girl it's Liszt's Hungarian rhapsody, and if it's the younger one it's exercise 27."—Washington Star.

The truest mark of being born with great qualities is being born without envy.—Rochefoucauld.

"I Need Hardly Say how thankful I was to get out alive, and fully made up my mind that I would write and tell you how useful Dr. Chase's Ointment was," writes a survivor of the Gallipoli Peninsula campaign. "We found that it afforded instant relief from poison from shrubs and bushes, and got to using it for all manner or minor wounds and grazes."

PREVENT MILK SOURING

Production of First-Class Seed Potatoes Increases Yields.

Exercise Male Breeding Stock—The Bull, Stallion, Ram and Boar Must All Be Given Exercise If the Standard of the Herd Is to Be Maintained.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

IT is one of the anomalies of life that the sources of our greatest pleasures and greatest means of good, may also be sources of life's greatest pains and most harm. Milk is a case in point. Milk is the best source of life's greatest need—proper and sufficient food. It may also be a cause of the destruction of life, because it may become the home or feeding ground of those death-dealing organisms which are now recognized as the cause of practically all deaths, except those due to accident or old age.

Fortunately we have discovered comparatively simple methods of combating the effects of what are called pathogenic (disease-producing) bacteria. These may be stated in a few short rules as follows:

1. Milk which is consumed in a raw condition must be drawn only from cows which are healthy.

2. As soon as the milk is drawn from the cow, it should be cooled to 50 degrees or lower, and be kept at that temperature until consumed.

3. All pails, strainers, dippers, milk bottles, pitchers, etc., which come in contact with the milk, must be thoroughly washed and preferably steamed, or be rinsed after washing in a chloride solution, which has been found to be one of the best germicides.

4. Milk should not be exposed to the air any longer than absolutely necessary, as this seeds the milk with a fresh lot of germs. This means the keeping of milk in a closed vessel and not in an open dish.

5. "Left over" milk from meals should not be put into the general supply, as this causes the whole lot to spoil.

6. "Left over" milk from the sick room should be pasteurized or destroyed, as it may spread disease.

7. Milk at all times and in all places should be kept "clean" and "cool."—Prof. H. H. Dean, Ontario Agricultural College.

Roguing Potatoes.

The average yield of potatoes per acre in the Province of Ontario for the past thirty-six years has been about 115 bushels. The yields vary greatly. In 1917 there were variations in Ontario from twenty-five or less up to seven hundred bushels per acre. People are realizing more and more that for high yields of potatoes conditions must be favorable. It is important to have good fertile soil well cultivated and to plant a liberal supply of seed of the best varieties at the proper time. Seed potatoes somewhat immature which have been produced in a cool climate, and which are comparatively free from disease, are apt to furnish seed of high quality. Even under these conditions it is well to carefully inspect the seed before planting and to thoroughly rogue the growing crop.

A potato field is rogued by removing the undesirable plants. A thorough roguing of the growing crop once or twice during the summer is one of the most effectual ways in ridding the field of a number of the potato diseases. This operation would also insure the immediate removal of the weak and unthrifty plants which are sure to produce undesirable seed. Potato growers sometimes go through their fields and remove all plants which are not true to type. Thorough roguing is one of the best methods of securing pure, healthy seed of high quality.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, Ontario Agricultural College.

Exercise the Breeding Stock.

Exercise is essential for all male breeding stock. At certain seasons of the year it is an easy matter to arrange for ample exercise for the stallion, the bull, the boar, or the ram. At other times it is rather difficult and frequently little or no exercise is given, or if given too much freedom occasionally, harm to the sire is the result.

The bull should not be allowed to run loose in the pasture with the cows. In the first place it is a dangerous custom, as it gives abundant opportunity for the bull to attack a person unawares or where escape is difficult. Further, a record of the date of breeding of the cows cannot be kept and no herd can be handled to the best advantage without these records.

The main points to be observed in keeping a bull in good condition so as to retain his breeding powers are to avoid excessive use when young and to give plenty of exercise and a moderate ration when mature. A good boxstall, about ten by twelve feet, gives freedom indoors, and it is well to arrange for a strong paddock outdoors with convenient passage between the two. Two or more bulls of any age may be kept together if they be dehorned, and the advantage is that more exercise will be taken.

The stallion on a route usually gets plenty and sometimes too much exercise. At other times moderate work of the boxstall and paddock will suffice.

The ram running during the greater part of the year with the main flock gets plenty of exercise, especially if the breeder is aiming for a crop of strong lambs, and gets the flock outside practically every day during the winter.

The boar will do best on a grass plot with plenty of shade during summer, and in a pen provided with a small yard during the winter months.—Harry M. King, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College.

Producing from Dead Locusts.

Locusts are plentiful in Uruguay and the farmers of that republic are compelled to keep up a constant war against them. Millions of these destructive insects are killed every year. Recently it was learned that soap, fertilizer and lubricating oil may be obtained from the dead locusts, and in the future they will be utilized for that purpose.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Less Waste The Better The Service

"SLOW" telephone accounts -- the accounts on which repeated efforts to collect must be made -- result in waste of time and labor.

¶ Most telephone users pay their bills promptly and the labor and time of collecting them are reasonable.

¶ But some subscribers overlook their bills or neglect to pay them promptly, and the work of collecting such accounts is laborious and time-wasting.

¶ The elimination of waste in the telephone business means better telephone service. When we can do away with any waste time or labor that may be involved in furnishing service, we can put an equal amount of time and labor into the service itself to the benefit of all telephone users.

¶ Help us, by the prompt payment of accounts, to avoid waste time and labor and to concentrate on the enormous amount of necessary work that war-time conditions demand.

SAYS BATHING JUST A LUXURY

Arctic Explorer Makes Startling Statement.

A REMARKABLE TREATISE

Persons Who Are Not Too Fond of Cleanliness Will Be Pleased to Know That Vilhjalmur Stefansson Finds That It Is Not Essential to Good Health —Attacks the Old Belief to the Contrary.

IT is not essential to one's health that one bathe frequently, according to the hypothesis expounded by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, in a philosophical discussion of scurvy, in a recent issue of the Medical Review of Reviews. Mr. Stefansson asserts bathing is purely an esthetic principle and that the value of cleanliness to health has not been established by the medical practitioners.

Mr. Stefansson's pronouncement will be greeted with jubilation by the elements which possess an ingrown dislike for hydrogen and oxygen in proportions of two to one. It has been accepted as dogmatic by the Mexican pelados for years, who, as a religious function, bathe only on St. John's Day, which is celebrated early in May.

"Much of what the ordinary practitioner tells you about bathing for health, is either not yet demonstrated as true or else is demonstratably untrue," declares Mr. Stefansson. 'The fact is that, according to the point of view, cleanliness is a matter of esthetics or else of taboo observance rather than of health."

The explorer makes an apology in the article for his attack on medical orthodoxy by declaring he has been divorced from medical books and journals for more than ten years. Mr. Stefansson wrote the treatise while in the Arctic region in 1916. On April 26 last he was reported as dangerously ill from typhoid fever on Herschel Island.

Fruit-Jar Rings.

Rubber rings of inferior quality and of improper sizes are held responsible for much of the spoilage of canned goods the past year. Because of a good deal of complaint the Department of Agriculture carefully investigated the question and found that many of the rings were not sufficiently durable to be used in the cold-pack method. Not only must the rubber rings be able to withstand hot water and steam, but they must not enlarge very much when heated. Rings for standard jars should have an inside diameter of 2¼ in. and the width of the circular band should be from ¼ to ⅝ in. Government investigators have drawn up a set of specifications for rings, which have been adopted by the manufacturers.

VIENNESE DAINTIES GONE.

Famous Dishes Vanish and Coffee Disappears.

A delayed letter, passed by the Austrian censor and received in Stockholm recently from a Swede living in Vienna, gives some interesting information about conditions there. Once a gourmet's mecca, Vienna has become a city of scarcity.

Pork has become a rarity. Mutton is scarce and beef has greatly deteriorated in quality. The scarcity of fodder has hit the Austrian cattle breeding industry most severely. The population has to take its chance with meat rations.

Practically all the famous flour dishes of Vienna have vanished and the city's dietary now contains only a small number of dishes, which continually recur. One can still buy Russian caviar, however, and Scandinavian anchovies.

There is practically no coffee in Austria. The same applies to Sweden. The Swedes drink odd messes of coffee dust, acorns and dandelion roots. But in Sweden one is always given a little jug of milk with it. About Christmas time the Viennese authorities forbade milk being served with coffee substitute, so the hapless Austrian sadly misses his favorite "melange."

Street lighting has been considerably reduced. For transit citizens have to depend on the electric street cars, for the "stadbahn" is almost exclusively occupied with military and freight transport. There is much grumbling that the city had not built an overhead or tube electric railway before the war. The street cars are grossly overcrowded and automobiles and public vehicles have disappeared from the streets.

Sugar and Consumption.

For many years scientific men all over the world have eagerly sought some cure for consumption, or "tuberculosis," as it is soothingly called by physicians. Serums of all sorts, as well as medicines, have been tried in vain, but the great white plague has resisted.

At times it has seemed as if a cure had almost been found, or at least something had been discovered to check the ravages of the disease, but nothing definite has resulted. Now hope is again stirred by the cabled information that Prof. Monaco, of the biochemical section of the Lincei Academy at Rome, has made the desired discovery. The eminence of the man and the carefulness of the Italian scientific press is almost certain guarantee against any false encouragement.

Prof. Monaco, explaining his discovery, said he had observed that sugar had a remarkable effect on the secretions of the human organisms. After seven years of study of these phenomena he became convinced that the secretions of saliva, bile and the gastric and pancreatic juices were modified profoundly by the introduction of sugar. This gave him the idea of applying this method to the bronchial secretions of consumptives.

The first experiments made by this method on consumptive soldiers from the front gave results far exceeding his expectation, he reports. There was rapid improvement in most cases, and he obtained cures which appeared to be radical.

Prof. Monaco explained that the bronchiel secretion is an indispensable medium for the existence of the tubercle bacilli, and that after an injection of saccharose the secretion diminishes and finally disappears, the bacilli disappearing with it.

A Tin Pyrometer.

A tin pyrometer is now used for measuring temperatures above the thermocouple range with the use of a direct insertion pyrometer. According to the Electrical World, the tin is contained i na graphite bulb and expands through a graphite capillary tube. In this way the metal is subject to a reducing atmosphere, which tends to maintain a bright surface and keep the metal pure and free from dross. The expansion of the graphite is almost negligible in comparison with that of the tin. The tin does not appreciately evaporate until a temperature of presumably 2,000 deg. C., is reached, so that no difficulty in change of calibration is encountered. A steel tube containing an insulated contact is lowered down to the capillary tube until it makes a contact with the surface of the tin and thus completes a circuit through an electric buzzer or sounder. The height of the tin is indicated by the position of the upper end of the steel tube which holds a pointer that moves beside a scale. Since the contact is insulated in quartz, which has an inappreciable thermal expansion, the inaccuracy is negligible.

Searchlight Ranges.

In an article in the Electrical World, an American officer gives some particulars of the range of electric searchlights. In general, owing to atmospheric absorption, it is impracticable to work at ranges exceeding 6,000 yards, although cases are on record in which ships have been distinguished at a distance of nine miles, and on slightly misty nights the glare of distance beams may be seen in the sky at even greater distances. With a 60-inch mirror, an arc operating at 20,000 watts the ranges at which targets of grey and medium lights targets may be satisfactorily illuminated are stated to be as follows:

Very clear atmospheres, 10,000 yards (or more).

Average atmospheres, 6,000 yards to 8,000 yards.

Slight haze or rain, 3,000 yards to 4,000 yards.

Fog or early dawn, 1,000 yards to 2,000 yards.

A Fish's Armor.

The possession of a complete armor is very common among fishes; as a matter of fact, the scales of fish, when of sufficient size and thickness, and covering the greater part of the body, form a most effective protection against injury. Some fish are completely encased in a dense bony armor covering the entire body. The eyes, all the fins, the lips, and other small necessary aperatures alone are movable, these appearing in openings at the sides where they occur, held in position by surrounding tough skin.

His Fool Wife

By ELINOR MARSH

"Mr. Winters," said the secretary, "I wish you to go to London with an important dispatch. You are aware that we are surrounded by spys in the employ of the Central Powers. I do not doubt that we have them right here employed in this department. We can't use the cable, even with the best A plan. Indeed, what I wish to communicate to our allies abroad must be carried by some person we can trust."

The secretary handed Mr. Winters a dozen pages of manuscript containing information as to how many troops the United States could send to France by a given date and many other matters of equal importance. It was written in the secretary's own hand—he would trust no one—and placed in an official envelope of the state department, but unsealed.

"I recommend you," continued the secretary, "to refrain from using the official envelope till you reach your destination. As to how you will carry the dispatch, that I leave to you."

John Winters went home and after telling his wife of the important trust that had been committed to him and what a successful transmission would bring him and her, directed to pack a suit case, the only baggage he intended to take with him. The dispatch he gave her to place in the suit case. When he was ready to depart he examined the case.

"Why, my dear," he exclaimed testily, "You have placed it in the official envelope." He took it up to remove it and found that she had sealed the envelope. He was about to tear it open when she stopped him.

"I am sorry, dear, but what is done is done. There isn't time now, but when you get aboard the ship, steam the envelope and open it without destroying it. Then you can use it as instructed."

"If there is any man in the world," said Winters with much irritation "as stupid as a woman I'd like to meet him. But I can't stop to do the job now."

That night he boarded the ship at a late hour, went to his stateroom, locked himself in and turned into his berth first taking a look at the package and when the ship sailed at midnight, he was fast asleep.

On awakening in the morning his first thought was of the dispatch. He got out of bed dreading lest some one had entered his state room in the night and carried it off. Leaving his berth he opened the suit case to assure himself that the dispatch was still there. It was where it had been placed addressed, and bearing on the left hand corner the imprint of the state department of the United States. He got back into his berth and ringing for the room steward called for hot water. The steward, who spoke with a foreign accent, brought the water, catching a glimpse, as he handed it in, of the package in the open suit case. As soon as he had gone Winters arose and held the package over the hot water.

"I believe the cussed thing is glued," he growled, after steaming the package till the water grew cold. "Well, I'll dress and go to breakfast and after breakfast I'll try it again."

Winters after having dressed and breakfasted, tipped the head waiter to furnish him with an alcohol lamp by which he could heat water in his room. Returning with this he placed it on a table, and open his suit case.

His heart jumped up into his throat. The package was gone.

He wasted no time in lamentation. He went to the captain, told his story and every man on board was searched, as well as every cranny of the ship. The missing package was found in an old boot belonging to the steward who had brought the hot water to Winter's stateroom. The man was put in the ship's brig and Winters joyfully took the package to his room. Then he hastily tore off the envelope to assure himself that the document had not been tampered with.

Again he was doomed to a horrible discovery. The envelope contained nothing but blank paper. The thief, or rather spy who had followed him from Washington and shipped as a steward was threatened with death if he did not disclose what he had done with the dispatch. He clung to his statement that he had not opened the envelope that had contained it.

Winters was so utterly prostrated by his loss that his voyage was a long and dreary one. Just before reaching port he pulled himself together, and taking off a flannel shirt put on a white one. Taking up a package which he supposed contained cuffs he opened it and instead of cuffs took out the dispatch.

Winters was so overjoyed that he gave way to antics that called in the occupant of the adjoining stateroom to learn if he had a lunatic for a neighbor. Whereupon Winters quieted down. But he said nothing about the dispatch.

When the ship reached port the spy was turned over to the authorities and Winters proceeded to London where he delivered his dispatch.

Mrs. Winters on her husband's return confessed that she had wrapped the manuscript as cuffs, filled the official envelope with blank paper, and sealed it for a special purpose. Winters doesn't think her such a fool as he did when he left on his mission. At any rate she received a large sum from the government for her stupidity.

SIGNS OF COMING REVOLT

German Women Are Growing Tired of Slaughter.

Philip Gibbs, the noted war correspondent, believes that he see signs of a coming revolt among the Teutons. He has noted a number of facts which appear to him very significant. They are significant because they give direct and convincing evidence of the assertion of an element of independence of character among the German people which has been subdued too long. Mr. Gibbs, after relating how a waggon load of mail matter came into possession of the British recently, says the letters thus taken "reveal an agony and the spirited revolt of a people who now understand something of the truth, and see nothing but death in all this war."

"Oh, how much longer is it all going to last," writes one correspondent to a relative with the German army. "It is full time the wicked humbug of it were at an end. In the last few days we had news of the death of five relatives in the big offensive. It is frightful, and still no sign of peace. The world is full of sorrow and misery. If only this wicked war would end, this murder cease. Oh, what a cost, and how much more to pay before the end!"

"Peace does not seem to be coming along, as we fondly hoped," writes another. "All this in the west is too wicked for anything, and we are full of worry and anxiety. The whole crowd out hereabouts have had news of the death of their menfolk. It is too awful for anything. Four years of it now and no sign of the end. We hope every day it will come to a decision and that the British will be driven into the sea; but they stand firm."

The Allies stand firm. There is the shattering of all the German hopes. There is the portent that a day of reckoning must come between the public at home and the all-high authority of the military party, which has not scrupled at any methods of pressure to sway to its will the minds of the German people. Meanwhile, behind the external act of the written letters revealed by Philip Gibbs lies the internal thought and feeling which may lead on to—revolt? The day of reckoning may not be yet. Its ultimate fulfilment will tax the combined strength of the allied forces. But, without underrating Germany's strength, it is possible to gather some hope from the expressed agony of the mothers and sisters of the slaughtered Germans that through the mists of their tears they are beginning to see the truth, and that seeing it, may lead them to the source of the power that has wrought all this horror, and to the accomplishment of its downfall. If there is to be the revolt in Germany that has been predicted, who shall say that it will not be led by the women?

A Heroic Nurse.

In December last a thrilling scene occurred beside a humble cot in the field hospital at Salonica. Lying there, her countenance lit by a pleasant smile, was a middle-aged Scotch woman, Flora Sandes. She was convalescing from wounds that had torn her entire right side from shoulder to knee. Bending over the little lady, a royal aide-de-camp to the Prince Regent of Serbia pinned on her breast the gold and silver cross of Karageorge—a rare decoration given only for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle. Around the sick bed were grouped officers and men of the occupant's regiment, in whose regard she stood high, rejoicing with her upon the investiture of so signal a mark of honor. For Miss Sandes, though originally a hospital nurse in the Balkan kingdom, had been given permission to join its army. Not long afterward she found herself a sergeant, and it was while leading her men in an assault the previous September, during the campaign on the Macedonian front, that an exploding grenade made such terrible havoc of her body.

Of the same home army as the daughter of Scotland is the young Roumanian girl who turned probable massacre into victory for one of her country's regiments in October of last year. Learning of a Hungarian ambuscade, she hastened to the leader of the approaching troops and informed him of their danger. The valiant maid did more. Placing herself at the head of the column she led it safely, by a circuitous route, to the rear of the enemy. The result was a complete and easy conquest.

Stories such as these have been told and retold in steadily increasing numbers during the last three years. They have been here recalled once more, less for the intrinsic interest in their red-blooded details than to point the truth already stated; such splendidly inspiring deeds of womanhood are so far from unusual that they are positively to be counted upon whenever patriotism wakens and the pressing need for heroism comes.

Oils From the Antarctic.

The results were recently announced of an investigation into a series of oils prepared during the Australasian Antarctic Expedition. These materials included sea-leopard oil, Weddell-seal oil and penguin oil.

The oils have been carefully examined in order to determine their characters in comparison with commercial oils of a similar kind. They were found to be of good quality, and could be used for soap-making.

Conflicting Purposes.

Barlowe—I'm going to bring my wife around to call on you to-night.

Dobson—That's right, but do me a favor, old man. Don't let her wear her new furs. I don't want my wife to see them just now."

Barlowe—Why, that's what we are coming for.

Position of Trust.

"What I want is a man in whose honesty, discretion, and skill I can place implicit reliance."

"You want a confidential secretary?" asked a friend.

"No, I don't. I want a man I can trust to plant potatoes."

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 181 acrs, with 3,235 cattle, 514 calves, 1,356 hogs, and 538 sheep.

Trade at the Union Stock Yards was practically at a standstill yesterday. Up to noon not more than one hundred cattle had passed from the scales. The buyers were off the market most of the morning, and prices were anywhere from 75c. to $1.25 per cwt. below last week's quotations. The offering was composed mainly of medium quality cattle, with a limited sprinkling of the good to choice varieties. The abattoir buyers are strongly contending that far too many medium grade cattle are appearing on the market. The really poor quality butcher cows were almost impossible to cash yesterday at any price.

Spring lambs were 50c. per cwt. lower. Sheep were firm.

Good calves were steady, but medium and common calves were off from 50c. to 75c. per cwt.

Hogs were easier at $18.25, fed and watered. The buyers say that $18 per cwt. will be the top price to-day.

Chinese Forestry Battalions.

Hamilton Fyfe, of the London Daily Mail, writes as follows, from the war correspondents' headquarters, in France:

"This is a queer and odd war," an Ulsterman said to me the other day. I have not felt its queerness and oddness more forcibly borne in upon me than I did this afternoon when, in the midst of a great French forest, I came across a Chinese compound and watched Chinese coolies, who until about a month ago had never handled an axe, cutting down trees with the deft skill and swiftness of Canadian loggers.

During the past month since the experiment was started they have cleared large areas of the forest. They have also been successful as charcoal burners. Charcoal is useful in the trenches for cooking. Last year we had to buy large quantities. This year we shall almost supply ourselves—another illustration of the business-like foresight of "Q," the quartermaster-general's department of our army.

"They seem to be putting their backs into it," I said, while we looked on at some swinging axes, some trimming off stumps with adzes, some neatly stacking the picket-posts for barked wire and the fascines—bundles of brushwood used for making paths both in the trenches and outside them. "Yes," said the Canadian major in command, "that's because we put them on task-work. We say to them, 'There's a certain job to be done. As soon as it's finished you can go home, and you'll find your chow-chow waiting for you.' That speeds the work up better than anything. It keeps them in a good humor, too."

Soldiers of the Soil.

Boys enrolled as farm helpers in the Soldiers of the Soil organization are doing good work with the seeding. In Ontario 15,000 boys have been enrolled, many of them are now on the land; in Manitoba over 1,000 are at work; in Saskatchewan 1,100 are placed; in Alberta 624; in British Columbia 540; in Nova Scotia 1,398; in Quebec over 1,000 have been already enrolled. New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island are still to be heard from, but the enrollment is under way.

Will Exchange Labor.

Hon. G. C. Robertson, Labor representative in the Government, stated in the House of Commons that an arrangement had been completed by the United States Department of Labor and the Canadian Department of Immigration and Colonization for the interchange of farm laborers. Several thousand have already entered the Canadian West under this arrangement.

A Curious Will.

Though he left a fortunate of £41,500, Mr. H. S. Maples, solicitor, of Spalding, Lincolnshire, desired a pauper's burial, his will stating:

"I would like the present union contractor to carry out my funeral as simply as a pauper, and my wife to give each of his children £5 in the Post Office Savings Bank."

He gave £50 and his "Diamond Jubilee orchard in Pinchbeck" to his gardener, William Adcock, saying: "The Government will collar his legacy to pay the duty." Subject to a few small bequests, the residue of the personal estate he leaves to his wife, and he directed his executors to allow a post-mortem on any part of his remains that may assist science. The will was made in 1894.

FRENCH AND BRITISH WERE SUCCESSFUL IN RAIDING OPERATIONS

Number of Prisoners Captured—French Increased Their Gains of Yesterday and Took Additional Prisoners And Machine Guns

OFFICIAL REPORT

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 9.—Raiding operations carried out last night by British troops in the region east of Arras netted a few prisoners. South of the Somme River German artillery has been displaying activity in bombarding positions recently captured by British forces there.

THE STATEMENT READS

During the night London troops carried out a successful raid east of Arras, capturing a few prisoners and a machine gun. The enemy's artillery has been active against positions recently captured by us south of the Somme.

AERIAL ACTIVITY

British naval airplanes in a period between July 4 and July 7 dropped six tons of explosives on German works at Ostend, Zeebrugge and Bruges. Direct hits were observed on buildings and vessels. Five German airplanes were destroyed and three others were driven down out of control. All British machines returned.

FRENCH OFFICIAL

Canadian Press.

PARIS, July 9. — French troops early this morning attacked the German lines on a front of about two and a half miles west of Antheuil, on the front between Montdidier and the Oise, penetrating the enemy positions and realizing an advance of a mile at certain points, the war office announced today.

A German counter attack upon the French lines at the Loges Farm, in the area of this advance was repulsed, French entirely maintaining their gains. Prisoners were taken to number of 450 including 14 officers. In the Longpoint region east of Retz Forest, the French increased their gains of yesterday and took additional prisoners.

THE STATEMENT READS

Between Montdidier and River Oise, French at 5.30 o'clock this morning carried out a local operation west of Antheuil on front of four kilometres. The French troops supported by tanks entered the German lines, captured Ferme Porte and the Ferme des Loges and realized an advance of 18 hundred metres at certain points.

A counter attack at Ferme des Loges was repulsed, the French maintaining all their gains. Prisoners were taken to the number of 450 including 14 officers. South of the Aisne artillery duel continued active throughout the night in the vicinity of Chavigny Farm. The French increased their advance at this point taking 20 prisoners including one officer. The artillery of both sides was active west and north of Chateau Thierry, notably in vicinity of Hill 204. Patrols took prisoners in Champagne in the sector of Marquises and in the direction of Butte Chouain. There was nothing to report on the remainder of the front.

Vessels Warned Of Submarines

Navy Department Has Reason to Believe That U-boats Will Strike Again on Atlantic Coast.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 9.—The Navy Department has reason to believe that German U boats are about to strike again at Atlantic coast shipping. Because of this an official warning to all shipping to be on the alert has been sent out covering the stretch of ocean from the Virginia Capes northward to the vicinity of New York, and eastward a considerable distance out to sea.

The recent inactivity of the U boats off the coast has not deceived navy chiefs into believing that the danger was past, and confidential information tends to prove that a new blow is about to fall. While there is always an element of doubt about submarine information, this data appeared to the authorities to be authentic.

Vessels Warned.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Vessels in this vicinity to-day were warned to watch for a German submarine, believed to be operating about 1,600 miles east of New York.

WAR SUMMARY

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, July 9.—To-day's war summary says: French troops again have been successful in the resumption of the "nibbling" tactics which the Allied Command followed while the Germans prepare for a new blow. Fighting activity on the western front, however, still is much localized. From the enemy lines come no indications that the Germans are about to strike.

For several weeks the Germans have been drilling and instructing special attacking divisions behind the German lines, leaving the front positions to be guarded by mediocre troops. German aerial activity has decreased in the past few days, and it is probable the airmen also are making ready for the next onslaught. The German artillery fire has increased to above normal on certain sectors.

It is not unlikely the enemy will depend on the element of surprise in the impending blow, as he did on March 21, and in the attack against the Cehmin Des Dames. While the Germans have been spreading reports of an attack against the British, it is known they have not constructed defence works on the front between Soissons and Rheims.

Sacred Heart Social To Be Held To-night

Grounds Dry Up Rapidly—Grass Has Been Cut—An Excellent Supper.

The Sacred Heart Social, looked forward to by hundreds of people each year for the fine social time that can be had in addition to an excellent supper, is to be held to-night. While the weather has been showery, it is expected that it will be fine this evening.

The grounds are in excellent condition, the grass having been cut extremely short and the nature of the grounds permit of them drying up in a hurry.

It is worth while, however, taking a chance for the fine supper that has been prepared for the occasion.

French Soldier's Amazing Career; Wins Many Medals

PARIS, July 8.—The amazing and tragic career of Private Bertrand, belonging to the infantry, was told by his lieutenant in the Journal recently. Bertrand wears the French Legion of Honour, Military Medal, Military Cross with seven palms and five stars, British Military Cross, Belgian Military Cross, French Colonial and Morocco medal, the life-saving medal, and also a ribbon for wounds, as he has lost one arm and one leg, and has been otherwise mutilated, besides receiving some thirty bayonet wounds. He is 26. He enlisted at 18, and fought in Morocco, where he saved two officers and won the Military Medal. At the outbreak of the war he went through the Charleroi and Marne battles. At the latter he captured two German field kitchens, having killed the cooks and brought the kitchen with food ready to eat into the French lines. On the Yser and the Somme fighting with the British troops he made ten German prisoners with his own hands, and won the British Military Cross. He was five times taken prisoner and five times escaped. After that he volunteered for the Near East, and at Monastir with one or two comrades he kept four machine guns firing and held an enemy battalion at bay, with the result that 200 prisoners were made. After that at Monastir he saved his captain and a nurse. In this affair he lost an arm and was otherwise mutilated. He was sent back to France, and forty-eight hours after sailing his boat was torpedoed, and the explosion blew off his leg. He amputated the remainder of the limb himself with his own knife. He fell into the sea and managed, with his one arm, to hang on to a floating spar. Then he caught sight of the ship's skipper who had had both arms blown off. He managed to pick him up, and both men remained on the raft for three days and three nights. For this Bertrand was awarded the life-saving medal, the only medal left to him to win. This astounding career has been accompanied by the extraordinary tragedies of his family. His father enlisted at 53 at the beginning of the war, and was killed on September 2, 1914. His four brothers have all died for their country; his last surviving one had lost both arms and both legs and was blinded, and mercifully died a few months ago. Bertrand's old mother has just died also, overcome by the succession of tragedies, and Bertrand remains alone of the family with his sister aged 9, of whom he is the sole support.

Three Italian Sailors on Trial

Accused of Blowing Up Italian Battleship in September Last.

Canadian Press:

ROME, July 9.—Three Italian sailors and one Italian soldier are being tried by court martial on a charge of having blown up the Italian battleship Benedetto Brin on Sept. 27, 1916, by placing an infernal machine in the gun room.

The Benedetto Brin was blown up in the harbour of Brindisi, with the loss of more than a hundred lives, including that of Rear Admiral Rubin De Cervin. An inquiry by the Italian government developed that the battleship had been destroyed through the machinations of German agents and forty persons were arrested.

Fled From Italy.

An Italian named Ambrogetti, implicated in the destruction of the Benedetto Brin, and also of the Italian battleship Leonardo Da Vinci, was arrested, and asserted that he was the financial agent of Monsignor Gerlach, Private Chamberlain to Pope Benedict, and an Austrian citizen. Gerlach fled from Italy before an Italian court had investigated his activities, found him guilty of espionage and sentenced him to imprisonment for life.

Guelph Must Get More Firemen, is Underwriters' Order

Offer of High Wages Has Failed to Fill the Vacancies.

Guelph, July 8. — No small concern is being felt here over the shortage of men in the fire department. Even the offer of higher wages has failed to fill the vacancies.

At a special meeting of the Fire, and Light Committee here, at which John Sutherland, representing the Fire Underwriters' Association, attended, the whole question was discussed. The difficulty appears to be that men can secure just as good or better wages at other vocations, without being tied up for 24 hours in the day.

The result of the conference was that the underwriters have given the committee two more weeks in which to fill the vacancies on the brigade, and failing to do this, another system will be devised whereby the men will be used in shifts, thus necessitating the use of fourteen men, instead of eleven, as at present. This, however, has not yet been worked out, but the chairman, Ald. McHugh, is engaged with the chief in formulating a plan.

Peterborough Lodges Will Be Represented

Masons Will Meet in Windsor This Year.

One of the Peterboro delegates to the sixty-third annual conference of the A. F. and A. M., will be Mr. W. G. Morrow, of the Corinthian Lodge. It is likely that delegates will also be appointed by the Royal Arthur and Peterboro lodges.

The sixty-third annual communication of the Grand Lodge A.F. & A.M. of Canada, in the Province of Ontario will be held at the Collegiate Institute, Windsor, on Wednesday and Thursday, July 17 and 18. Although this is what is known as an 'off year,' yet there will doubtless be an attendance of over a thousand delegates.

The Board of General Purposes will assemble on Monday evening, the 15th, for the purpose of considering and arranging for the business to be submitted to the sessions of Grand Lodge.

Next Enemy Offensive May Eclipse All Previous Battles on West Front

Hindenburg's Delay is Attributed to Many Causes—Big Guns Are Being Brought Up Over Newly Constructed Roads—German Socialist Is Doubtful of Success of New Enemy Drive.

PRISONERS REPORT SHORTAGE OF FOOD

(By William Philip Simms.)
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 9.—The next German blow, believed to be a matter of days, is expected to be the last Hindenburg will be able to deliver, judging from the increasing slowness of his past efforts. But nobody out here doubts that it will be the hardest he is capable of once his men are set in motion, or that it will eclipse all previous battles in point of violence and men and material engaged.

The strange lull which has spread for weeks up and down the lines from one end to the other, save for occasional tiny battles here and there, continues to hover grimly over the west front.

"Flanders Fever."

The German infantry might be sound asleep for all it is doing in the fighting line. Even enemy airmen are sticking closer to their roosts, and despite fine weather, air fighting is considerably below the average. Much has been printed regarding Hindenburg's delay. Some say the "Flanders fever" is the cause; others say lack of men; others that he is waiting until the roads to forward areas are laid so that big guns may be brought up; others believe the morale of the German troops is low. The truth is probably a mixture of all these things, plus other things, besides a shortage of raw materials. Germany doubtlessly has only a limited output of munitions now, making it necessary for her to economize over a long period in order to get a big enough stock to carry out operations on a scale similar to those in March and June. Owing to a limited number of men for armies, however large once, the majority of the German divisions are battered in battle or tired, and Hindenburg must wait until they are rested, refitted and restored to optimism.

The Prisoners.

Prisoners taken since the Hamel fight declare they had no food for two days, owing to a confusion in the lines. Low flying machines finally dropped bundles of "bully beef," "dog biscuits" and hard tack along advanced posts. This method of relieving hunger shows the German army is less able to maintain its cohesion than formerly. The scarcity of airmen officers is growing, according to an enemy order, which says that fewer officers must do reconnaissance flights, non-coms. being substituted. Some of those delivered are breaking under the strain of flying, according to captured letters.

Prisoners say also there is much illness in the army due to "Flanders fever," "grippe," "Spanish influenza" or whatever the strange malady may be called.

War Politicians.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 9.—The resumption of the German offensive is necessary, but its result is doubtful, Herr Stroebel, an independent Socialist, admitted in the Prussian Landstag, according to a Zurich despatch to "The Matin" to-day.

Stroebel declared that in the spring drives the German losses were more than 100,000 in killed alone. The losses in the next phase of the drive, he said, probably would be even higher.

About 900,000 Americans are in France, Stroebel said, which about balances the allies' losses and German gain in man power through new drafts and release of men from the western front.

Several millions more will come unless we Germans rid the government of war politicians, Stroebel said.

THE RAILWAY STRIKE STILL HANGS IN THE BALANCE

Men Are Still Negotiating—The Government is Interested.

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, July 9. — A further conference between members of the Canadian Railway Board and representatives of the Federated Shop Trades Brotherhood was held to-day. At lunch recess, Chairman Hungerford of the Railway Board, said negotiations had been resumed and were proceeding satisfactorily. The conference was devoting itself to details.

OTTAWA, July 9.—While the news in Montreal regarding the railway dispute on which the Railway War Board and the representatives of the Federal employees are negotiating, is somewhat disquieting, the government here does not appear to be worrying unduly with regard to the matter. The government is interested not only from the general national viewpoint, but as a part in the dispute, since the railways are involved, though for the present the negotiations are being left in the hands of the Railway War Board and confidence is expressed here that there will be no strike, though to-day was set as the last day of negotiation by the men. The men may accept the terms, which are substantially the same as those of the McAdoo award in the United States. It is held that living is generally no higher in Canada than over the border, and since the cost of living is the basis of the demand such an arrangement, it is thought, will finally be accepted. One thing appears to be accepted here, that if the increase is ordered, proportional increases to other classes of employees may follow, and this will inevitably lead to an increase in rates.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT WAS AVERTED

Miss Eva Orr and Mr. David Moore Were in Danger of Being Crushed by Steamer Empress.

A narrow escape from serious or possible fatal injuries marked yesterday's trip of the steamer Empress down the lakes. While at the wharf of Mr. David Moore, Miss Eva Orr attempted to get on the steamer but missed her footing and slipped into the water. Mr. Moore was pulled in after her. The steamer commenced to work back towards the wharf when a number of men seeing the predicament of the couple in the water, propped themselves between the side of the boat and the wharf and prevented them from being crushed to death on the side of the landing. Both Miss Orr and Mr. Moore were able to swim and were easily rescued once the danger of being crushed by the boat was removed.

Y.M.C.A. WAR WORK.

...n the provincial convention of

...he country, advised the publica-

...he Y.M.C.A. as the best answer
...could be made to the charges
...st the Red Triangle. The most
...s allegation was that the profit
... by the sale of articles to sol-
... in Y.M.C.A. canteens was so
... that it should have been able
...nder the work of the Red Triangle
...sustaining and make unnecessary
...e campaign for funds in Canada.
... National Council of the Y.M.
... wisely decided to issue a state-
... covering its entire service over
...and in Canada for the year 1917,
...the duly audited report has now
... published. The figures complete-
...tute the charges that the profits
... canteen sales make the Y.M.C.
...-sustaining. It is shown that ... the gross canteen sales reach
...ery heavy total of $2,961,797.35,
...greater part of this being from
...ens in France, the cost of the
... sold in this way amounted to
...8,486.35. To this initial cost must
...dded other important expendi-
..., $20,922.68 for transportation,
...rom damaged goods, by fire, shell
...and submarine, $33,386.01, can-
... equipment $31,493.41, adminis-
...n canteen service, including
...ases, $17,613.61, and huts, hut
...pment, tents and decorations,
...672. A percentage of canteen
sales amounting to $71,587.28 was given in cash to military units for extra rations and comforts. Free distribution of drinks cost the Red Triangle $84,807.08, athletic supplies and prizes were responsible for $51,688.51, free distribution of stationery, magazines and other reading matter represents an expenditure of $70,178.18, and free cinemas, concerts, lectures pianos, music and gramaphones, cost the Y.M.C.A. $109,373.83 last year. Other figures given are equally interesting. The report shows that the Y.M.C.A. war work includes hospitality league work in London, grants made to the British Y.M.C.A. for work among Canadian soldiers, and for work among troops in Mesopotmia, operations in military barracks, hospitals, discharge depots and troop trains in Canada, work on transports and naval work at Halifax.

The report gives some idea of the stupendous nature of the Y.M.C.A. war work, and its publication should allay at least some of the criticism that has been directed at the efforts of the National Council.

CIVIC RESPONSIBILITY.

The responsibility of municipal councils in making their cities and towns places worth while living in, is admirably set forth in an article in the current issue of the Canadian Municipal Journal, the official organ of the Union of Canadian Municipalities. There is a message in the following extract that should not be missed by the City Fathers:

In June, 1916, this Journal commenced its gospel of Canadian Preparedness to meet after war conditions. At that time some people said we were too premature, and others even asked the reason for the Canadian Municipal Journal which deals exclusively with civic problems, taking up any campaign of Preparedness and Reconstruction. They argued that being industrial in character reconstruction was something that could not touch civic Government at all, and even should it affect the municipal life, there would be plenty of time when the war was over. To-day, of course, no one who has followed the events of the war and the preparations that have been made in other parts of this Empire and in the United States, and who has the welfare of the country at heart, would deny the necessity of every public body and association to prepare for the social, economic, and industrial reconstruction that will be forced on to Canada when the war is over. And this applies in particular to municipal bodies, for the reason that the community is directly affected, either beneficially or detrumentally, by any change in local industrial conditions. The effect is seen almost at once in the social and moral life of the community. How this can affect the councils was well illustrated in May, 1916, when many of the mayors from the west and some from the east, met at Ottawa to petition the Federal Government to relieve the then intolerable situation almost in every city, town and village brought about by unemployment caused by war conditions. At that time Canada had not yet received any munition orders, which afterwards were to enrich her people so much, and things looked black. But at that time, and this is our point, the workers looked to the local councils to solve their problem of unemployment. Their families wanted food and they were willing to work, and if no one else could not give them employment it was up to the council as leaders of the community to provide them, with the means of succouring their families? Such was the feeling of the workers as demonstrated in mass meetings and in delegations to the city halls. In the year 1917 the responsibility of the local councils in the matter of local employment was surely made very personal to more than one mayor., and yet certain people in 1916, who ought to have known better, wanted to know what reason the Canadian Municipal Journal, as the organ of the local councils, had in urging "preparedness" for after the war. We had every reason otherwise we would not have been worthy of the trust of our readers, most of whom are responsible to the people for their office. The lesson of 1915 was plain to the councils —to prepare to meet the industrial reaction that would take place in almost every community immediately hostilities ceased, in any way compatable with their duties as leaders of the people. This we preached at the time, and have been preaching ever since, and we belive with some success as indicated in the Reconstruction societies that have recently been launched in many industrial centres in Canada.

But if this war will have taught us anything, surely it will have brought home to us the realization that we no longer live for ourselves alone — that to love "thy neighbour as thyself" has a real significance even in this 20th century. That while we are not suffering the horrors of those European cities devastated by the Hun—horrors that brought out the best as well as the worst in human nature, as instanced in the many records of the mayors and leading citizens of Belgium offering their lives so that their fellow men, women and children may be spared—the lessons of self-denial and unselfishness will not be lost to us even in this far away country. They loved their cities unto death — noble examples of civic leadership. Those European mayors were fathers of their people in the truest sense of the term, and while the mayors and councils of Canada will never be called upon thanks to our splendid men at the front, to undergo such terrible tests of civic patriotism, yet in helping to make this Canada a place worthy of living in—not merely existing—for this and future generations, they have the largest opportunity. Cleanly living conditions, a decent social life without unhealthy excitement; better and more practical and free education for the masses; libraries; good recreation facilities for young and old; flower gardens in the public squares, are but a few activities for which the councils should make themselves responsible in their respective communities. The local administration should and must make itself the fountain of everything that spells material and social progress to the community if it would live up to its opportunity.

There is much that could be done in Peterborough along the lines suggested by the Municipal Journal. Providing "good recreation facilities for young and old" is one duty that is pointed out by the Journal, and this feature of civic life has been almost altogether neglected by the Council. To the generosity of a benevolent citizen we owe the majority of our beautiful parks, to the manner in which her bequests have been carried out may be ascribed the credit for nearly all our recreation facilities. Inverlea Park, the mecca for hundreds of bathers in the summer months, is one of these for which the City Council has done nothing. Thanks to the public spiritedness of the Nicholls Park Board, a bathing house has been provided and a caretaker appointed, and as a well known citizen pointed out the other day, the City of Peterborough might well invest a few hundred dollars in improving the conditions here. It was promised that the unsightly stumps in the river between the break-water and th park would be removed, but they are still there in all their ugliness. The Council should lose no time in having them taken out, and at the same time, something might be done to improve the condition of the river bottom, which at present is far from comfortable for those who are learning to swim.

Work of this kind, the Municipal Journal rightly points out, is the duty of municipalities. The article quoted above is timely and sensible.

WILL HAVE A "CIRCUS."

Canada's Premier Airman Will Seek New Honors.

Major W. A. Bishop, V.C., with his remarkable circus, is shortly to emerge into the limelight with a picked team of pilots, including two Toronto men, two New Zealanders, and two Africans. Britain is on the eve of big things in aerial fighting, and is likely to produce sensations in more than one field of operation. Obviously nothing is allowed to transpire that will in any way prejudice their position, but those in the inner circles express amazement at the comprehensive character of the organization ready to spring upon the enemy where least expected. Many Canadians are already enrolled, and more are seeking posts.

Major Bishop is at present in charge of a squadron at Hounslow Heath, at London, England.

A new sensational invention adopted by the British authorities comes from a youthful Canadian officer from Lambton, Ont., who recently performed important work with the Italian air force in Italy.

Details showing the extent of the new aerial developments are not divulged, but the net is spread wide to corral Hun craft. The first fruits are already seen in the daily isolated announcements, which, however, give little idea of the immense scope of British plans. Neutral newspapers indicate a growing panicky feeling among the Germans, who realize the true meaning of the recent heavy losses by these important weapons.

Canadian flying men are much interested in Premier Borden's announcement respecting the possible formation of a purely Canadian air force, with its own administration. This development is known to have warm support with high Canadian military authorities. Many airmen themselves claim that, although the Canadians form so considerable a proportion of the aerial arm, few administrative posts are given them. When men fall below the exacting standards, essential to airmen, they are switched into infantry battalions and no opportunity arises to qualify for the suitable posts which the purely Canadian organization would open up for them.

Queered Himself.

The detective had just congratulated the housewife for bringing about the arrest of a noted sneak thief. "Oh, I knew he was a crook the minute he opened his mouth;" she replied smilingly.

"How did you spot him so quickly?"

"Why, he told me the gas company had sent him to examine our meter and see if we were not entitled to a rebate."—Argonaut.

PETERBOROUGH MAN IS MAKING GOOD

City Engineer Pearce, of Newport, Virginia, has been very highly commended by the Newport News for his excellent work in that place. The following reference is made to his work:

"City Engineer Pearce is an expert in his line, and is one of the hardest worked men in town. He labours under many difficulties, but he never loses his head or his temper. His work his increased enormously in the last year or so, but he has never relaxed. The harder his task the more energy he throws into it. The city is fortunate to have such a man at such a time, and if he should resign, it would be difficult to fill his place at double the pay he receives. His long service and his intimate acquaintance with the work of his office render him almost indispensable, and we do not know how the city would get along without him."

Mr. Pearce is a son of Mr. Edgcumbe Pearce, who for 32 years was County Treasurer and County Clerk of the County of Peterborough. He has a sister in the city, Mrs. A. E. Sherwood. He was educated in the public schools and Collegiate Institute of Peterborough, and worked for the G.T.R. on the Midland Division. For the last 19 years he has been City Engineer of Newport, Virginia.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

FRED DENISON ENGAGED IN AIR FIGHT

Peterboro Boy Wounded When Strafing German Trenches.

Particulars of how Lieut. Fred Denison of the Royal Air Force, the former Peterborough hockey star, was recently wounded in an air fight in France, are told in a letter received by a local friend. Lieut. Denison writes:

Am in an American base hospital, wounded as a result of having stopped two Hun machine gun bullets, in an air fight, one in the left forearm and one in the back. Both are slight flesh wounds and am up and around.

The last letter I wrote you was about half an hour previous to being hit. If I remember rightly I was writing to you about it being raining and that I would not be flying, but had just finished your note when we received orders to go up and do some strafing, firing into the Hun trenches from a low altitude. We did this, and about ten miles over Hun land my gun went wrong and at this moment ten bold, bad Germans drove on us and we beat it home on the double. By all the laws of percentage we both should have been killed because there were hundreds of bullet holes all around me on the machine, but we strugled home somehow, and although practically all the controls were shot away we did not even crash in landing.

They use you fine at this place. Lots of wounded American officers here, and it is bridge from morning until night.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

A SIGN.

(Exchange.)

He is a very loyal guy,
Said wise old Mr. Bowsers;
I know he's patriotic by
The patches on his trousers.

A TERRIBLE EXAMPLE.

(Philadelphia Record.)

If anybody wants to know what a German peace is let him look at Russia. If anybody would know whether Germany can be bound by any agreement or compact or oath, let him look at Russia. If one wishes to know whether the German foreign policy is directed by the foreign office or by the general staff, let him look at Russia.

SACRIFICES.

(Bystander.)

Roberta writes that as a war sacrifice, she is willing to give up those corrugated paper cups on her bonbons.

And we, Roberta, not to be outdone in abnegation, will do without the paper bands on our cigars.

A COMBATIVE STAFF.

(Detroit News.)

American soldiers near Montdidier are issuing a weekly newspaper from the trenches. We feel sorry for anybody who drops in to lick the editor.

SOCIALISM IN PRACTICE.

(Buffalo Express.)

The tendency of Socialism to make itself the party of the unambitious man has long been marked. It is one of the reasons why Socialism never can succeed in this country, for America is no lazy man's land. Nor can it succeed in any other land for that matter. Russia is affording an object lesson. The factory workmen there reduced the hours of labour to four in many cases and fixed their own wages through committees, as well as all other conditions of employment. Eventually they took over the factories. To-day most of these work people are idle and starving.

EXHAUSTED THE LANGUAGE.

(Norton, Kansas, Telegram.)

There are over two hundred and fifty thousand words in the English language, and most of them were used last Sunday by a lady who discovered after coming out of the church that her new hat was adorned with a tag on which was written "Reduced to $2.75."

MORALLY BANKRUPT.

(Providence Journal.)

"Character is destiny," the old Greek proverb says Germany's moral deficiencies will prove her final undoing. There is nothing she can say, no pledge to which she can put her signature, that will satisfy the honourable nations of the world. They are compelled to fight on against her until she is no longer capale through other broken promises of menacing the peace and the freedom of the world.

FORCE THE ONLY REMEDY.

(Toronto Wold.)

We believe that the German people, no more than the canibals, can be taught what is right and decent, except by methods of force. If they were willing to listen to fine principles and spiritual precepts, possibly something could be done with them. But they are not willing to listen. Samuel and Elijah and other Old Testament worthies would have exterminated them, and praised the Lord for the opportunity. We are still in the mood of treating these sharks and tigers like Christian gentlemen. It is a policy that suits the shark and tiger perfectly.

ECONOMY BECOMES LAW.

Citizens Who Are Not Thrifty Will Be Punished.

Enforcement of the Canada Food Board's regulations as to food conservation has been placed in the hands of the police machinery of the municipalities and of the different provinces throughout the Dominion.

It is the duty of the provinces to enforce Federal laws and the orders of the Canada Food Board have the effect of Federal law, being passed upon authority of orders issued by the Privy Council and published in the Canada Gazette. It, therefore, becomes the duty of police officers throughout the Dominion to acquaint themselves with these regulations regarding our food supply and to see to it that they are obeyed. At this stage of the world's food situation, when 4,750,000 people in Europe have starved to death as compared to 4,250,000 soldiers who have died as the result of battle, it is beyond cavil or dispute that these food regulations are absolutely necessary. Indeed, many people in communication with friends in England or in France think our Canadian regulations mild in view of what people on the other side are undergoing. Patriotism as well as duty should inspire submission to these restrictions by the public and vigilant enforcement of them by the officers of the law.

In cases of convictions secured by the municipal police officers, it should be noted that where these convictions result in the imposition of fines, the money from these fines is to be paid to the municipal treasuries, and similarly in the cases where provincial officers secure convictions. The Canada Food Board has circularized these orders in official form throughout the police machinery of the various provinces, beginning with the Attorneys-General and continuing through the lists of Crown Attorneys and Crown Prosecutors. In some provinces the chief constables have also received copies of the various orders affecting the public. As a result, throughout Canada of recent weeks, there has been a crop of convictions. In all cases the magistrates have stood firmly behind the regulations and imposed the penalties as provided. These run from $100 to $1,000, in fines or imprisonment up to three months or both. Restaurant keepers, who have served meat on prohibited days and hours, served sugar on the tables or wasted food, have been brought to task and the widespread publicity this has entailed will do a great deal more to assure conservation of food in public eating places than anything else.

The anti-loafing law, also bearing upon our war-time food production, has likewise been enforced. Magistrates have seized the opportunity of dealing with loafers, tramps and "sports" by putting them to work on the farms. "Non-essential" industries have been interpreted by some magistrates into more or less definite groups and men who had no better excuse than employment in said questionable industries have been ordered to get into more useful occupations. In Winnipeg a great change has been observed in the streets since this law went into effect. The idlers and loafers have disappeared.

12,000 Houses for London Port.

The housing question in relation to the extension of the dock system of the port of London has been enquired into by a special committee appointed by the Garden Cities and Town Planning Association. In their report the committee recommended the building of twelve thousand houses in the immediate future to meet the most pressing needs.

Music & Drama

TORONTO HAS THEM TOO.

Hector Charlesworth, the music and drama reviewer in "Saturday Night," must have been deeply peeved during the recital given in Toronto recently by Carolina Lazzari, the American contralto. In last Saturday's issue he mollified a lingering irritation with the following barbed allusion, the subject of which recalls somewhat similar annoyances in a more limited experience, annoyances that have faded and almost disappeared. The accompanist was Stuart Ross, a pianist of skill and taste, who also played an interesting solo group. Unfortunately appreciation was rendered difficult by the conversation of two ladies who had been experiencing the horrors of war in an exhausting effort to match certain fabrics, and had been baffled, not merely by the prices, but by the inferiority of certain dyes. The ladies had obviously made up their minds that Sherman was right. During another group of numbers by a promising young pianist, Marjory Martin ,a pleasanter phase of the war intervened; for a soldier nearby was carrying on a very audible flirtation with a pretty girl. Obviously, many members of the audience regarded piano solos as unobjectionable so long as they did not interfere with conversation.

Minstreling By Motor.

Gus Hill is the first producing manager to arrange to operate a theatrical company on tour next season without using the railroads and also without employing men.

Mr. Hill will send his "Lady Bountiful" minstrels, composed entirely of women, on tour with a feminine advance agent and a feminine acting manager and with a stage carpenter, electrician and property master also of the gentler sex.

This company is to be composed of fifty girls, who will give a complete minstrel performance, including first part and olio in white face, except the end women and possibly the interlocutor, who are to "black up." It will move from city to city in six large motor trucks equipped with trailers. If the innovation proves a success the tour will be extended to the Pacific coast.

EXEMPTIONS DISALLOWED AND EXTENDED BY REVIEW JUDGE

Farmers Given Until After the Harvest—Some Were Informed That No Further Consideration Can Be Given to Their Claims.

DEPARTMENT IN CLOSE TOUCH

At this morning's sittings of the exemptions review tribunal, Judge Huycke intimated that the military authorities are practically demanding that some of the men who had been exempted should now be ordered into the army.

Wilbert Pringle, a teamster and shipper for the Peterboro Cereal Co., stated that he had provided and cared for his mother and invalid sister for sixteen years, since he started to work, when he was thirteen. His mother had made appeal for an extension of his exemption, which terminates now.

His mother, he said, hoped that he might be put in the second class, since he had virtually the responsibilities of a married man.

He has one married brother, aged 26.

"Couldn't he look after your mother and invalid sister?" Mr. Hatton asked.

"It isn't fair that you two boys should get off when so many other boys are going," Judge Huycke remarked.

Pringle remarked that his brother should take care of his mother.

His Honour pointed out that the evidence respecting the health of his dependents was more than six months old.

Decision was withheld for further information.

Mr. J. W. Meyers appeared later with convincing testimony of the strength of Pringle's appeal, but Judge Huycke suggested that the married brother should assume the care of the mother. Pringle will report back as to the likelihood of an arrangement by which either he or his brother will be available for the army.

DECISION RESERVED.

Clement Lowe got exemption last fall as an expert workman with the Henry Hope Co. The company had special work for the Manitoba Parliament Buildings, but the "job' is not yet ready Lowe has been working as bench foreman in the assembly department in the making of shells. He has two brothers in France.

"If you had remained in England you would have been taken before this," Mr. Hatton pointed out.

Mr. J. K. Costain supported Lowe's appeal as a representative of the Henry Hope Company.

"You have had a year to train some one to replace him," Judge Huycke said. "You put in claims that were not well founded; that is why I hesitate now. Compare your firm with the C. G. E., Quaker Oats, and other factories; they have not applied as you have done.

Mr. Costain stated Mr. Lowe was a loyal and tireless worker, and the company had no one to take his place.

"You've had practically a year to train some one for him," said the Judge. "I'm worried to death with these cases"

"I wouldn't let them worry me," Mr. Hatton commented "I haven't seen a factory shut down because of one man's going."

Judge Huycke said he liked the appearance of Lowe, and had no doubt that he was a good workman.

"The labor situation at the front is worse than it is here," His Honour remarked to Mr Costain, and stated that the appeal would be considered.

EXEMPTED UNTIL OCTOBER.

W. J. Dickson, 31 years old, works as a hired farm hand for Mrs. Sarah Wood, at Villiers, Otonabee. There are 150 acres in the farm.

"I have only one son of 14 years," Mrs Wood said "My husband is dead seven years."

"You deserve credit for running the farm all that time," the Judge said.

Dickson does all the work and has been working for Mrs. Wood for four years.

"If you cannot exempt him please let him off until after harvest," Mrs. Wood requested.

Exempted until October 1st. Judge Huycke advised Mrs. Wood to get another man in the meantime, if possible.

"I hope you will have a good crop," His Honour remarked as he sent the widow and her hired man away smiling.

ONE BROTHER HAS GONE.

John M. Hope, 25 years, of Otonabee, said that his brother was now in Kingston.

"We have a heavy harvest to take off," said his father.

"There's a big harvest of Germans to be taken," replied the Judge.

"I thought it was kind of hard taking James, the other boy, judging by the neighbors."

"Some of the neighbors are coming here and we will see to them."

The father said that he had tried to get the other boy, James, off, at Kingston, but Colonel Smart refused him.

Allowed until October 1st, and if James remains in the army the time will be further extended. In this case the Judge had previously ordered that at least one of the two boys had to go.

John H. Darling was given a further exemption until October 1st. He is a farm hand working for Richard Tedford of Dummer.

"Now; I hope you will not come before me aagin," said the Judge, "You impress me as a very decent boy, and I don't want to see them take you by the scruff of the neck, and thrown into the army."

This satisfied Darling, but he asked "What if things change?"

"If Mr. Tedford breaks his other leg, of course we will have to consider it. You will have time to take in the harvest and get the fall ploughing well advanced," the Judge replied.

Walter Crowley is one of three brothers who together work three farms of one hundred acres each. He and his brother Fergus work one farm which they rented in the fall of 1916.

"I have no doubt that you are producing a lot of stuff," said the Judge, "but the Department thinks that one of you boys should go."

"Fergus is in C 3 Category," Crowley said, "and is not very strong."

"I'll give you until November 1st, and if the war doesn't look better you will have to go."

Mr Hatton said that only two of the boys were A men, and they should decide between them which should go

Crowley was full of the idea that production was extremely important, but the Judge reminded him that it was of secondary importance to the obtaining of men for the army, and the winning of the war.

Harry Williamson of Norwood, was exempted until November 1st, for farm work at home.

James Trotter, a B man, was given until Oct. 1st to handle his crops on a farm near Indian River which he rented from J. T. O'Connell.

Frank Lynch, grocer, applied for an extension of his exemption until September 1st, for business reasons. Decision reserved.

Herbert Peoples, in B Category, made no plea for exemption. His brother has been in France for nearly three years.

"They are not calling B men just now," said the Judge, "but I am glad you will be ready when wanted."

Wilfred Tully was granted further extension on domestic grounds.

Several other appeals were heard, but have not been definitely disposed of.

TWO SOLDIERS HOME ON FURLOUGH WERE HELD UP IN DOURO

A somewhat mysterious story has reached the county authorities from Douro township. Two soldiers home on leave are reported to have been held up by three masked and armed men who scutinized them for a moment, and then disappeared stating that they were looking for some one else. The soldiers were accompanied by two girls, and it is understood were on their way to Young's Point. Around this minor detail there is some doubt, for accounts of the alleged holdup differ as to whether the soldiers were returning from or going to Kingston. They had mistaken the fifth line for another road and were coming back on it, "the blind line" it is called when they came upon a rail across the road. Immediately, it is said, the three masked men stepped out of the dark and retired in a moment with the statement that they were expecting some other man. One of the girls was greatly frightened by the experience, according to the story which has reached Judge Huycke, Crown Attorney Hatton and also Magistrate Langley and High County Constable Moore.

The incident may have been a bit of a bluff or buffoonery, but the stories reaching the authorities admit of a meaning beyond the staging of a hoax.

BOY OF 17 IS GOVERNMENT CONTRACTOR; EMPLOYS 17

LONDON, June 19.—A boy of seventeen, who is a government contractor with eleven men and six women on his payroll, is one of the unusual figures of the war.

The youngster is Robert Scott, and two years ago he was earning $7.50 a week in a machine shop. Later he and another boy formed a partnership to manufacture nuts and screws. The partner joined the army last year. Scott then invested all his savings in machinery and opened a shop for the manufacture of airplane parts and soon obtained government work.

Y.M.C.A. WILL START A $112,000,000 FUND DRIVE IN AUTUMN

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Announcement that a campaign for a $112,000,000 fund for the Y.M.C.A. war work will begin immediately after the fourth Liberty loan was made to-day by John R. Mott, international secretary, after a call on President Wilson.

Mr. Mott has just finished a trip to twenty-eight States in the interest of the drive.

IGH DEGREE OF CONFIDENCE AT THE ALLIED HEADQUARTERS

les Have Little Difficulty in Gaining Local Objectives—Shaking the Enemy Line.

THE AMERICANS

J. W. T. Mason—United Press War Expert).

EW YORK, July 9.—The conation by General Foch of his icy of local assaults along the stern front indicates a high dee of confidence at the Allied headrters in the outcome of any new nsives which Von Hindenburg inflict upon the German armies. spirit of eagerness which the ed soldiers are showing is unbtedly a tribute to the inspiring sence of America's first million ps in France. The persistence he assaults by the Allies, and the uriable success in gaining local ctives, are a splendid prepara for defence against a new Ger drive. The fact that Von Hinburg may be training his best ps behind the lines for their work a forthcoming offensive cannot e as a satisfactory excuse by Germans for the unsteadiness of r units now holding the battle t positions. Von Hindenburg can have drawn more than a quarter million men for intensive train as the shock comes from the re divisions. If a replacement of 250,000 men can cause the Gerline to become shaken as General Foch is now shaking it, the outlook is very disquieting for Von Hindenburg's future plans.

The Australians.

The highest honours in the most recent series of Allied attacks must go to the Australians. They have shown remarkable dash and fervor in attack along the most strongly held sector of the German front. The Australian veterans have made the best instructors for America's own troops. No other units in the Allied armies have a deeper instinctive understanding of the fighting mentality of the Americans. The same longing for constant activity and the same desire to develop individual initiative that characterizes the Americans are also the outstanding traits of the Australians. It has been highly advantageous for American leadership to have been associated with the Australian fighters, who are trained in the style of relentless fighting that Americans like best.

Entertainment For The Summer Fair

Splendid Program Under the Direction of Mrs. A. A. Perrin.

Among the features at the Summer Fair will be the entertaining of the hosts of people who will attend. For this purpose an auditorium and stage has been erected, which will serve the purpose excellently. It is here the Living Pictures (eight or ten of them) will be shown. The suit of armour to be worn by Joan of Arc was kindly loaned by Mr. Geo. Clark and is over 200 years old.

At four o'clock in the afternoon, Misses Edith Price and Esmie Aylmer will dance the Rose Ring dance that was so prettily given in Cinderella.

At five o'clock Miss Meta Middlebrook of Toronto, will give two very fine Scottish dances, to be accompanied on the pipes by Mr. Yeaman. This young lady has performed at Massey Hall, and at entertainments at Sir John Eaton's and Sir Henry Pellatt's lawns in Toronto.

At eight o'clock Miss Caroline Littlefield, city, will delight the audience in fancy dances, which she is so capable of performing.

The above are just a few items of a very fine programme, to which the public is cordially invited to attend.

THREE NAMES WERE OMITTED

In Friday's issue of The Examiner, containing the Public School promotions, the names of three pupils of King George School were omitted.

The following pupils passed from Jr. II. to Sr. II. King George School: Donald Fowler, Alfred Weston, Arthur Knott.

HEATING RESTRICTION IN UNITED STATES

Houses Must be Kept at a Maximum of Only 68 Degrees.

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 9.—The announcements of the United States domestic fuel regulations have been received here with some interest, particularly the order requiring that houses shall be kept at a maximum of only 68 degrees. Canada has no such regulation, and even if she had, it is stated officially that it could only be advisory and not strictly enforced. The order is looked upon as being simply in the nature of advice to householders not to overheat their houses, but the penalty for failure to hold to the advice is recognized to be ridiculous, especially in a country with such a rigorous winter as that of Canada. The curtailment of the householders' fuel supply, it is believed, will lead to the saving desired.

He has been on duty at Seaford for some time.

THE SUMMER FAIR TOMORROW AT ENGLEBURN

If the Weather is Good it Will Be the Success of the Season.

The Ashburnham Patriotic Society is not a bit disturbed about the weather today, believing that tomorrow will break fine and clear a typical day for the Summer Fair which is to be held on the grounds of His Honour Judge Huycke "Engleburn" East City. If such is the case, there is not the least doubt, but that the event will be a wonderful drawing card.

The committee is composed of a large number of the most energetic women in Patriotic work in the city, of all creeds, Allied nationalities, and stations in life, the only combination to get effective service and satisfactory results.

A very ambitious program has been purposed for both afternoon and evening, amusements of all kinds. The Band in the evening and a supper for 25c prepared according to the Food Board orders, that will be an eye opener for all who take advantage of it.

Don't miss the Summer Fair at Engleburn tomorrow afternoon and evening.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

Help to harvest some of the wild fruits that grow so abundantly in different parts of Canada. There are certain districts in British Columbia, New Ontario and the Maritime Provinces where stretches of land are almost literally carpeted with blueberries. Then there are wild raspberries, strawberries, blackberries and Saskatoon berries, but the blueberries come first and foremost in the list.

If you happen to live near a spot where wild berries abound take the kiddies with you and go out and pick those berries for all you are worth. The flavour of wild fruit when canned is unexcelled.

In some parts of the country it would be quite practical for girls to organize wild berry-picking camps. In Nova Scotia the blueberry industry is so flourishing that some years the total exports run as high as 25,000 crates. The Indians of the Georgian Bay and Muskoka regions do a large blueberry business, and the Mission Indians of Fort William have a raspberry picking camp on the mountain every summer. Families holidaying at the various summer resorts might well help in the same way.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR OWN REFRIGERATOR

With the Government wanting all the ammonia for making ammunition and a strict limit placed upon the manufacture of artificial ice, New York becomes interested at once in refrigeration and cooling processes that do not come into contact with America's war activities. Cost of ice is a large factor for most people, but more serious still is the prospective inability to get ice at any price. The Department of Agriculture has had its scientists at work on iceless refrigerators for country people who have no ice supply, and they have produced a device that far excels the oldtime home-made evaporation coolers, that generally were crude and insufficient. While the department's cooler is supposed to be home-made and to be used in a roomy farm house, the city dweller who has a detached house or even a moderately roomy flat could find ample room to install it. If one has not the time nor the facility with tools to build the affair himself, any basement jobbing carpenter could turn one out in half a day or less. Here is what the department says about it.

Where ice is not obtainable an iceless refrigerator will be a useful food keeper and food saver this Summer. Maintaining a low temperature through the evaporation of water from its canvas cover, the iceless refrigerator will keep meats, fruits and vegetables cool, and will extend the period for keeping milk and butter. It can also serve as a cooler for drinking water.

A wooden frame is made with dimensions 42 by 16 by 14 inches and covered with screen wire, perferably the rustless type, which costs little more than the ordinary kind. The door is made to fit closely, and is mounted on brass hinges, and can be fastened with a wooden latch. The bottom is fitted solid, but the top should be covered with screen wire. Adjustable shelves can be made of solid wood or strips, or sheets of galvanized metal. Shelves made of poultry netting on light wooden frames are probably the most desirable. These shelves rest on side braces placed at desired intervals. A bread baking pan, 14 by 16 inches, is placed on the top and the frame rests in a 17 by 18 inch pan.

All the woodwork, the shelves and the pans should receive two coats of white paint and one or two coats of white enamel. This makes a very attractive surface and one that can be easily kept clean. The screen wire also may receive the coat of enamel, which will prevent it from rusting.

A cover of canton flannel, burlap, or duck is made to fit the frame. Put the smooth side out if canton flannel is used. It will require about three yards of material. This cover is buttoned around the top on which the door is not hinged, using buggy hooks and eyes or large headed tacks and eyelets worked in the material. On the front side arrange the hooks on the top of the door insetad of on the frame and also instead of on the frame and also side of the door, allowing a wide hem of the material to overlap the place where the door closes. The door can then be opened without unbuttoning the cover. The bottom of the cover should extend down into the lower pan. Four double strips, which taper to eight or ten inches in width, are sewed to the upper part of the cover. These strips form wicks that dip over into the upper pan.

The dimensions given make a refrigerator of very convenient size for household use, and one with efficient evaporating surface, but it is not necessary to follow strictly these dimensions. If a larger capacity is desired, the height of the refrigerator can be increased.

In homes where large quantities of mil kand butter are to be kept it would be well to have one refrigerator for milk and butter and another for other kinds, as milk and butter readily absorb odors from other foods. It costs very little to build the refrigerator and nothing to operate it. The operation is as simple as the construction. The upper pan should be kept filled with water. The water is drawn by capillary attraction through the wicks and saturates the cover. As evaporation takes place, heat is taken from the inside of the refrigerator, thereby lowering the temperature at the inside and the contents. Capillary action starts more readily if the cover is first dampered by dipping it in water or throwing water upon it. The greater the rate of evaporation the lower the temperature which can be secured; therefore the refrigerator works best when rapid evaporation takes place.

In apartments where electric current is available, a fan turned upon the refrigerator will greatly aid evaporation the lower the temperature placed in a strong breeze and the air is warm and dry, evaporation takes place continuously and rapidly and the temperature inside the refrigerator is reduced. Under ideal conditions the temperature has been known to be reduced to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. When it is damp and the air is full of moisture, the refrigerator will not work as well, since there is not enough evaporation. More water will find its way to the lower pan, but it will be drawn upto into the covering by capillary attraction when the air again becomes drier.

The refrigerator should be regularly cleaned and sunned. If the framework, shelves and pans are white enameled, they can be more easily kept in a sanitary condition. It is well to have two covers, so that a fresh one can be used each week and the soiled one washed and sunned.—New York Times.

"RAFFLES" WILL VISIT PETERBORO

Well Known Peterboro Boy Will Appear at the Grand This Week

Peter Thompson, a Peterboro boy, better known theatrically as "Raffles," is home on a visit, and will appear at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next, with his big sensational act.

"Raffles" was a newsboy in Peterboro, but is now one of the biggest and best known acts in vaudeville. He has been donating his services for the past six months to the United States Government Committee for the Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps, proving one of the biggest attractions they have had in raising many thousands of dollars for the boys "over there."

Hanging by his toes from a rope suspended in front of the Grand, 75 feet in the air, next Thursday evening at 7.30, "Raffles" will made his sensational escape from a straightjacket; a feat he has been performing in many of the large American cities in his War Stamp and Liberty Bond sale.

RUSH FOR SUGAR CARDS.

FOOD BOARD IS COMPELLED TO INCREASE ITS CLERICAL STAFF.

New York, July 8. — More than 10,000 applications for sugar certificates have been filed with the Federal Food Board here since July 1st, and the quantity of sugar distributed through these certificates is close to 14,000,000 pounds. There were 2,500 applicants yesterday, all of whom received certificates. The mail brought in 15,000 applications from other parts of the state and a new force of clerks was put on to handle this part of the work.

Huns Denounced as Nation of Atheists, By Boston Pastor

New York, July 8. — For the last one hundred years, Germany has been destroying the Bible; for the last fifty years she has been building up a nation of athiests and agnostics; and for the last forty years she has been faithless to the guide which Martin Luther had given his country in the open Bible, declared the Rev. Courtlandt Myers, pastor of Tremont Baptist Temple, Boston, in a sermon at the First Baptist church, Broadway and Seventy-ninth street.

Dr. Myers said that there was authority for the statement that not more than two per cent. of the population of Berlin ever enters a church; that in districts where there is a population of fifty thousand there is not a single church building, and that the people of Hamburg are less religious than in Berlin.

"The whole State is permeated by a new philosophy of life which is false and hollow, and which has made it possible for Germany to do the things she has done," stated Dr. Myers. "It is based solely on the survival of the fittest, and that might makes right.

"The Kaiser never uses the name of Christ. His God is the same as the God of Mohammed. He has ever ignored the Saviour, while calling his a Christian nation. There is no authority above the Kaiser whose dictum rules the religious as well as the civil life of his people.

"Germany has for one hundred years been destroying the Bible. Her destructive criticism has crept into American colleges, schools, and even pews, I am sorry to say. It is destructive of everything held sacred by real Christians. Some call it theology; I call it blasphemy."

Presentation to Miss Vernia Galvin

Ennismore Teacher Honored by Her Pupils.

On June the 28th, the pupils of S. S. No. 4 presented Miss Vernia Galvin with a beautiful cameo ring and read the following address:

Dear Miss Vernia Galvin,— We, your pupils of S. S. No. 4, Ennismore, are assembled here to-day to witness one of the few events that saddens the sunny path of a school child's life, to perform one of the sad duties which our love, gratitude and respect for you compels us to perform, to bid you farewell before your withdrawal from our school.

For two short years you have been with us, during which time we have learned to admire your sterling qualities as a teacher; to imitate your kindness and gentleness as a lady and to love and obey you as a true and constant friend.

In the expression of our thanks and gratitude to you dear teacher, for your zealous and unselfish devotion to our interests, even in the face of difficulties, we cannot find words to convey to you our sentiments of gratefulness on this occasion.

We hope that though this day marks the closing of our happy and kindly association, together, that the friendship that has grown up between us; that the cherished memories of the good old days spent together, shall withstand the withering hand of time and last on when we have gone forth from school.

We ask you then, dear teacher, to accept this little token as a slight appreciation of your all too short stay among us, and with it we extend to you our best wishes for success in whatever other walk of life you wish to pursue; but we will ask you to remember that we have not, nor we will not say good-bye, but in the sweet language of old France, we bid you "au revoir."

Signed on behalf of the pupils of S. S. No. 4.

AGNES KILLEN,
ANNA COLLARD.

FOOD RESTRICTIONS FOR AUSTRIA-HUNGARY

Meat Rations Will Be Reduced and Food Supplies Seized.

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, July 9.—All Germany and Austria-Hungary now will be subjected to food seizure, rationing and prohibition of free trading, Food Controller Von Waldow announced in the German Reichstag, it was learned to-day. It will be some time before a large consignment of corn arrives from the Ukraine. The meat rations are all to be reduced. As soon as bread and potato rations are restored, meatless weeks will be introduced.

Replying to Von Waldow, Herr Wels, a Socialist, said that a further deteriorating of the food supply will be unbearable, the wages of workers will not buy adequate food even now, and unemployment is increasing. If the situation continues, the strikes of January will be repeated.

The Tageblatt announces that, beginning August 1, there will be one more meatless week.

Structure 2,200 Yards Long Between Europe and Asia.

AMSTERDAM—The plan to connect Europe with Asia by bridging the Bosporus has assumed a more tangible shape, according to the Osmanische Lloyd.

SOLDIERS SHOWED SPLENDID DISCIPLINE ON STRANDED VESSEL

Canadian Press:

CANADIAN ATLANTIC PORT, July 9.—Lt.-Col. Eduard Leprechon, officer commanding troops on board the stranded City of Vienna, in a statement given out here says that many of the men lost their kits, great coats and in some cases all they had, in the hasty disembarkation from the ship. He states that discipline among all ranks was splendid. There was absolutely no confusion and the men sang cheerily at their posts during a period of intense strain and anxiety. John Perrington, ship's master, said it was entirely due to the excellent discipline that the men were transferred without casualties of any kind.

BARN RAISING IN OTONABEE YESTERDAY

An old time barn-raising on the Otonabee farm owned by Mr. Gilbert Thompson, Aylmer street, was completed last night about 8 o'clock. About eighty farmers helped in the work, which was entirely successful. The barn is a spacious structure 100 feet by 40 feet. Mr. George Sloan, of Peterborough, is the contractor in charge, and Mr. Nelson, of Otonabee, assisted in the direction of yesterday's raising. Among the men present was Col. T. Johnston. Part of the farm was cleared of hardwood last winter, which Mr. Thompson sold in the city. It is a fine property on which the huge barn is well placed.

CROP PROSPECTS ARE VERY GOOD SAYS MR. R. A. DEYELL

The Root Crop Never Looked Better and Hay is Fairly Good.

Mr. R. A. Deyell, who resides near the Bensfort Bridge on the Otonabee side, states that the crops are very promising in that locality. The fall wheat is good, although some of it had to be ploughed up. The barley crop is fairly good. In some cases the presence of smut is reported in the barley crop. "The hay crop and clover is good," said Mr. Deyell. "The root crop never looked better," he added. Corn might be better, but is not suffering to any great extent. On the whole conditions are fairly good in that part of the country, and the crop prospects are very promising.

GEORGIA SOLDIERS GET FURLOUGHS TO SAVE PEACH CROP.

ATLANTA, Ga. — The Georgia Food Administration, in its efforts to save to the growers and shippers of the State the immense peach crop now in transit and that yet to be moved, has appealed to officials at Camp Gordon to furlough soldiers in sufficient numbers to re-ice the hundreds of cars that will be stopped in Atlanta for this purpose, and, quick to see the necessity of this request, the military officials called for volunteers among the negro increments recently arriving at camp.

Eighty offered their services and were transported in army trucks from Camp Gordon and distributed among the three re-icing plants in the Atlanta railroad yards, where they immediately began the task of saving a situation which was fast becoming critical.

THE WEATHER

While showers have been frequent and the rainfall copious in this section, these conditions are largely local. The rainfall in the section between Toronto and Ottawa has generally not been up to the average, while in Peterboro and Haliburton counties it has been about double the usual amount.—W. P.

CONCERN MAY QUIT.

New York, July 8. — The spread of the prohibition movement has induced the stockholders of the American Malting Company to suggest that the corporation be thrown into liquidation.

The American Malting Company has a capital stock of $15,000,000, of which $6,000,000 is common and $9,000,000 preferred. Its capital originally was $30,000,000, but that was cut in half in 1915.

DISSOLVE WAR TRADE BOARD

Rumours of Such Intention In Circulation at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, July 9.—Under the caption "War Trade Board Too Protective to Suit Many People in Western Canada," the Ottawa Citizen says: "Without any official comment one way or the other, there is much rumour in the air at Ottawa concerning the War Trade Board, and the possibility of its dissolution is talked of. The board was created last winter to investigate the problem of imports and exports, having regard particularly to war economies and to overcoming the adversity in trade balance with the United States.

"Some time ago it made a number of recommendations to the Government as to what lines should be banned, and after long consideration the clamp was put on with regard to at least a part of the list. Subsequently it was partially lifted."

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Miss Gertrude Pratt, Wolseley St., Barrie, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached so that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I feel well and strong again."

BRITONS OPEN HEARTS AND HOMES TO "BUDDIES."

Extend Hand of Welcome and Friendship to U. S. Soldiers.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Reginald Lloyd, who has been among the voluntary unpaid workers in connection with the Air Raid Service engaged in the defence of London, arrived in New York on Thursday and is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria.

"The characteristic insularity of the Englishman has broken down entirely, now that he realizes in full the magnificent work the Americans are doing on the battle front, in food supply, in munition work and in shipping output," Mr. Lloyd said. "Only a few days before I left Europe I was present at a meeting held in one of the largest and most conservative London clubs, when it was decided unanimously by the members of that institution to miss no opportunity of speaking to an American either in the street, in public conveyances or in any other place, and to extend to him the hand of welcome and friendship; to ask him to their houses and to give him a good time in any and every way possible.

"Every Britisher's heart, young and old, from the King down to the humblest East End dweller, is thrilled with admiration for the American Sammy and the American officer in Europe, and the American home worker, who, on this side of the Atlantic, is so bountifully providing the sinews of warfare."

HOW MUCH SAM DEALS WITH FOOD PROFITEERS

Firm of Flour Dealers Ordered to Pay $5,000 to the Red Cross.

NEW YORK, July 9.— The American Red Cross is $5,000 the richer today, because the firm of Oberman & Scheri, flour dealers, of No. 217 West 125th street, violated the rule regarding wheat substitutes and charged excessive prices.

The Federal Food Board announced that the firm had been allowed to pay that sum to the Red Cross instead of having its license taken away for the period of the war. The cheque has already been sent.

The announcement was made yesterday from the New York offices of the Board, No. 220 West Fifty-seventh street, after the Food Administration officials at Washington had decided on the merits of the case against Oberman & Scheri. The testimony revealed that they had charged excessive prices in twenty-nine out of one hundred and twenty-nine sales and paid little or no attention to the rule requiring the sale of an equal amount of substitutes with every sale of flour.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

The Futurity and Lawrence Realization, Belmont Park's two bik fall stake races, will be much enriched this fall. The Futurity will be worth about $35,000 and the Realization $10,000, making the two-year-old classic one of the biggest prizes to be raced for in turfdom.

One good outfielder, several reliable pitchers and one real catcher are needed before the Toronto team will be able to cope with Binghamton and Rochester. The infield is undoubtedly the best in the league, but it cannot hold up the rest of the team.

Acosta, the Cuban outfielder, last year with Baltimore, is now playing the outfield for Connie Mack's Athletics. He was the property of Washington.

The Argonaut Rowing Club is making an appeal to those members who are not overseas to help carry the club along during the war. The old members especially are being asked to contribute to keep the famous old club fit and ready when the overseas members return.

The New Orleans Club again finished on top in the Southern League, which closed up last week. This is the fifth time New Orleans has taken the pennant. Little Rock was second, while Atlanta finished in last place.

A BIG BICYCLE MEET FOR TORONTO

One of the greatest bicycle racemeets ever held in Toronto, Ontario, is planned for Saturday, August 10, and will be staged under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association and with the sanction of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association. The big card is made up of twelve bicycle and motorcycle races and the events vary from several short sprints to an International pursuit race. Valuable prizes will be given for each race. The meet is to be conducted on the fast half-mile dirt track at the Exhibition grounds. Racing wheelmen of this city may obtain further information from W. M. Gladish, of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association, 73 Richmond St., West, Toronto.

Wrapping Oranges.

The orange-packing plants of the Pacific coast have long employed sizers, weighers, brushes, nail-machines, etc., all of which work automatically, but until recently wrapping was done by hand. A machine has now appeared, however, which automatically cuts and prints the wrapping paper and wraps the orange. Each machine wraps one hundred oranges a minute, without waste of paper or injury to the fruit, and with perfect precision. Mechanical hands pick up the fruit without bruising the skin and place it on conveyer-belts. The wrappers already cut and printed by the machine are automatically fed on to the belt and receive the fruit from the mechanical hands. Then the machine folds the wrappers around the oranges and crimps them over the stem end so tightly that the fruit can be rolled over a rough floor without undoing it.—Family Herald.

How Germans Get News

AN interesting account is given in the London Times of Herr Otto Hammann, who for about twenty years was in charge—more or less—of the Press Bureau of the German Foreign Office and is now retired with the enjoyable title of Excellency, who has published his reminiscences. The book is called "The New Course," which means in effect the post-Bismarckian system. It is a curious production, which contains very little that is actually new, but sheds some light—perhaps other light than the author intends—upon the German political machinery. Herr Hammann took care to be well advertised in his time, and maintained his position largely by a fictitious reputation for deep political cunning. He now presents himself as a pure-minded public servant, who was always shocked by the unreasonable German prejudice against "semi-official" journalism, and whose great desire was to raise the tone and prestige of the press. It was notorious that Herr von Kiderlen-Wachter attempted in vain a few years before the war to get rid of Hammann. Hammann revenges himself by saying that, while he himself desired relations only with honest and reputable journalists, Kiderlen, when he became Foreign Secretary, instructed him that "it is easiest to work with shady creatures." Hammann's chief allies, as he gratefully insists, were the Berlin correspondents of the Cologne Gazette and the Frankfurter Zeitung.

It appears that Hammann was brought into the German Foreign Office by the second Imperial Chancellor Caprivi, in 1894, as a reward for his services in support of the Military Reform Bill of the previous year. Hammann then was corresponding from Berlin for several German newspapers, and above all for the Pester Lloyd. His task was to "systematize" the press work of the Foreign Office. He at once came into contact, or conflict, with the notorious Herr von Holstein, and he gives elaborate accounts of the intrigues of the time — especially the extraordinary campaign of Kladderadatsch against Holstein. Kiderlen, and Eulenburg. Hammann indicates, however, that Holstein and Bulow were the only authorities who kept the Press Bureau fully informed as to what was going on.

He complains that in recent years it often happened that he "learnt of diplomatic offensives or defensives only from the newspapers or from public speeches." This is doubtless true, and the whole book really illustrates the fact that, while the Wilhelmstrasse has always been full of domestic intrigue and political conspiracies, its methods have remained antiquated. The truth is, of course, that, German diplomacy being a network of intrigue, "systematization" of the control of the press was impracticable, and Herr Hammann's superiors did not trust him any more than they trusted one another. Moreover, Hammann's own book shows that there was not any reason to give him advance information or to ask his advice, as he was always ready to obey orders and to throw himself into any "diplomatic offensives or defensives" as soon as he was given the cue. One "crisis" was much the same to him as another.

Perhaps the most interesting page in the book is the account of the Kruger telegram with which Hammann seeks to rid the Kaiser of the responsibility of destroying good relations with England. He says:

On the evening of Jan. 2, 1896, there arrived in Berlin the report of Count Hatzfeld, the German Ambassador in London, that the fight at Krugersdorp against the Chartered Company's troops led by Jameson had ended victoriously for the Boers. A report to the same effect from the consul in Pretoria was on its way. On the morning of Jan. 3 the Kaiser came to Berlin from the Neues Palais at Potsdam, and proceeded immediately to a consultation with the Imperial Chancellor at his residence. Those who took part in the consultation, in addition to Prince Hohenlohe, were Herr Hollmann, the Secretary of State for the Imperial Navy; Baron von Marschall, the Foreign Secretary, and Dr. Kayser, Director of the Colonial Department. I do not know whether Admiral Knorr of the Supreme Command of the Navy was present. Herr von Holstein certainly did not take part.

The draft of a congratulatory telegram to President Kruger did not exist at the beginning of the discussion; the idea of sending a telegram from the Kaiser arose during the discussion, and when it was approved the Colonial Director, Kayser, drafted the text in a neighboring room, and, after an unimportant alteration of one passage by Marschall's hand, it was signed by the Kaiser. It was generally believed in the Foreign Office at the time that the idea came from the Kaiser. It was not until many years later that the version arose that the intellectual author of the Kruger telegram was Marschall, and that the Kaiser had been outvoted at the consultation.

Denmark Faces Problem.

Denmark's stock of swine, which amounted to about 2,500,000 head at the outbreak of the war, has now dropped to 490,000 according to latest estimates. Further serious inroads on this stock are being compelled by the impossibility of importing fodder, principally corn. In 1913 Denmark's total export of pork were nearly 250,000 tons, of which just under one-half went to England. All exports have now been stopped, and the outlook for supplying the domestic consumption's requirements will be dark if the war continues much longer.

KAISER NOW STATE TAILOR

He Sets Styles and Prices in Germany.

ALL CREDIT ABOLISHED

All Shops Have Been Commandeered Under the Latest Scheme of an Autocracy That Has No Sense of Humor, But It Remains to Be Seen Whether the Female Huns Will Submit to It.

EMPEROR WILLIAM is the greatest merchant tailor in the world. He has taken over practically the whole tailoring business of Germany, for men as well as for women. The Emperor is running his new tailoring business under the name of Reichsbekleidungsstelle, which means the Emperor's clothing place.

German newspapers announce the Kaiser's clothing shops are open for business in all parts of the Fatherland. Thus the Kaiser controls the whole clothing industry of the nation. He is in a position to dictate the style, the shade of goods to be used and the length of the skirts for women. At present the Kaiser seems to favor dark goods for men's suits, for the newspapers say the goods used for the Kaiser's coats are exclusively of a dark shade.

Formerly it used to be the exclusive privilege of the military man to wear the Kaiser's coat, but now everybody practically not only will be privileged, but even compelled, to wear the Kaiser's coat. And the women will not only wear Kaiser coats, but also Kaiser skirts. It may be assumed the Kaiser is in favor of short and narrow skirts for women, in order to save material.

While the Kaiser is in charge of the wholesale department of the German clothing industry, so to speak, the local shops in the different cities, towns and villages are to be in charge of the municipal authorities. However, the prices are fixed in Berlin by the Kaiser.

One cannot buy a hand-me-down early on Saturday morning any cheaper than at any other time. Nor will one have a chance to buy one leg of a pair of trousers this week and the other leg next week. Bargaining is verboten, if the Kaiser has his way. No more clearing sales, no more fire sales, no more bankrupt sales, no more misfit sales!

The German clothing industry has been Prussianized indeed, pressed with a hot iron into a methodical shape or a shapeless method. Men's suits have been standardized, runing in six series, from the letter A to F. All male Germans will soon know to which series they belong. They won't have to have their measurements taken. All they will have to do is to go to the Kaiser's shop and say: "Hand me down an A suit!"

The Kaiser's salesman will know exactly what the customer wants, and any argument as to whether it fits well around the neck will be superfluous. And the customer must pay cash down for his suit. The Kaiser needs the money. No more suits on tick is the standing rule.

The Germans no longer can have a suit made to order, forget to pay the bill and fail to recognize the tailor when they happen to pass him in the street. Nor can they any longer buy a suit on tick and hock it with their uncle on the same day, to squander the ill-gotten gain in a beer garden.

Of course, the Kaiser has given him new clothing a high-sounding name. He calls the suits reichsanzuege, meaning empire or state suits. The reichsanzug for men costs from 70 to 100 marks. This is about the same price that prevailed before the war for custom-made clothing.

Whether the women of Germany will submit to the styles dictated by the Kaiser remains to be seen. Newspapers announcing the Kaiser's new departure state the measure is first being applied to mere man, considered more docile. So if a revolution should break out in Germany these days it may be the German women rebelled against the Kaiser's styles.

U. S. Millers Must Give Back Their Big Flour Profits

WASHINGTON, July 9.—The statement by the Federal Trade Commission in its report to the Senate that many millers had made at least 45 cents a barrel profit on flour, although the Food Administration had fixed the maximum profit at 25 cents a barrel, was explained by Food Administrator Hoover.

That a number of the millers had exceeded the maximum price and had figured income and excess profits taxes in operating expenses, Mr. Hoover did not deny. He stated, however, that these millers had been instructed by the Food Administration that all profits in excess of 25 cents a barrel must be returned to the Government, and also that income and excess profits taxes must be borne by the millers. This action was taken June 17.

The plan is to permit the millers to readjust their accounts as of July 1, and where it is shown that a profit of more than 25 cents a barrel has been made, the millers are to sell flour to the Food Administration at $1 a barrel for distribution to the army and the navy, until the Government has in this manner been reimbursed for all unfair profits collected by the millers.

Eddy, lately of Beamsville, and still later of Mount Forest, is to be curate of St. George's Church, and a teacher at Ridley College. Rev. T. H. BANK CLERK ADMITS CHEQUE FORGERIES

BRANTFORD, July 8.— Hugh Farrell, 18 years old, in the County Court here to-day before Judge Hardy, admitted putting through two forged cheques at the Bank of Nova Scotia covering a total sum of $5,800. The cheque covered a shortage in cash prior to his going on sick leave from the bank, also $3,200 which he carried out in his pocket. When the cheque came back from the west Farrell was in Mount Clemens, where he was arrested. A new auto and part of the funds were recovered.

L. F. Heyd, Toronto, pleaded for a settlement by restitution, which has been offered the bank on monthly instalments, but Crown Attorney Wilkes dissented. Judge Hardy laid the case over for two weeks for consideration.

Enemy Quickly Disappeared.

An official of a railway which passes through Philadelphia, I am told, was in the habit of expressing his war sentiments without restraint to his private secretary, Girard writes in the Philadelphia Ledger. These sentiments were derogatory to the allies and favorable to Germany. One day at the end of a particularly vehement tirade the secretary said: "I trust, sir, that what you have said does not represent your real feelings on the subject." "I mean every word of it," said his employer. It was just after a fire had taken place in a nearby city and the responsibility had been laid at the doors of German hirelings whose enterprise the railway man extolled. "Then I shall be obliged to arrest you," said the secretary, throwing open his coat and showing the badge of a secret service agent. The indiscreet official is now supposed to be in a place where what he may have to say in praise of kultur will reach a severely limited audience.

Wealthy Persons In Russia Ruined

Soviet Government Confiscate Their Lands and Impose Great Taxes

VOLOGDA, Russia, July 9.—If the Entente Allies will not intervene, let the Germans come, is the attitude of the formerly wealthy and the middle classes of the people of Russia. Most of them here would frankly welcome foreign intervention. This feeling has been the greatest obstacle in any attempt to bring the Russian internal political revolution out of the whirlpool of disorder, according to information in the foreign embassies here.

Now that the peasants and workmen are having their innings, the property classes are beginning to feel the pinch of denial, and even of starvation, experienced by the poorer classes in Russia for centuries. This is illustrated by the experience of the "bourgeois" family The family, once one of the wealthiest in the Vologda Government, owned thousands of acres of timber land, several lumber mills, a dozen ships, two glass factories, and more than 2,000 acres of land. This is what has happened to those holdings in the last two months:

The lumber land has been declared a Government monopoly and confiscated, likewise the shipping. The glass factories and lumber mills have been taken over and are operated by the workmen. The peasants have taken the land. A few days ago the city government (Soviet) imposed a special tax on the capitalistic class. The family was assessed 50,000 rubles.

Prices for foodstuffs, when obtainable, are enormous. At present in Vologda each person is allowed five pounds of black flour a month, enough to permit about three thin slices of bread per day. But more is procurable through irregular channels. The correspondent's host bought a pood yesterday for 150 rubles, just three hundred times the old price. There is nothing else quite as bad as this, but, with meat, butter, and all other foodstuffs, the prices are from ten to fifty times the old amount. Everything is by card; that is, purchases are limited and city (Soviet) controlled, but it is quite possible if one has enough money to obtain larger quantities by stealth.

But the Soviet has quite an effective way of controlling this underhand trading—the "obusk." "Obusk" is Russian for search. A dozen or so armed soldiers and Red Guard swoop down now and then on the house the correspondent occupies and confiscate the surplus supplies.

When to these difficulties are added confiscation of bank accounts of the wealthy families, their plight can be imagined.

LET NOT YOUR HEART BE TROUBLED.

(John 14. 1.)

Let not your heart be troubled!
Oh, words of matchless worth,
Once uttered by the Saviour,
When He abode on earth.
What peace and consolation
These words have often brought
To hearts oppressed by sorrow,
Or filled with anxious thought.

Let not your heart be troubled!
Though war doth long prevail,
And fierce and cruel warriors
Our valiant troops assail.
The foeshall be defeated,
Though hard and long the fight—
For God will help the nation,
Whose cause is just and right.

Let not your heart be troubled!
Ye mothers of our land,
Whose sons are in the battle,
With death on every hand.
They fight for home and country,
For freedom, truth and right;
And God will not forsake them,
But keep them in His light.

Let not your heart be troubled!
But pray to God above,
That He may keep our soldiers,
And guard them in His love,
That He may keep our soldiers,
Our King and rulers bless;
And grant them power and wisdom
In this dark hour of stress.

Let not your heart be troubled!
Believe in God, and wait
The help that He hath promised,
Will never come too late.
Though now the conflict rageth,
And hearts are filled with woe—
The God of Might and Justice
Will surely crush the foe.

Let not your heart be troubled!
This cruel war will cease,
And to the stricken nations
Will come the word of Peace.
Then from the fields of battle
Our brave victorious men
Will turn their faces homeward,
And come to us again.

—J. H. Taylor.

GRAIN MARKET

Grain markets are moderately active and strong, with an upward tendency in corn and oats. Certain interests seem to be playing up the options in October oats, though it is a little early yet to say that the new crop will be in any sense a failure. There is plenty of time yet in fact for a good oats crop, providing the weather from this out is anything like favorable. The Washington crop report out yesterday indicates a record crop in barley, oats and rye. The corn crop also indicates a bumper one though the options yesterday were strong Ontario cash oats are strong.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday were 24 cars, with 337 cattle, 156 calves, 14 hogs and 93 sheep.

There was a little more life to trade than Monday but the prices were not any higher, the market steadying at yesterday's decline. The run of fresh cattle was light, with nothing specially attractive as to quality. About 600 or 900 head of cattle held over from Monday's receipts made a pretty fair offering altogether and buyers were in the market for anything of decent quality. A few loads of the best cattle were held over for to-day's market.

All small meat stock was steady.

The packers were quoting $18 for hogs fed and watered, but a few small lots sold at $18.25.

WOULD USE CZECHS AGAINST THE RUSSIAN BOLSHEVIKI

Prominent German Says Lenine and Trotzky Will Soon Disappear—Criminals in Petrograd Are Armed to the Teeth.

FIRST COME FIRST SERVED

LONDON, July 10.—Statements attributed by the Cologne Gazette to a German described as holding for many years a distinguished position in the Far East, and who lately traveled from China to Germany across Siberia, are printed in the Times.

The German is very contemptuous of Gen. Semenoff's Cossacks, but writes with great respect of the Czecho-Slovaks, who, he says, are not destined for the French front, but are to be used exclusively against the Russian Bolsheviki.

The German says he saw 10,000 Czecho-Slovaks on the Amur railway and was told there were nearly 50,000 Czecho-Slovaks altogether in Siberia. He describes the 10,000 whom he met as splendid material, well-fed and well-clothed, but not armed. No arms, at any event, were visible even among the officers.

Regarding the Bolsheviki, the German says:

"Their power, which does not seem now quite firm even in Moscow and Petrograd, does not exist at all in Siberia. The smallest Soviet does what it likes there. Everybody's first concern is himself. Soviet soldiers search the house of the bourgeoise population and seize their property.

Nobody has a minute's security. These rascals are criminals who escaped from prison or were released by the Bolsheviki. They are armed to the teeth.

"The authors of the terrible butcheries on the Amur were those criminals. There was absolutely no battle. The people were simply murdered. Some rich merchants shot themselves to escape bestial tortures. Educated classes yearn for the day when the German will come to create order. A counter-revolution is being sympathetically prepared. Lenine and Trotzsky will disappear."

The Greatest Robber King

THEY have taken down the statue of Frederick the Great in Washington, and now that it has disappeared our American allies can ask themselves why he was called great. He tried to do many things, and from the position he occupied he was able to essay them under the most favorable auspices. In which of them, then, did he excel to such degree as to earn the title by which he is known?

He tried to write poetry, but even Voltaire's hired praise (which he reversed as soon as his pay was stopped) has not convinced the world that he was great in that department. He tried the flute and the fiddle, but we should inquire in vain for any evidence that he ravished any ear on those instruments. He tried to be a lawgiver, but outside of kicking the shins of his judges when they objected to his interference he acquired no greatness in that attempt. In what, then, was Frederick great? The answer is too plain that he was great only in those qualities of perfidy, cunning, faithlessness, cruelty and rapacity that made him the greatest robber king who ever sat upon a throne. In that greatness he has had few emulators, and in our time, at least, they have been confined to his own family.

Frederick, to do him justice, pretended to be nothing but what he was. When he started out to rob a neighbor he did not go forth canting about his mission. He called things by their right names. When he started out to rob Maria Theresa of Silesia some flatterer about the court inscribed a banner to be borne for the army with the words, "For God and Our Country." Frederick regarded it with disdain. "Strike out 'For God,'" he said, "we are going to get a province, not to defend religion." He was under solemn treaty pledge to respect the Queen of Hungary's title to that province and cynically admitted it. But his ambition and his interest, he said, demanded a war of conquest, to which reasons he added one of personal vitality. He wanted, he said, to make people talk about him.

Frederick entered on this war with something of the impishness with which he was accustomed to throw oil on the new velvet suit of a courtier who was taking too much pride in his looks. Thus we have him writing home in a vein of questionable pleasantry, "I have the honor to inform your humanity that we are Christianly preparing to bombard Neisse; and that, if the place will not surrender of goodwill, needs must that it be beaten to powder." It is easy to imagine the present wielder of Frederick's sword rubbing his hands in the same way before Louvain and Rheims. It was to the same correspondent that Frederick wrote in his daredevil and cynical humor, "My dear Monsieur Jordan, my sweet Monsieur Jordan, my quiet Monsieur Jordan, my good, my benign, my pacific, my most humane Monsieur Jordan—I announce to your serenity the conquest of Silesia." It was in such humor that he pursued his greatness.

The same cynicism characterized his reception of Britain's intervention to bring about his withdrawal from his neighbor's territory. To some word about moderation he said contemptuously, "Do not talk to me of magnanimity. A prince ought to consult his interest. I am not opposed to peace—but I expect to have four duchies given me." In the same negotiation he said: "Guarantees? Who minds or keeps guarantees in this age? I am at the head of an army which has vanquished the enemy. The country which I desire is conquered. This is all I want. I now have it. I will and must keep it. Have I need of peace? Let those who need it give us what I want, or let them fight the again[illegible] we beaten again."

If treachery to an ally is a title to greatness Frederick was great in that, too. He made an alliance with France and then came to secret terms with Austria by which he was still to pretend to make war against her to withdraw her army from in front of him to surprise his ally in another quarter. The record of this treachery was made in Frederick's own hand. "In exchange (for Silesia) we will go no farther. We will besiege Neisse for form. The commandant shall surrender and depart. We will quietly go into winter quarters; and they (the Austrians) can take their army where they will. Let all be finished in twelve days."

This is the Frederick who was called great. He was the founder of Prussianism, the full fruits of which the world now sees.

Observed Mother's Day.

The Canadian troops find an opportunity during the lull in the battle for recreation and amusement. At any time the great battle may make an unprecedented demand on the troops, but until that time, Canada at home, should not worry unduly over its men in France.

Among the peace activities of the corps has been the observation of Mothers' Day on May 12. Canadian Y.M.C.A. officers, who were prominent in the movement, declare that unprecedented demands were made upon their special stationery, which was placed at the disposal of the men in their canteens so that mothers at home might hear from their sons.

One hundred and fifty thousand specially-printed sheets of notepaper were placed in such establishments by the association. In addition 25,000 special cards, bearing a message to mothers, were printed by the Y.M.CC.A., and given to the men to send home. The message which expresses the unalterable determination of the soldiers of Canada to prosecute the war until victory is secured, reads in part:

"It is really you, our mothers and our homes, for whom we are fighting. When the gift of freedom is ours then we will come home and lay it reverently at your feet, for it will be hallowed by the blood of many comrades. Then we shall devote our lives to service in our country, in the upbuilding of happy homes and noble citizenship. Pray for us that this high and holy vision may never fade from our minds, and that we may be given courage and patience to finish our task. What a glorious homecoming there will be. Till then we remain where we are, fighting for our mothers and homes."

Had a Complaint.

The angry citizen puffed into the office of the city editor.

"See here, sir," he yelled, "what do you mean by publishing my resignation from my political office in this way?"

"You gave the story out yourself, didn't you?" asked the editor.

"Of course I did," repled the angry citizen. "But your fool paper prints it under the head of Public Improvements."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

The Gentle Viper.

A species of viper (Viper macropa) from Bosnia, about eighteen inches in length, seems to feed exclusively on grasshoppers. An interesting point about this little snake is that, although poisonous, it may be handled with impunity. If teased it may hiss and snap, but never bits unless seriously hurt. Another viper, which feeds on lizards and mice, has a like reputation for a gentle disposition. This is common in the neighborhood of Laxenburg, where the village boys may be seen playing with it.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

THE REACTION

CHAPTER CXIII.

I scarcely spoke again that evening, and George did not except when I asked a question. I was discouraged, depressed. I knew I had not been tactful. I had impulsively arraigned him instead of telling him quietly how I suffered from his non-appreciation of my efforts to please him. The reaction of the day's excitement was telling on me. I felt a morbid pleasure in assuring myself I had lost them both; that I had dismissed Merton and had not won anything by doing it.

"What was the use trying to be good and do right?" I said to myself as after an hour I bade George good night and went up stairs. I wanted to be alone. The regular turning of the leaves of the magazine had irritated me. My nerves were on edge. As I look back I feel that it was wonderful that I could have attempted to talk, to reason with George after the strain of the night before and of the interview with Merton. But then I could not reason; I could only suffer.

I went immediately to bed, and instantly fell asleep.

The next morning George said laughingly:

"What had you been eating. You snored like a pirate last night. I woke you several times, rather tried to, but you went right on snoring.

"Oh, I hope I didn't disturb you!" I said mortified, and blushing hotly.

"Who'se got a better right!" he returned tweaking my ear.

IF SHE COULD ONLY UNDERSTAND.

I was frankly surprised at his good nature. I must have kept him awake; he had been cross with me the night before. Would I ever know him ever understand his different moods?

NUXATED IRON

increases strength of delicate, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time in many instances. It has been used and endorsed by such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury and Ex-Governor of Iowa; Former United States Senator Richard Rolland Kenney of Delaware; at present Major of the U.S. Army; General John L. Clem (Retired) the drummer boy of Shiloh who was sergeant in the U. S. Army when only 12 years of age; also United States Judge G. W. Atkinson of the Court of Claims of Washington and others. Ask your doctor or druggist about it.

At breakfast he was very pleasant; almost jolly. He teased me unmercifully about snoring; said he was going to bring home a pincher for my nose, and a lot of other nonsense. When he was ready to go he said.

"Come down town and have luncheon with me if you like. I shall not be very busy today."

"That will be a treat," I said quietly. Just in time I remembered Mrs. Sexton's advice anent being meek, too meek. Usually I had gushed over such an invitation; and thanked him fulsomely as if it were no pleasure at all for him; that the joy was all mine.

"It will for me also," he had said, then kissed me as carelessly as usual.

I danced about the house all the morning. I laughed and talked with Celeste while she helped me dress; telling her to make me lovely.

I was a little early at the restaurant, so waited in the lobby for George. While I waited Mr. Carpenter, whom I had met the first time I lunched there, came in, and seeing me alone came directly up to me.

"Are you lunching here?" he asked.

"Yes, I am waiting for Mr. Howard."

"Just my luck. Every attractive woman I know is always waiting for some other man," he returned. The words meant nothing, but the tone, and the look that accompanied them made me blush. He had just left me when George came in.

"What are you blushing for?" he asked.

"That Mr. Carpenter was just talking with me," and I repeated what he had said.

GEORGE SHOWS A FLASH OF JEALOUSY.

"The fool!" George said under his breath, then "he better not poach on my preserves," he took my arm and we went in to the table he had reserved by telephone.

I was so happy I could have laughed aloud. George had really shown a little jealousy. He was not really angry; it was more the petulant expression of a jealous lover. I was sure now that I would have a pleasant lunch hour; and strange as it may seem the little incident helped me to feel I had done exactly right in dismissing Merton Gray. That such a momentous action should even in my thoughts hang upon such a trivial incident was ridiculous of course; but in my mood at that time nothing seemed too small to be of consequence as it affected George and me.

After luncheon, which had passed off almost gayly, George had another surprise for me.

"I have to go over to Leanord Park"—a town very near us—"I thought perhaps you would enjoy the ride; so told James to meet us here with the touring car.

Again I thought of Mrs. Sexton. I would not show too much enthusiasm. Yet knowing how he disliked a long ride in an open car I knew he had ordered the touring car to please me.

"I shall enjoy the ride. It will do you good also. You looked a bit fagged when you came in to luncheon."

"So you noticed it! I was tried out. One of the men in the office is sick. He didn't show up today, and things were a bit snarled in consequence. But I feel bully now. I guess I was hungry," he then motioned Mr. Carpenter to come and have coffee with us "He mustn't thank I minded his speaking to you," so confirming my suspicions.

Tomorrow—An Unpleasant Ride.

TOO CRITICAL FOR STRIKES.

London Pacifist Editor Strenuously Condemns Threat of Engineers.

According to London papers just to hand Mr. George Lansbury, editor of the London Herald, a paper circulated among the laboring classes and himself a pacifist, is now alarmed—furious even—at the Amalgamated Society of Engineers for their during to threaten to create a strike at such a critical period of the war, when every man is needed on the battlefield, in the shipyard and in the factory.

Asked what he would say if he were addressing the engineer extremists who are threatening a strike, Mr. Lansbury said:

"I should tell them that striking to serve their own skins was a disgrace to them. My view about any strike during the war is that unless it would have the effect of bringing peace it ought not to take place. I have no sympathy with men striking at this time for wages, hours, or to put other men in the army instead of themselves.

"I think the time for strikes in any country was when the Austrians and Germans were striking—if the working classes by united action could have brought the war to an end then, I should have been in favor of their doing it. That is past. I have no sympathy with the sort of man who says, 'I will strike if I am to go, but another fellow can go'."

Batouche.

Thirty-three years ago the death blow was given the Riel rebellion in the Battle of Batoche, fought by a miscellaneous Canadian force under Gen. Middleton, of which the 10th Royal Grenadiers of Toronto formed the advance guard, and in which that famous citizen regiment was a very active and effective participant. Batoche, more than any other battle that has been fought on Canadian soil by the home defensive force, demonstrated the disciplined courage and resource of Canadians under arms. The spirit of Batoche to-day is again exemplified by the sons of the Maple Leaf on the far-away fields of France, against an enemy infinitely more resourceful and scientifically efficient, but on a par with the worst Red Indians in savagery and rejection of the ethics of civilization.

The Toronto officers of the Grenadiers surviving of those who fought at Batoche are Lt.-Col. Grasett, C.M.G., head of the Toronto Police Department; Surgeon-General Ryerson, Brig.-Gen. James Mason, now chief of the Organization of Reserves, and Col. C. Greville-Harston, at present in England. Major D. M. Howard, an inspector in the R.N.W.M.P., was also an officer of the regiment, but not in action at the historic battle. Of the rank and file, approximately one hundred are left in Toronto. The officers of the Batoche Column Association are: Hon. president, Lt.-Col. J. R. Leslie; honorary vice-president, Lt.-Col. A. Curran; president, J. A. McDonald; vice-president, A. Devitt and secretary-treasurer, W. J. Bewley.

FOGS HELPED ENEMY.

Airplane Observers Can Only Work In Good Weather.

Some surprise has been expressed in many quarters that the massing of German troops should have taken place unobserved by allied aviators, both before the German push on the Somme in March and before the last drive against the French positions between Soissons and Rheims.

An expert points out that though airplanes and their crews can do a surprising number of things, one which is impossible for an airplane is to enable its pilot or observer to see in the dark or to see through a fog. The airplane is a distinctly locomotive vehicle, and not some new optical instrument.

Those who have studied the communiques issued prior to the German attack in March found constant reference to the fact that night bombing was impossible owing to ground mists, and on various occasions it was stated that it was impossible for our aircraft to ascend until well on in the course of the morning.

This means the Germans could move their troops in perfect safety night after night, and by stowing them away in towns and villages and in forests, which abound in that part of France, an enormous number of troops could be collected in such a way as to be absolutely invisible to the most acute air scout.

Even on a perfectly clear but dark night it is practically impossible to observe the movements of troops, and in the moonlight, though the troops would be seen on the open roads, it would be very hard to see them on those wonderful French roads with trees all along their sides, intended to give shade during the day, but now providing equally desirable shadows at night.

The difficulties of air reconnaissance have been increased very materially by the fact that the Germans have now such enormous masses of troops behind every part of the line that the movement of the troops in mass or by trains do not attract attention even in broad daylight to the extent which would have been true over six months ago. Consequently, even the most careful aerial reconnaissance may fail to estimate correctly the excess of the number of troops massed behind one part of the line over the number behind another part.

It must be remembered also that although aerial reconnaissance may have estimated with some approach to accuracy the masses of troops held in reserve in the neighborhood of Laon there was nothing to show whether these reserves were intended to move west for a renewed attack on Amiens or whether they were to move to the south for an attack on the Soissons-Rheims sector.

The benefit of internal lines of communication was again demonstrated, and it has been proved that although the possession of aircraft enables an army commander to "see behind the hill," it does not altogether guard him against surprise, when the surprise is planned by capable strategists and tacticians. This was proved by Gen. Byng's surprise attack in the first battle of Cambrai, and it has been proved three times by the enemy since, namely, the second battle of Cambrai, the March attack in the Somme area and in this latest drive.

These facts, however, far from demonstrating the failure of the airplane, merely emphasize the growing necessity for more and more planes, possibly of new types, but certainly in enormous quantities, so that reconnaissance may be even more thorough than at present, so that enemy reconnaissance may be more hampered and that attacks on enemy troops both day and night with bombs and machine guns may be more effective, and so that continual fighting in the air may turn definitely and permanently in favor of the Allies.

When Beards Were Taxed.

In the reign of Elizabeth every beard of a fortnight's growth was subject to a tax of 3s. 4d. Peter the Great, in 1705, imposed a tax upon the beards of the Russian nobles of 100 roubles, while the common people's beard tax amounted to one kopec. This tax caused much dissatisfaction, but in spite of this the impost was extended to St. Petersburg in 1714. The tax on beards was confirmed by Catherine I, in 1726, by Peter II, in 1728, by Empress Anne in 1731, and in 1743 by the Empress Elizabeth.

It was repealed by Catherine II in 1762. In France a beard tax was imposed upon the clergy, [illegible] brated Duprat, Lord High Chancellor of France, was the adviser of the measure; and a bull was published by the Pope enjoining the clergy to shave their chins, and then a tax was levied by the king upon all who wished to be exempted from the harsh decree. The bishops, and others who could afford the means, paid the tax, but the poorer clergy were obliged to yield at the point of the razor.

Cultivating Vacant Land.

Mr. F. Abraham, honorary chairman of the Vacant Lot and Home Garden Section of the Canada Food Board, estimates that production from vacant lot and back yard gardens this summer, judging by the reports of increased acreage now under cultivation, will be two or three times in excess of last year. The Agricultural Gazette of Ottawa states that last year Canada produced between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 worth of garden truck.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S HOUSE DRESS.

This is an unusual design for a house dress, in fact it is quite distinctive enough to warrant making it up in a suitable material for street wear. The fronts of the waist cross in surplice effect and the ends are cut in square tabs which button onto the waist. The fronts are slightly draped at the under arm seams, but there are no gathers at all at the back. The short sleeves are the most practical for a house dress, but the pattern also includes full length sleeves with cuffs in case the dress is to be for general wear. The two gored skirt is gathered all around and large patch pockets are stitched at the sides. Cotton crepe, chambray, gingham or percale may be used for the house dress.

The lady's house dress pattern No. 8806 is cut in six sizes, 36 to 46 inches bust measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is 2 yards. The 36 inch size, as on the figure, requires 3⅞ yards of 36 inch, or 3½ yards of 44 inch, with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction. This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents

All Upholding Dodge Service Standards

There is no open season for buying Transmission Machinery.

Orders are placed day and night. If something goes wrong, and a pulley, shaft or coupling is needed, it is always wanted at once.

Or if a new battery of lathes is about to be put in, pulleys and countershafts must be had quickly. The buyer wants to be able to send downtown and get pulley equipment from stock.

So we have made it easy for him to do it.

In forty-six towns a reliable firm acts as Dodge Stocker—in the fullest meaning of the term. Stock is carried in such quantity and variety as will meet any ordinary call.

All stockers carry a range of sizes in wood-split pulleys, cast-iron pulleys, couplings, bearings, universal hangers, sprocket-chain, and small size split friction clutches.

Such orders as they cannot fill from stock they wire or telephone to Toronto or Montreal Headquarters.

In newspapers, at almost every stocker's centre, we advertise continuously to let buyers know there is a Dodge Stocker there. And we send able men to call upon stockers regularly to see to it that they render Service according to Dodge Standards, because to be a Dodge Stocker in a community is to hold a trust and own a valuable franchise.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Caroline Thinks It Out

By Mona Cowles

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"To get up in the morning and make your own coffee and boil your own egg and make toast for yourself is all very well and good for a girl when she is single, but to have to do that sort of thing is quite different when one is married," Caroline had said with a very definite air five years ago on the memorable afternoon when Horace Blair had proposed to her. "I don't in the least mind living here in this two-room apartment now and I suppose you are quite comfortable in the boarding house, but to have to live in three or four rooms or to have to go to boarding after we are married would be really quite impossible."

Horace fondled the hand he held and looked dejectedly at the graceful finger that Caroline had just permitted him to measure for the engagement ring.

"You are a very sensible girl, Caroline," he said, "and I suppose you are right—"

"Of course, I'm right," she agreed. "At twenty I might have been foolish and romantic. Then I might have supposed that I could be happy and make you happy on my thousand-dollar-a-year income and your salary of three thousand—"

"Twenty-eight hundred." Horace corrected with a sigh.

"With an occasional picture I could sell that would come to no more than forty-five hundred." She sighed and shook her head.

"I'm sorry, Horace, but it can't be done. I've seen other girls try to do it and—well, perhaps they are happy—but we couldn't live the way we do. You wouldn't want to try. It would mean living in a suburb somewhere with an incompetent maid and wearing ready-made clothes—yes, I know I have to now, but I won't always be young. At thirty I would look a mess in a ready-made suit—and we would have to keep eternally counting the money, and if we went to the theater we'd have to sit in the gallery—"

"We've had rather good fun that way, haven't we?" Horace murmured.

"Yes, Horace dear, but doing it now is one thing and doing it then is quite another matter. You'll thank me some time for the stand I am taking."

"Then—you mean you won't marry me?"

"Not in the least. I simply mean that I can't marry you till our income is doubled at least!"

Horace took out an envelope and pencil from his pocket and began to figure.

"Nine thousand—that means that I must have about seventy-five hundred."

"I'll relent a little," smiled Caroline. "I'll marry you when you are making six thousand. You can work up to that—"

"It may take five years," sighed the unhappy suitor.

"What if it does? We love each other, and we can go on quite nicely this way. You know marriage isn't something to be entered into emotionally."

"You are a very sensible girl," said Horace accepting his sentence grimly. "I think I see your point of view."

And so it was settled and Horace and Caroline began their long engagement. There were never any quarrels—Caroline was too sensible for that and never once did she weaken from her wise decision that to make toast for yourself was one thing, but to have to do it for two was another. Even in his most impatient moods Horace had to admire the lofty ideal that Caroline maintained toward marriage. It was something that had to be undertaken on a dignified, rather grand scale or not at all.

And a day or so ago Caroline was still making her own toast and drawing an occasional picture that sold, quite content on her small income and Horace was working on patiently with the concern with which he had begun ten years ago, grimly waiting for another chance ahead that would bring him the coveted six-thousand dollar income. It did not seem then that there would be long to wait, for already he had reached the fifty-five hundred mark and he had saved enough to make possible the prospects of starting in life with a rather more pretentious abode than the suburban cottage that Caroline had held in such contempt.

Caroline worked at her drawing board as patiently and eagerly as ever and her ability as an illustrator had not become impaired but owing to war conditions, as the editors told her, there was less demand for her particular kind of talent than in years gone by. When she did get an order it meant a smaller check than formerly. She did not flinch at the economies this necessitated. Single poverty was one thing, she insisted, and married poverty another.

Then a day or so ago Horace came to spend his usual Sunday afternoon with her but instead of hurrying up the two flights of stairs to her apartment when he reached the house where she lived in spinster sedateness, he hesitated and then walked dejectedly around the block. Again he started to enter and with a heavy sigh retracted his steps around the block. It took considerable courage finally for him to ascend the steps he had trod so many times and to give his accustomed knock at her door.

So well did Caroline know his every expression that it was in vain that he attempted to dissemble his depression.

"I'll have to tell you some time," he began, when he had settled back in his favorite wicker chair with Caroline sitting opposite to him by the window. "If ever a man had reason to be discouraged I'm that man—after five years. Oh, Caroline, it is too cruel of fate—" He buried his head in his hands, and if he had been anything but the every inch American man that he was he would have shed a tear or two.

Caroline was not the young woman to put caressing arms about his neck and assure him that everything was lovely whether it was or not, and Horace liked her better because she was not. She simply waited for him to tell the rest of the story.

"I have to tell you, Caroline," he said, "because I know you will feel the blow almost as much as I do, I am sure of your love; if I weren't, I couldn't endure this terrible calamity. I'm sure you'll wait—perhaps five years more." He winced as he thought of another long sentence of waiting.

"It's just our share of the war conditions, I suppose. The shipping tie-up has knocked our business sky-high. I've been hoping against hope we'd find a way out. But we've had to close down one of our plants—and that means that the salaries of men at the top will have to be cut in half. If I get out and start in some other line I'll have to begin at the bottom—every business in our line is crippled—it may mean two or three years after the war ends even before things are back on their feet."

Caroline was still calm. "That leaves you with just about twenty-seven hundred, doesn't it?" she asked, and the surprising bluntness of her reply served as a bracer to Horace's wilting spirits.

"Now listen to the sequal. My income has been dwindling. My little money is all in K. and B. and that is worth about half what it was before the war. I've been meaning to tell you. I hated to—but I've got to give up the apartment. I'd do more work but there's no market for it now."

Horace forgot his own troubles and was leaning over Caroline with two outstretched arms. "Poor, dear girl," he said. "How you must have worried—and now comes my tale of woe—and even now you aren't crying about it. Caroline, you've more pluck than any man I ever knew." He knelt beside her, looking with infinite tenderness and admiration into her unflinching blue eyes. "Have you thought what you are—are going to do about it?"

"There's only one thing to do," she said slowly. "I'll have to give up this place and I suppose you'll have to live some place cheaper than the Hotel Bradford."

"Yes, of course,"

"Well, why couldn't we both live here?" Caroline's usually firm voice faltered a little as she made the suggestion.

"You don't mean—Caroline—how could you? You don't mean that we can be married? Don't you know what you said about making toast and frying eggs for two—you've told me so often that you couldn't—Caroline don't let me hope if you don't really mean it."

"I've thought it all out," she said, resuming her calm manner that Horace thought the finest thing he had ever seen in any woman. "It is one thing for two persons to live separately on two small incomes—and it is another thing for those two people to live together on their joint incomes. Don't you see how simple it is. It's just a matter of plain arithmetic. We can pay rent for one apartment instead of for two; we can read by one light instead of two, and we don't have to go out to the theater and places for amusement, because we'll be married and can just stay home. It's such a simple solution, Horace, that I'm surprised we never thought of it before."

The Irish "Long Car."

There was a time—and it was only as long ago as the last century, too—when the Irish traveled about their country on odd little cars. They were called "long cars" and they were not very different, really from the "outside cars" which are still commonly used in Ireland. But the outside car carries no more than two persons on seats, while the long car carried sometimes as many as sixteen passengers in all. The luggage was piled up in the middle.

NO MORE KIDNEY TROUBLE

"Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of 'Fruit-a-tives', I thought I would try them. The result was surprising.

I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using 'Fruit-a-tives', and I know now what I have not known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

"The new system of putting draftees straight into uniform and sending them across to England at once without any preliminary training in Canada, is an excellent one," declared a staff officer. "They have nothing to unlearn as did men of the old volunteer system. Their minds are not beclouded with a lot of manoeuvres and practices, which they have to forget. It is far easier for them and for us."

People in Canada may feel assured that the draftees in Canadian camps in England are getting the squarest of square deals. All those I saw looked well and seemed quite satisfied with their new life.—Douglas S Robertson.

TOMMIES LEARN BOXING.

Trainer From the Dominion Talks of Manly Sport.

Boxing is to be an essential part of the training of every British soldier henceforth. The average training period of the British recruit now is not more than six months, but several hours of each week will be devoted to boxing, partly in an effort to counteract the deadening influence of continuous drilling, and partly because boxing is regarded as the best possible means of developing the "combative spirit" in soldiers. During the present summer a comprehensive program of boxing tournaments will be carried out in every training camp in England.

In an instruction leaflet Col. H. G. Mayes, Director of the Canadian Army Gymnastic Staff, says:

"The cultivation of the fighting spirit is the greatest problem with which we are faced. For some time past the bayonet has been our especial weapon, and no other nation has ever achieved such success with cold steel. But there is something still lacking in the training. The soldier is taught the spirit of the bayonet, taught that he must strike hard to kill, but he is not taught to take as well as give, punishment.

"There is practically only one pastime to give our men this essential experience. That is boxing. In no other sport is the spirit of give and take so strongly developed. And that is why a new era in the training of the British soldier has come into existence. We are going to try to teach our men that an offensive, combativ spirit is the greatest asset a soldier can possess.

"In order to beat the Germans, the average soldier must realize that a tremendous effort has yet to be made, both physical and mental. Courage is created or largely based on confidence. Boxing teaches a man self-confidence, how to take a blow or a succession of blows, knowing that his opportunity is coming.

"What we owe to boxing and other sports in this crisis it is impossible to calculate, notwithstanding that only ten per cent. of the nation participated. The mere fact of watching boxing and other sports has tended in a measure to keep alive the combative instinct of the British race, although it must be remembered that watching a game may increase an individual's spirit, but does not improve his physique."

Few Cowpunchers Left.

War and the moving pictures have depleted the ranks of cowboys to round up, cut out and herd cattle. Cattlemen are all complaining because of a scarcity of labor on the cattle ranches. The army has drawn heavily on the ranches for men, especially the cavalry. The draft took many more, while the moving picture companies have commandeered other cowboys to make the Western films. This has led to the older cattlemen returning to the saddle for work on the ranges to take the place of the young men who have gone.

Eating More Fish.

Reports received by the Canada Food Board regarding fish sales in all parts of Canada show increases in the amount of fish which is being used as a substitute for meat and other foods needed overseas. In one Ontario city the sales from January to April inclusive showed an increase of more than 75 per cent. over last year. Sales are almost evenly divided over the week. Until last year, fish was not bought to any large extent except for Fridays.

The Man in the White Cravat

By JAMES BRAINARD

When I was a young man I went out West to seek my fortune. That was just after the war between the states, and that region of country was still very rough. The plains were divided between Indians, buffalo hunters, card sharps, desperadoes and a few good people who were trying their luck in a new country.

For the want of something to do evenings I used to go into a certain gambling den and watch the card sharps. When there were no "scabs," as they called those stupid enough to be gulled by them, they would try their card manipulations upon one another. The game was to cheat without being detected. If a player dealt a card from the bottom of the pack and his opponent saw him do it the latter had simply to say "I'm onto that bottom deal" and restitution would be made at once. It was amusing to me to see their feats of legerdemain and to observe how their opponents caught them in the act.

One evening after supper I went into this den and was looking at the men play. They were all sharps except one man who was a greenhorn. I had seen him there on many an evening and noticed that they were gradually taking his money from him. Presently a young man wearing a white cravat came in and said:

"Gents, there will be prayer meeting over the Alhambra saloon at nine o'clock this evening. All those who desire to switch off from the road to hell and get aboard the express for heaven are invited to attend."

He had scarcely finished this quaint announcement when a little boy came in and, going to the greenhorn, said:

"Papa, ma wants you to come home. She says the baby is in convulsions."

The dupe's face wore a look of anguish. He wanted to go to his child, but he had just lost a hundred dollars and wanted to stay and win it back.

"Neighbor," said the man in the white cravat, "give me your seat. I'll play for you till nine o'clock; then, since I'm conductor of the train for heaven, I'll have to go. I think I can play this game as well as you."

The greenhorn surrendered his seat and the conductor of the heavenly train took up the cards which had been put before him to deal. It was evident at once that he was not unfamiliar to them. He shuffled them in a way that would take any ordinary man long practice to learn, if indeed he could ever master it. Then he dealt them, flinging them into the air so that they came down like leaves in a November wind, and the betting began.

"Please give that card back to the gentleman on your left—the knave of clubs," he said to one of the players.

The man addressed threw the knave of clubs on the table, the man on the left took it up and the game proceeded without any further interruption.

Presently the parson, seeing a goodly pile on the table, said: "Supposing we make this a jackpot, gents?" All agreed and the parson, whose deal it was, opened it. The betting ran high and it was not long before there were several hundred dollars on the table. Then some one "called."

"Gents," said the parson, throwing his cards on the table, face up, "there you see a royal flush, the ace, king, queen, knave and ten of hearts. Since there is no hand to beat a royal flush I'll scoop the pile." And he proceeded to rake the money off the table.

After that he held his own till another fat pile was gathered on the table, when all dropped out except the parson and one other. They raised and raised each other till finally the parson showed four aces. His opponent showed four kings. Again the parson raked in a goodly sum.

At that moment the man whose place he had taken came in.

"How's the baby?" asked the parson.

"All right and asleep."

"How much money have you lost here?"

"Twelve hundred dollars."

The parson counted out twelve hundred dollars, then turned it over to the loser and pushed back what was left to the sharps.

"Gents," said the parson to the latter, "A few years ago I was a worse man than any of you. I fell in love with a good girl and she made a different man of me. I embraced her religion and since then have become a Methodist parson. My church thinks I have a better field among such as I was and they have sent me to work in this God-forsaken vineyard." Then rising he took each man by the hand and pledged every one of them to attend the meeting to be held above the Alhambra hall.

The parson then went to the home of the man whose money he had saved to him, and when the wife and mother heard the story and saw the money she threw her arms about the parson's neck and kissed him.

"And now, my friend," he said to the husband, "promise me that you will never gamble again."

The man gave the promise and the parson asked, before he departed, to see the baby. He was taken into a room where the child slept. There is something touching in the sight of a sleeping child. But this one must have excited strong emotion in the parson. He bent and kissed the pale cheek and the mother noticed that his eye was wet.

THE BRAVEST SOLDIERS.

Heroic Nurses Never Flinched During Bombing Outrage.

"They are the bravest soldiers in France," said a returned Australian in London, speaking of the Canadian nurses subjected to a bombing outrage. "They obeyed orders without flinching, and faced death with a calmness seldom seen on the battlefield. We Australians, with the help of the Canadians, will avenge the outrage." Among the Canadians the outrage is felt most keenly, but even in anger and sorrow there is great pride in the steadfast courage shown by the nurses. The matrons and doctors state in that period, and the bombing lasted intermittently for hours, not a Canadian neglected her duty or hesitated to obey a command. One Vancouver nurse was in a hut which was destroyed, but she was not injured, and carried on after the dreadful ordeal. I know our boys will make the Germans regret they ever did this," she declared.

"The Germans knew we were here," said the matron of one of the wrecked hospitals. "Wait until our army hears of this," and it was possible to give the assurance that the army knew and only waited for an opportunity for revenge. "The German cowards," she concluded, "wanted to kill our wounded." The Australians were highly wrought up over the deed. They rendered every assistance and kindness to the Canadians, and the outrage has strongly cemented the ties between these men of Dominions.

It is understood the Germans desire a cessation of bombing behind the lines and the use of gas. The Canadians have been victims of German gas and bombs, and if they can influence the decision no such arrangement will be made with the Germans, but their efforts will be redoubled to punish them with the war weapons they originated.

Nature's Variety Shop.

You may think Alaska is a hard geography lesson, just because there are 590,884 square miles, but really its the easiest lesson in the book, because, no matter what you say, it's almost sure to be true.

If you talk about the coldest weather you can imagine—fifty or sixty below zero, say—when land and water are frozen to iron and one's breath crackles in the deathlike stillness and hangs on the trail like clouds of smoke from a moving engine—that's Alaska. Or if you talk about balmy, even-tempered weather when children paddle barefooted in sun-warmed brooks and the land is a luscious, gay-colored berry field, or if you try to imagine a heavy, baking heat like that of the tropics, with a vivid, stifling riot of foliage—that's Alaska.

Describe a vast, tomb-gray waste—that's Alaska. Picture a gayly gleaming landscape, where the indefatigable sun works the clock around—that's Alaska.

Brag about cabbages which weigh as much as a two-year-old child, and even though you do it merely for literary effect, it will be true.

Name over most of the kinds of fish and animals that you ever heard of—with bears and foxes to order in every color but green — and your mark will probably be at least 90 per cent. And don't forget the oolakan or candle fish, which is so fat that it melts in the frying pan like a lump of butter and when dried and provided with a wick will burn like a candle (that's how you can remember its name) and with whose odor no slaughter house or glue factory can compete.

Of course you know about the gold. And as for coal, just draw a big cube, like a flat-topped apartment house; then in the right-hand corner draw a little cube, about the size of a corner-stone, and the little cube will be marked, "Untouched resources."—Kathlene B. Winter, in World Outlook.

A Brilliant Career.

Unusual interest attached to the conferring at the University of Toronto convocation, of the degree of Doctor of Public Health upon Lt.-Col. George Nasmith, director of the civic laboratories, Toronto. Lt.-Col. Nasmith, who returned from service in France, where he was in charge of the work of safeguarding the health of a British army corps, completed the writing of his examinations in April, and is understood to have passed brilliantly. It has meant a lot of hard plugging, inasmuch as he has also, since his return, written a valuable book as to the army sanitation work. Lt.-Col. Nasmith is now entitled to the very distinctive letters, C.M.G., M.A., Ph.D., D.Sc. (honorary degree, conferred a year ago), and D.P.H. He is 40 years of age, born and educated in Toronto, and graduated from the University in 1900.

An Historic Farm.

In 1812-15, when there was a brush with the Americans, the priests of the Quebec seminary gave over some farm land for the training of French-Canadian young men. More than a century later, the priests of this same seminary offered this self-same farm, at Maiberets, on the Beauport shore, to the military for the training of young men who will join the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, organized under Major Paquet for college boys and Laval students. Among the recruits is Eugene Caoquette, a nephew of Archbishop Mathieu.

Incorrigible.

At a certain college it is against the rules for male students to visit the "resident lady boarders." One day a student was caught in the act and brought before the headmaster, who said: "Well, Mr. Blank, the penalty for the first offence is $1, for the second $2.50, for the third $5 and so on up to $50."

"And what would a season ticket cost?" enquired the culprit.

War Trophies of Empire

THROUGHOUT all ages war trophies have been regarded as the fit appurtenances of a successful campaign. In Roman times the captives themselves took part in the triumph, and the exhibition of trophies was part of the festival that celebrated victory. Today our ideas have changed; captives, so far as the Allies are concerned, are honorably treated and not made part of a "show"; but the public interest in the captured machines and actual material of war remains unabated. Londoners are just as keen to see the German guns at the Imperial War Exhibition as were the Romans centuries ago to view the captured British war chariots. Apart from all the wonderful mechanism of war, as manifested in weapons, airplanes and the thousand and one implements and missiles of warfare, this exhibition is a marvelous advance upon all war collections and military museums of the past, by virtue of its marvellous photographs, writes Capt. H. B. C. Pollard from London, as reported in the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. The photographs which line the walls are vast enlargements some 20 feet long, and the figures are life-size. They have been taken in the very press of action, and are not mere poses collected in safety miles behind the lines.

The Canadian, New Zealand and Australian authorities have all collaborated with the Imperial War Museum management; War Office Admiralty and Air Ministry, all have contributed their finest photographs and most interesting trophies of the war, so that the whole display is genuinely representative of the nation. But even more interesting than the exhibits was the crowd of spectators that attended Lord French's opening of the exhibition a few days ago. The audience was indeed representative of Great Britain and the Empire. Soldiers, of course, predominated, and they came from all the corners of the earth. This khaki element was not there to grace a society function, but was keen to review old scenes and refresh old memories. The audience walked and moved stiffly with the sore restraint born of wounds and the rheumatic mists of the Flanders lowlands. The mechanisms of war that attracted the civilian element were familiar to them and weighed but little with them in comparison with the scale models of battlefields.

Round the model of the city of Ypres both khaki and the older folk who proudly bore their mourning garments were thickly gathered. The scale of the model was large enough to show a tree the size of a match, a window in a ruined house, and almost every detail. Men pointed reminiscently to miniature ruins that marked the sites of dugouts, shelters, or were even billets in the early days. The soldiers, too, came in for a great deal of quiet cross-examination from the poor black-clad parents. "Where was Sanctuary Wood?" "Please," asked an old lady plaintively, "can you show me which is the Menin road?" "Englishmen, Canadians, all ranks from general to subaltern, were swift and soft-spoken in their explanations; keen to expound and knowledgeable in sympathy, for they, too, had left memories of sacrifice in the city of the dead.

There was somehow more than a bond of chance-met acquaintanceship about the exhibition. The trophies were too poignant, too intimate—the audience too acutely "en rapport." People who in the ordinary way would not have spoken a word to one another felt the implicit but silent partnership that these battered relics conferred upon them, and somehow or other as soon as the opening speeches were over little groups were going round. Here a New Zealander was convoying a group of English ladies, there an Australian was talking halting French to distinguished visitors. Khaki was telling its personal reminiscences of Vimy Ridge and the Hutte de Warlencourt. Machine-guns, snipers' marks, trench mortars and what not came in for a personal explanation, and all social differences were laid aside.

The Allies and all that the alliance means found expression in the little case that held relics of impregnable Verdun, presented by its commandant. The board that carried the motto of the troops, "Ils ne passeront pas" — a simple signboard, meant more to the visitors that a mere museum exhibit. British and French alike, we know what Verdun meant, and the memory of its immortal glory transformed that simple case of exhibits into a radiant shrine. So it is with all things in this first temporary exhibition of the Imperial War Museum. The objects all speak of heroism, endurance and self-sacrifice. Many of the exhibits are made all or in part by women's labor patriotically and ungrudgingly given, and all bespeak the national will to conquer and to achieve a lasting and victorious peace. These models, too, made by wounded men, the shells and engines made by women's labor, are no less trophies of war than are the shattered gondolas of Zeppelins or the mortars and field guns captured from the enemy.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

CONSIDERABLE ACTIVITY DEVELOPS IN THE AMIENS SECTOR

The Kaiser Accepts the Foreign Minister's Resignation

SURPLUS FOOD SUPPLIES FROM CANADA AND STATES SAVED THE SITUATION

Hon. Col. Blondin Returns Home Thoroughly Convinced of An Ultimate Allied Victory.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MONTREAL, July 10.—Hon. Col. Blondin, after visiting England, France and Italy, returns home thoroughly convinced of an ultimate Allied victory on all fronts, and his first words on return were warm thanks to the English-speaking people who gave his battalion such a hearty send-off when he left for the other side. There can be no reasonable doubt touching Colonel Blondin's continuance in the ministry. His reply to a question on that point being: "I only know what the London Press has to say about it. English journalists are, I suppose, as reliable and well informed as you usually are here in Canada, and you know what to infer from their statements." Without going into details, Mr. Blondin said the Allied resources both on land and sea are practically inexhaustible, and their morale leaves no doubt of absolute victory.

Submarine Warfare.

"The engines of defense of the navy against submarines and mines are wonderful, and they no longer constitute a formidable danger to sailing ships. I can safely say that the Allied peoples subsisted the whole of last year out of the surplus food supplies sent over by Canada and the United States, thanks to the fine spirit in which the countries accepted the rationing of food and their successful endeavour to increase production." Colonel Blondin says that thanks to the energy of England and France the Italian front is now secure. The cry came from over the Alps for men and coal, and the Canadian Minister beheld trains filled with English coal being rushed over the French railways at the rate of one trainload every five minutes. The situation, however, is so well in hand that most of the British and French soldiers rushed so promptly to the Piave have returned to the western front and no further danger is apprehended from that quarter. Mr. Blondin was pleased of course with the changed feeling now prevailing in his native Quebec, although he knowing his compatriots, was by no means surprised. He never, for instance, entertained doubt whatever as to the loyalty, bravery and chivalrous spirit of the race, yet he was very pleased to hear people high up in authority in France saying that the Canadians fought like lions and like Frenchmen.

He said that the 22nd French-Canadian Battalion is now classed as "shock" troops, and fully maintain their reputation as "one of the best among the very best." Mr. Blondin says that French-Canadians are to be found in every regiment of the Dominion, and have made a great name for themselves as gentlemen and soldiers. He has no doubt that Canadians of all races will return to Canada with a better and broader conception of Canadian nationhood.

Asked as to Papal neutrality, Mr. Blondin said that his observations were satisfactory as a Roman Catholic, although all must admit "that we have been placed in a false position by German propaganda." The Pope, he adds, is absolutely neu- Pope, he added is absolutely neu- the Pontiff is an Italian patriot."

Mr. Blondin will go to Ottawa at an early date.

No Change in Strike Situation

The Prospect is Not Regarded As Optimistic.

MONTREAL, July 10.—There was no improvement to-day in the railway situation of railway employees' dispute with the companies regarding wage schedules, and there were no meetings between the parties to-day. The men's leaders state that no compromise will be given, and the railway companies, through the Railway War Board, have made no offer of settlement. It is generally thought here that the prospect is not at all optimistic.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, July 10.—Premier Lloyd George, speaking at a dinner given by the House of Commons in honour of Dr. J. H. Jowett, declared he is more confident of victory than ever. "One of the latest reasons for this confidence is the impression made upon me by American troops I saw in France," he said. "They are superb both as regards material and training, and the way they have borne themselves in battle."

They have been producing for the past four weeks, and Mr. Rightmyer expects two weeks more of good picking. As much as 225 boxes have been picked at one time.

One of the kinds that Mr. Rightmyer likes the best is the Parson Beauty, which is really a canning berry and very firm.

THE MISSION TO RUSSIA

Russia Must be United Within Herself—Resources Must Be Organized.

A DIFFICULT TASK

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, July 10.—All the Allies to-day are scrambling for generous representation on the propaganda-police force which will accompany the American-Allied economic mission to aid Russia. How to divide the apportionment and keep peace and contentment in the international family is one of the big problems President Wilson and his advisers are now disentangling. Britain wants to share equally, France realizes that she and America are perhaps the best liked by the Russians. Japan says she ought to be heavily represented as one of the most interested of neighbours. Thus goes the friendly discussion, but the settlement of the basis of representation offers really a complicated problem. The adjustments and explanations thereof must be made without injury to international feeling — and then a national pride and what approaches jealousies of such a family are intricately balanced.

Russia Must Be United.

The whole problem is authoritatively analyzed thus—Russia must be united within herself. Then she must be united against the Germans. The armed force accompanying the mission will take the place of propaganda which has failed because of the fact that many Russians do not read. It will be the business of the propaganda-police to exemplify and teach the aims of the Entente to inspire the Russians to unite among themselves and get order out of disorder. Once organized they must be inspired to unite against Germany, and re-establish an eastern frontier unity. Without supplies it is regarded useless. Hence the mission must help establish supplies and this means the construction of ordnance factories, the reorganization of agriculture, and so on. It appears a long task, but if it can succeed, it cheats Germany of her spoils and gives Russia fresh upstanding place among the nations.

Another Yacht Reaches Peterboro Via Trent Canal

Nine-Ton Boat Owned by a Toronto Contractor Docked at Wolfe Street Wharf To-day.

To-day at noon the yacht "Traumerie" quietly dropped its anchor in the bay at the George street wharf. It is a boat of nine tons, owned by Mr. J. W. Commeford, an electrical contractor, of Toronto. On board beside the owner, is his wife and daughter, and a year-old son. They left Toronto at 2 p.m., on Sunday, and went down the lake with a heavy sou'wester blowing. They left Trenton on Monday afternoon, and anchored in the Otonabee this morning. This afternoon they are leaving for the Kawartha Lakes, and will eventually go to Barrie Mr. Commeford is honorary president of the National Yacht and Skiff Club. He says that the "Traumerie" is the 36th boat that he has owned. It is a fine boat, fitted up with every convenience, self-starting and lighting from the bridge, seaflood, gasoline tank, and a 65 h. p. engine Since leaving Toronto they have consumed 120 gallons of gasoline. While in the Murray canal, Pdince Edward County, the "Traumerie" passed the "Amorita," which left here on Saturday afternoon.

The "Traumerie," which is named after a famous musical comedy, was built at a cost of $8500 and is a comparatively new boat. She can travel at the rate of 12½ miles an hour, but is usually run at 9 miles an hour. After visiting Orillia and Barrie, the boat will return through the Otonabee on its way to Toronto.

Von Kuehlmann Has Resigned

Admiral Von Hintze May Succeed as Foreign Minister of Germany—A Tricky Diplomat.

WAS CHASED HOME

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.— The resignation of Foreign Minister Von Kuehlmann, which is finally confirmed, is interpreted as a pan-German victory. This view is strengthened by the report that Admiral Von Hintze will succeed Von Kuehlmann, as he is not only close to the Kaiser, but is a friend and supporter of Von Tirpitz and Admiral Schroeder, leaders of the Belgian annexationists. However, it is considered that a pan-German Foreign Minister is not so dangerous to the allies as one of the Von Kuehlmann type, who masked Germany's plans of conquest under continual tricky peace offensives, giving allied pacifists debating material.

History of Von Hintze.

London newspapers devote considerable space to the discussion of Von Hintze's history. He is generally characterized as the most notorious master of intrigue in the German diplomatic service.

Von Hintze's activities in China first brought him international notoriety. His behaviour there was so scandalous that he was recalled and sent to Mexico. He was German minister in the latter country during Huerta's regime. He was implicated in the plot to furnish Huerta with German arms during the United States embargo. When the war broke out Von Hintze returned to Germany disguised as an Englishman travelling through the United tSates, England and Holland. He was sent to China as minister again in 1916, travelling through the United States once more. After China broke off diplomatic relations with Germany, Von Hintze was sent to Christiana, where he was involved in last summer's plot in Norway to smuggle bombs to America for the purpose of blowing up allied merchantmen.

ESTATE OF JAMES STEWART LEFT TO NEPHEWS IN ENG.

By the will of the late James Stewart, who died on Saturday, July 6th, at his home at 240 McDonnel street, his property is bequeathed to two nephews who will share it equally. They are Rev. Charles Stewart Douglas, Curate of St. Oswald's church, Bradford, England, and James Douglas, 22 Kimberley street, Hollinwood, Lancashire.

Mr. Stewart was an old resident of this district He was born in 1835, at Galtondale, Haugh, England, the son of Lieutenant Charles Stewart of the Royal Navy. Coming to Canada, he lived at Young's Point for many years. In fact 55 years ago he carried on a general store business. Eventually he decided to return to Scotland, and when leaving Young's Point for this voyage was presented with an address and a gold watch by the villagers as a mark of their esteem and respect. Scotland's charms, however, failed to hold him, and he came back to Young's Point. He sold his store to W. J. Young, and to-day Mr. Edward Young owns it.

Mr. Stewart moved to Peterboro, and had lived here in retirement until his death. He made few but staunch friends, and they were nearly all of the departing generation, including the late Robert Innes, George Edmison and others. He was a member of the Masonic order, and was held in high respect by all those who knew him.

His wife predeceased him some years ago, and Mr. Stewart had lived with his sister-in-law, Miss Catharine Finlason, who died on June 27, in her 81st year. Only eight days separated them in death, and both passed away rather suddenly.

Austria Said to Have Given Up the Idea of Revenge for Recent Defeat.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Hun Soldiers Refuse to Obey Their Officers

Discipline in the German Army Is Seriously Shaken Says Von Der Marwitz.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 10.—"Discipline, which is the keystone of our army is seriously shaken," General Von Der Marwitz, Commander of the German second army which holds the lines astride the Somme east of Amiens, thus begins his most recent order of the day, insisting that full punishment be dealt out to unruly spirits. "I cannot permit commanders to take upon themselves to shield officers, under-officers or men, guilty of breaches of discipline and military regulations, or inflict upon them disciplinary penalties of too mild a nature."

A few days before this Von Der Marwitz issued another order which began this way: "Cases of soldiers openly refusing to obey orders are increasing to an alarming extent."

Kerensky is Not in Favour

Former Premier is Discredited in the Political Camps of Russia —The Russian Situation.

A DARING PLOT

(United Press Correspondent)

STOCKHOLM, July 10.—The assassination of Ambassador Mirbach, was only the first step in a plot by the Russian terrorists to wipe out the whole German military clique. Before I left Petrograd I heard of (deleted), but was unable to verify —to kill Mirbach and then send terrorists into Germany to kill the Kaiser, Ludendorff, Hindenburg and Kuehlmann. This plot appeared so improbable at the time I first learned of it that it seemed, but the wildest of dreams—and does yet, but Mirbach has been killed.

Closely identified with this plot are said to have been M. Kamkoff, M. Karelin, M. Steinberg and Mme. Spiridonova, all leaders of the social revolutionaries of the left. Kamoff is a recent conversation with Bolshevik leaders was warned to quit his agitation against Premier Lenine. "We are prepared to finish you before you touch us."

Definite Alliance.

Kamloff is reported as replying that members of the left inside government have learned of a definite alliance between Bolsheviki and Germany against internal exploitations and the Entente. The defense of Bolsheviki by German newspapers in connection with Mirbach's murder tends to prove much an alliance. A concrete union of both the rightists and the lefters with Memsheviki against Bolsheviki is now to be expected.

Kerensky's visit to Count Isvalsky in Paris, has excited a stirring attack on former Premier in Russian newspapers. They demand to know in whose name Kerensky is acting abroad. Kerensky is not taken seriously in Russia and is discredited in all political camps.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Enemy Attacks Were Repulsed—Considerable Activity Developed This Morning.

SUCCESSFUL RAIDS

LONDON (Official), July 10. — Considerable activity was developed this morning by the German artillery and machine guns in the region east of Amiens from the vicinity of Villers-Bretonneux to the Ancre.

The Germans delivered local attacks in the Villers-Bretonneux area but these were repulsed. On the Flanders front the British carried out an operation in the vicinity of Merris, northeast of Nieppe Wood by means of which the line was advanced a short distance and prisoners were taken.

THE STATEMENT READS.

Increased hostile artillery activity early last night east of Villers-Bretonneux was followed by local attacks which were repulsed. Early this morning the enemy's artillery and machine guns developed considerable activity from the vicinity of Villers-Bretonneux to the Ancre. A hostile raiding party was driven off yesterday afternoon south of Bucquoy. During the night we advanced our line a short distance by successful local operation in the neighbourhood of Merris and captured several prisoners and machine guns.

THE WEATHER

The rainfall of yesterday was again heavy, totalling .76 of an inch, though it is not needed in this particular district. The morning bulletin issued by the Toronto Observatory says: "The area of low pressure which was south of Halifax yesterday has taken an almost unprecedented course westward to the Ottawa Valley, and the attendant rains have spread over a large part of Ontario. The weather continues fine in the Western Provinces, and was fairly warm yesterday, but the temperature was unusually low during the night in Manitoba and Saskatchewan."—W P.

THE NEXT DRIVE.

All news from the western front, both official and unofficial, seems to agree that a new and formidable German drive is imminent. The state of relative calm, broken only by successful local actions of a nibbling nature by French, British and American troops, seems likely to disappear in the near future and to be replaced by a desperate German effort to wrest a decision from the allied armies. Correspondents agree that the stage is set for the next blow, but the experts differ in their conjectures as to the scene of Von Hindenburg's next effort. One American war correspondent is inclined to the view that the objective of the coming offensive will be to reach Abbeville, and by so doing either to separate the French and British or to force the British line to fall back on the Somme, giving up the Channel ports and Paris. Wherever it comes, the blow should find the allies in better shape than before to meet the onslaughts of Von Hindenburg's shock divisions. Time has been fighting for the allies; the delay since the last German smash has been invaluable in allowing the arrival of hundreds of thousands of fresh troops from the United States and from England, and the German High Command is not likely to find the road to Paris or to the Chanel ports any easier than on the occasion of other offensives.

HEROIC CONDUCT.

That there need be no fear of the manner in which the drafted men of Canada's army will conduct themselves when they reach the firing line was amply demonstrated by the behaviour of the troops on board the wrecked transport "City of Vienna." Although the steamship struck a rock in the midst of a blinding rain storm, and with an exceedingly high sea running, there was not the slightest sign of panic or confusion. "It was wonderful to see the soldiers keep their allotted positions," says Lieut.-Col. Leprohon, who was in command of the troops on board. There was not the least confusion and the men cheered and sang for four hours." A large number of the soldiers whose gallant conduct in the face of great peril, has been commented on by those familiar with the action, were men recently brought into the army through the draft. Their coolness and courage under the trying circumstances is a guarantee that Canada has no need to worry over the quality of reinforcements that are being sent over.

Peterborough people will not be surprised to hear that Capt. E. R. Hughes, M.C., who was an officer of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons before the war, and who commanded the Apsley platoon in the 93rd Battalion, afterwards winning the Military Cross in France, where he was three times wounded, distinguished himself by his conduct on this occasion. Capt. Hughes was adjutant on board the transport, and he, with Lieut.-Col. Leprohon, was the last to leave the "City of Vienna." A press despatch from Halifax says: "Col. Leprohon and Capt. Hughes, adjutant of the troops, were the last to leave the ship. The Colonel had the starboard ladder and Capt. Hughes the port side. Both bravely put all the men over the top before they would themselves descend."

Incidentally there is general criticism of the action of the censor in suppressing for a week all reference to the accident. Many distressing rumours as to the loss of a Canadian transport with great loss of life went the rounds as a result, and there does not seem any adequate reason why the simple story of what had happened should not have been given out immediately.

"NOTHING SHORT OF A CRIME."

From time to time the Examiner has endeavoured to point out the need of more adequate pensions for soldiers and of changes in the method of administering the system now in existence. The case of Pte. Tarrington, formerly of the 21st Battalion, whose death a year ago after his return from the front has left his widow and eight children destitute because the husband was awarded no pension, was referred to in these columns some months ago, and the refusal of the Pension Board to make any allowance to Pte. Tarrington's relatives has brought the matter again prominently before the public.

A thorough shake-up in the pension system would seem to be needed, and in this connection the criticism of present methods made by Donald Sutherland, M.P. of Woodstock, is timely and important. Mr. Sutherland, writing to the press in Woodstock, in regard to a case that has come into prominence in that city, says:

"I do not know very much as to the merits of this particular case, but my experience in many other cases and while a member of the special committee of the House of Commons on matters relating to pensions and the Pensions Commission, has been sufficient to convince me that the administration of pensions by the Commission is in many instances nothing short of a crime against the men who have suffered disabilities in the service during the war and demands the immediate attention of the Government."

This condemnation of existing conditions will be endorsed by the hundreds of returned soldiers in Peterborough, who have learned to realize that Mr. Sutherland's criticism is only too well founded on facts.

POSTMEN'S SALARIES.

The 1918 session at Ottawa, while demonstrating in many ways the excellence of Canada's new Government, was marred by a tendency to substitute orders-in-Council for the deliberations of a free Parliament, and, towards the last of the session, measures were hurried through the two Houses at a rate which gave no chance for proper scrutiny, says the Toronto Star. The elimination of parliamentary discussion is dangerous, both as a matter of principle and because a certain safety attaches to the "threshing out" of public questions by a large body of men. Errors and oversights are detected during debate which slip through unnoticed if legislation is railroaded.

Hon. W. S. Fielding very properly protested when the post-office estimates were thrust before Parliament on the last day of the session, without any previous opportunity to discuss them having been afforded. Parliament had to swallow them whole if it wished to prorogue on schedule time, so swallow them it did. Among other things, it passed an increase in wages to the outside service, and officials of the Post-office Department are now trying to find out what this increase involves. In the meantime Toronto's postmen are without the bonus which they thought had been granted them, and are given the cold comfort from Ottawa that under one interpretation of the clause passed by Parliament some of them may actually find their wages reduced.

Previous to this year the posties were given a war bonus of $100. The 1918 increase, which everybody presumed was additional, gave a bonus of $150 to a married mail carrier, but at the same time cut off any regular increase to which he might be entitled since April 1st by virtue of completing a certain number of years' service and passing into a higher grade. It is now suggested, according to an Ottawa despatch, that the new bonus wipes out the old one, and that some carriers must forfeit not only the $100 per year, but 25 cents per day increase which they would have received in the ordinary course of events. In other words, they lose $178.25 and gain $150.

This was certainly not the intention of Parliament; and the Government should not hesitate to adopt such an interpretation of the 1918 bonus as will make it additional to other bonuses, so that a faithful class of Federal employees will not be further deprived of the higher pay to which they are undoubtedly entitled.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Hun U-boat commanders are not showing any improvement. The latest pirate feat of sinking a Norwegian steamer and setting the crew adrift in small boats in mid-Atlantic is up to the usual standard of the ruthless murderers who man His Germanic Majesty's slaughter craft.

Enemy aliens in Britain are to be interned. Similar action in Canada would meet with a popular reception.

The cool spring and the lack of a "hot spell" in the early summer has resulted in a scarcity of garden pests. The rose leaves are well formed and unpunctured. The "Helping to Rebuild Europe's Society" has a worthy motive, but why squander time and effort and money on such a project now? THE VEST.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

This is not the first time the vest has been attacked. Its enemies have called it a survival of the antique, and a relic of the age of the superfluous. The fact that it is a descendant of the cuirass of chivalry doesn't protect it. The vest or waistcoat may have glorified a Brummel or dominated a Weller, or added a specialized dignity to the clergy, but this makes no appeal to the conserving iconoclast.

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Inspector G. W. Powell Receives an Increase in Salary—List of Accounts Passed—The Work of the Society—Satisfactory Conditions at the Children's Shelter.

The Children's Aid Society held their monthly meeting last night, when the usual business was discussed. Those present were Rev. Dougald Brown, Chief D. Thompson, Dr. Middleton, John Edgar, Inspector G. W. Powell, Mrs. W. Gibbs, Mrs. Evans, Joseph Wearing, and Mr. E. A. Peck, who occupied the chair.

FIRST YEAR'S WORK.

Inspector Powell said that he had just completed his first year's work, and he hoped that his work had been satisfactory. He asked for a raise of $100 per annum, saying that his present salary of $800 was insufficient.

Practically all the members of the Board agreed that the request should be granted.

Chief Thompson moved that Mr. Powell's salary of $800 be augmented to the extent of $100, and also that Mrs. Reid, the matron of the Shelter, be granted an increase of $100. This will bring her salary up to $650.

"The Home has never been in better condition than it is to-day," declared the Chief.

The motion was seconded by Rev. D. Brown, and carried.

ACCOUNTS PRESENTED.

The following accounts were presented by Mrs. W. Gibbs and were ordered to be paid:

Light account	$1.65
Water account	.67
Alexander and Miller	8.24
Mrs. Stocker	.50
Alex. Gordon, butcher	10.15
Bert Hunter	16.22
G. W. Powell	12.50
Wilfred Brown	8.00
Mrs. Reid	4.50
Mrs. Bulmer	4.50
Telephone account	6.45
	$73.48

MONTHLY REPORT.

In his monthly report Mr Powell informed the Board that there were now 13 children in the Shelter during last month. Three of these are eligible to go out. Five applications for children have been received and 3 complaints made. Altogether six investigations were made and 8 places visited. Only four were hailed before the police court.

Mr. Powell, who was at the provincial meeting of the Society held in Toronto in the month of May, presented some interesting statistics to the Board, showing the work that is being done in Ontario. The work of the local Society was well to the fore as shown by the different reports that were presented.

A SUMMARY.

The department has statutory power to supervise the work of the Societies. In 1915, twenty-nine Societies reported work affecting the interests of 5,100 children. The Societies reported 848 children placed in family homes. Forty Societies reported expenditures of $85,000. The Provincial Government appropriates $25,000 yearly for the work of the department, making a total expenditure of $110,000 for the Department and Societies in that year.

Incidentally Mr. Powell mentioned that of his new salary of $900 a year, the Government pays $480 a year, the local Society only paying $420 per annum.

It was also decided to loan the C. A. S. boxes to the ladies on Saturday in aid of the Italian Red Cross for a Tag Day. It was felt that the Italians have certainly done their share on the Piave River and Asiago Plateau.

It was also decided to hold a meeting in August, which is usually "meetingless," as it was felt that the increasing volume of business should be attended to.

THE DOCTORS' PROPAGANDA

For Twenty-five years they have Sought to Destroy the Use of Package Medicines and to Obtain a Monopoly for Themselves

Propaganda is not a popular word. It has been associated so much with the underhanded work of Germany that it has come to be disliked.

But since the doctors working through their organisation known as the American Medical Association send out bulletins headed, "The Propaganda for Reform Department" we must be right in speaking of their work as a propaganda.

Now what is the reform they are so anxious to bring about? A reform in the amount of their bills to make them conform to services rendered rather than the size of the patient's bank account? Oh No, not that.

A reform to only allow capable surgeons to perform operations? Not that.

A reform to stop the fee-splitting plan whereby the physician turns the patient over to the operating surgeon and shares in the handsome reward.

No, But a reform to prevent people from using their own common sense in the selection of home treatments for disease.

These doctors have figured out just how many millions of dollars are spent each year for proprietory medicines and divided this by the number of doctors and arrive at the conclusion that they are out of pocket just that much.

"Why not get together and agitate for legislation that will give us a monopoly of the medicine business", they said.

Then they began the great work of reform.

Their propaganda has not been such as to throw credit on any class of men. The men they have employed to go about the country lecturing against package medicines have not been above criticism. But you must know that it is not the big capable busy physician who inspires or encourages such work, but rather the incompetents who have few patients and have difficulty in making an honest living.

What right has any man or any association of men to prevent you from using such tried and proven medicines as for example, the family medicines of Dr. A. W. Chase?

And yet this is the aim of this propaganda. For about twenty-five years this work has been going on throughout the United States and at one time attracted considerable attention through the medium of such publications as the "Ladies Home Journal" and "Colliers". During this 25 years the manufacture of package medicines has increased 214 per cent., according to the United States census. Hence it would appear that the propaganda has only tended to emphasize the merits of many well known medicines and as a result of the methods used has proven a boomerang to the doctors who would interfere with the rights of the people by establishing a monopoly in medicines.

Some medicines may be open to criticism just as are some doctors, but the great majority of package medicines are only put on the market after they have proven their merit in many hundreds of cases.

No one questions the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, Ointment or Nerve Food or other medicines. Not even the doctors. Why then should any man be questioned the right to buy and use such medicines when required? There is only one answer and that is because their use does not tend to increase the bank accounts of the medical men.

It may be that there are too many doctors sent to Parliament. But, however that may be, it is very essential that the rights of the people be defended. It is most important at this time because this propaganda of the American Medical Association is being extended into Canada.

While we are fighting against Prussianism abroad, it is well for us to see to it that no laws are put in the Statute Books here to give a monopoly to the doctors and which would take away the freedom of every man and woman to purchase such medicines as they know to be of merit and value.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted In Greater Production Campaign.

TAKING CARE OF YOUR PEAS.

Every amateur gardener is particularly proud when he manages to raise a good crop of peas. But this is not always the easiest thing in the world, for he has a virulent enemy to contend with in the shape of the pea aphid. This is a very deceptive enemy to contend with for it is pea green in colour and is hard to detect. The aphids cluster on the growing tips and leaves and suck the strength out of the plants. They multiply very quickly and unless they are attended to as soon as they appear, they are difficult to handle.

As soon as the aphids are discovered spray with nicotine sulphate—two teaspoonfuls to one gallon of water, with half an ounce of laundry or other soap dissolved in it. The spray must hit the aphids in order to be effective In a few hours the aphids will die if the spray is going to kill them. After a day or two spray again if any aphids are left, so as to clear the plants of them as soon as possible.

Mildew is another destructive natural force among peas. It shows as a white coating over the leaves and pods, and ruins the crop. As soon as it appears dust the plants with sulphur and repeat every few days as long as the disease lasts. Another remedy is to spray with Bordeaux mixture every ten days until the mildew disappears

2,570,455 WAR POLICIES

General Pershing Cables That 90 Per Cent. of His Army is Insured.

WASHINGTON,—General Pershing has cabled to Secretary McAdoo that more than 90 per cent of the men in his expedition have been insured under the Federal insurance plan.

"All ranks," said General Pershing's message, "of the American expeditionary forces appreciate deeply the generous measure the Government has taken to provide insurance, for their families, in proof of which more than 90 per cent. of the men have taken out insurance. To wisely provision for their loved ones heartens our men and strengthens the bonds that unite the army and people in our strong determination to triumph in our most religious cause."

The Treasury Department announced tonight that a record-breaking rush of applications in the last seven days which brought in more than $1,000,000,000 of insurance, probably would increase the percentage of American soldiers insured to 95. The total amount of insurance on the books of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance up to the close of business June 8, was $21,565,699,000. This represents 2,570,455 policies. The average amount applied for, which is steadily increasing is now $8,387.

Many American regiments both overseas and in the United States, have 100 per cent. insurance recd. In some commands every officer and man is insured for the full $10,000. Commanding officers are particularly proud of these records for they feel that the morale of their men is thus raised to the highest possible level.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:
The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

The need for extensive canning this year can scarcely be over-emphasized. All our fruit and vegetables must be used to the best advantage. The war gardeners have done their part. Now the housekeepers must do theirs.

Every assistance is being given them through the press, and no intelligent woman has the excuse that she does not know how to can or dry or make jam. She is given the clearest and simplest directions.

A five-cent booklet issued by the Food Board deals with the sugar situation and gives the most up-to-date "conservation" methods of taking care of the fruit and vegetable crops.

It is authoritative and the woman who follows it will know that she is doing her patriotic duty and that the methods advocated are those best suited to meet the need of the hour.

AN EXTINCT TRADE.

The Old-Time Hatter Has Given Way to the Factory.

Among the old domestic trades that the great factory has made unprofitable is that of the hatter. The old-time hatter usually made wool hats, but occasionally he made a beaver to order. With an equipment that cost very little, he could turn the raw wool or fur into a hat that looked fairly well—and that "lasted forever."

The tools of his trade were two open kettles, a shrinking board and a rolling pin, a chopping knife and a fur trimmer, balances, hat blocks, and a hatter's bow.

After he had washed and weighed the wool, a half-pound to a hat, he chopped it very fine, and "cut" it again and again with the bowstring. The bow was a light, round piece of wood two inches thick with pieces fastened at the ends, to which the catgut string was attached, so that it crudely resembled a huge fiddle bow. A rope was tied to the balancing point of the bow and passed up over a joist, so that the bow swung over the cutting table like the sword of Damocles.

When the chopped wool lay ready on the table under the bow, the hatter would grasp the bow as if he were about to discharge an arrow, and give it a rocking motion. Then, with a wooden pin much like those our grandmothers used to turn their spinning wheels, he twanged the catgut string loudly and at the same time let it strike the pile of wool. The process, several times repeated, made the wool as light and fluffy as down.

Next he took enough wool to make one hat, and divided and shaped it into two triangular masses, which were called patterns. These patterns he placed carefully one over the other, heated them steaming hot, and by deft manipulation worked the edges together into a seamless weld. The hat was then alternately dipped in warm water and rolled to shrink it, almost exactly as a woman rolls dough. That process made it a finished "bonnet," and the hatter set it out to dry. It looked very much like a miniature tent. When the bonnets were dry, the workman fitted them on the blocks for shaping and dyeing. The hats were boiled several hours in a dye of logwood and sumac, dressed with pumice, and carefully ironed. Then they were ready for sale. A good hatter could make 12 hats in a week.

Public Elopements.

The Bulgarian is perhaps the most simple minded and industrious peasant in Europe, and, paradoxical as it may appear, his standard of morality is extremely high, although elopements are more numerous than in any other country. But these are generally innocent affairs, being simply the device of young couples to get married without the expense a regular Bulgarian wedding entails. In most cases not only is the consent of both parents obtained, but all friends are informed and assemble outside the bride's house to witness the elopement.

The Black Watch.

In 1730 six companies of Highlanders were raised for the protection of Edinburgh, and the following year were consolidated into a regular regiment, the Highland regiment, and were numbered the Forty-second. On becoming amalgamated the colors on their tartans were extracted, leaving only the dark green ground as a tartan, and from this they took the title of the "Black Watch."—New York American.

DOG KILLED POULTRY.

ANIMAL WITH RABIES REPORTED IN ENNISMORE—WAS KILLED.

A mad dog in Ennismore last night destroyed the owner's flocks of turkeys and hens, according to a report received this afternoon. The fowl were found dead on the farm near O'Reilly's school house, and the dog was later shot in a barn nearly a mile distant.

Canadian Money Discounted in Detroit

Canadian Dollar Bill Only Worth 97c in That City.

WINDSOR, July 9.—From two to three per cent. discount on Canadian currency is being charged in Detroit at present, and bankers say the spread will widen, perhaps to five per cent., due to the difference in the trade balance between the two countries.

In other words, a Canadian one-dollar bill is worthy only 97 cents in Detroit, while a United States bill of similar denomination in Windsor is credited at full value.

No Developments In Douro Affair

The Two Young Soldiers Were Accompanied by Their Sisters.

The soldiers who were held up by three masked men in Douro recently, were Percy Hockaday and Will Bullock. They were accompanied by their sisters, Miss Gertie Hockaday and Miss Edna Bullock. They were going toward Norwood, where the young men were to leave for Kingston. As reported last night the masked men appeared out of the dark, looked closely at them, and then withdrew, remarking that they had expected or were looking for someone else. There was no further information available to-day. Crown Attorney Wood stated that he was obtaining as full a report as possible from County Constable Moore. It is not known whether the authorities have any idea of the identity of the three men or not, but it is understood that Constable Moore has a little case of his own, apart from this incident, that he may investigate. It is largely a personal matter that may be followed up.

Boy of Fifteen Sentenced to Hang

Was Implicated in the Murder of Constable in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, July 10.—John Edward Stoike, 15 years old, yesterday was sentenced by Mr. Jusice Metcalfe to hang on September 27, for complicity in the murder of Constable Bernhard W. Snowden, in Rosenblat's hardware store on Main street, on the night of April 5 last.

Philip Johnson, one of the trio who were present on the night of the murder and robbery, has also been sentenced to hang on the same date for aiding and abetting in the carrying out of the murder. Frank Sullivan is now facing a chage of murder, also for the death of Constable Snowdon.

UTILITIES TRUCK GENTLY BUMPED

The Utilities Commission Truck No. 2, was bumped at the corner of Hunter and Queen streets this afternoon by one of the Peterboro Milk Products Limited trucks, driven by Norman Bradley. The milk truck was travelling east and according to the police, should have given the Utilities car the right of way. The damage was light, only a running board and a few minor bruises being apparent and Mr. Gillespie, it was said, agreed to pay for the repairs.

SUMMER FAIR IS POSTPONED

The Summer Fair which was to have been held this afternoon and evening at the home of His Honour Judge Huycke, has been postponed until Friday afternoon and evening next. The wet weather of the past few days has left the ground in poor condition for outdoor function such as garden parties, but a better brand of weather is anticipated for Friday.

ORBITS OF THE PLANETS.

Why They Are Eclipses and Cannot Become Perfect Circles.

Every ellipse has two foci. Kepler's second law is, "The orbits of all of the planets are ellipses, the sun being in one common focus of them all." All of the other foci are empty space. The eccentricities of orbits of all planets vary on account of the attraction of all the other planets making variations. Some are decreasing while others are increasing, but none can ever become exact circles since there are eight mutually disturbing planets.

That of the earth's orbit is now decreasing and, according to the French astronomer Leverrier, who took time to make elaborate mathematical researches in this part of astronomy, will continue to decrease during about 24,000 years, but will not vanish, making the earth's orbit an exact circle, and then will begin to increase.

The orbit of Venus now has the least eccentricity and is therefore nearer a true circle than any other orbit, but it cannot become a circle, one reason being the disturbance caused by the huge mass of the earth. One earth revolving around one sun, both trillions of miles away from any other disturbing, could traverse a true circle.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Gun Power at Waterloo.

As to gun power at the time of Waterloo, two facts of guidance: The British drill sergeants of the day taught recruits to hold their fire "until they could see the whites of the eyes of the enemy." That would make the best musketry range, I should say, about twenty-five yards. "Brown Bess" was not of much use beyond sixty yards, judging by all the evidence. As to big pieces, then, as now, naval guns were superior to field artillery, and Nelson loved to get in his broadsides at sixty yards! I believe that 600 yards was counted the limit of effective naval gun fire then. Field artillery range would be less, probably much less. The enormous increase in the effective range of guns since is due, first, to explosives with greater power and more controllable power; second, the invention of rifled barrels and breechloading, and, third, stronger alloys of metals.—Frank Fox in London Nation.

BAY RUM KILLED WHITBY MAN

WHITBY, July 9. — A coroner's jury this morning concluded its inquest on the death of John Francis Hill, aged fifty-two, who died here on Saturday as a result of drinking repeated doses of bay rum. Hill, who leaves a wife and six children, had purchased several bottles of the mixture upon the sale of which there is no restriction, and, according to the evidence, must have drunk several bottles, although warned that it was not for beverage purposes. The jury was empanelled by Coroner Dr. C. F. McGillivray, and the Crown Attorney, Col. J. E. Farewell, conducted a searching inquiry into the affair. No blame is attached to anyone. The jury in its verdict said:

"We beg to call the attention of the authorities to the prevalent use of bay rum as a beverage in substitute for liquor."

ON THE SOMME.

In memory of Signaller Phonse Bolin, who was killed at the Battle of the Somme. Written by his brother, Pte. Roy Bolin, Manitoba Regiment:

Where the rippling Somme is flowing
Through the blood-stained soil of France,
Lies a grave with naught to cheer it
Save the silvery moonbeams dance.
Within it lies the ashes,
Of a brother held so dear,
Whose spirit, young and noble,
Has fled this earthly sphere.
He was born to be a soldier,
And his country's call was heard,
Though loving ties were hard to break,
He buckled on the sword.
With a soul that knew no danger,
And a heart that knew no fear;
On the field of honour gave his life
For the cause we hold so dear.
There are thousands gone before him,
And there are thousands yet to come
Who ne'er will let the sword be sheathed,
Till France and Belgium's won.
Though he's left this earth forever,
Yet his memory still is bright
As when together down life's road,
We tread with hearts so light.
And we know that we will find him
At the last great bugle call.
In the ranks of those who served the best
The God who's over all.

MRS. W. WAUGH WAS DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED IN TRAFFIC ACCIDENT

Her Guest, Mrs. Bert Greenwood, of Whitby, Also Injured When George Street Car Struck Their Automobile at the McDonnel St. Corner

BOTH IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. W. Waugh, 556 Homewood avenue, and Mrs. Bert Greenwood, of Whitby, her guest, was seriously hurt in an automobile accident at the corner of McDonnel and and George streets last night at 7.35 o'clock. Mrs. Greenwood was at the wheel of Mr. Waugh's car. Mr. Waugh was also on the front seat and Mrs. Waugh was in the tonneau seat behind.

They were running east on McDonnel street, and as they were crossing George street were struck by Street Car No. 31 south bound. Mrs. Waugh was thrown out of the car and dragged on the pavement as the automobile was pushed along by the street car.

Mrs. Greenwood was stunned by a severe blow on the head, which inflicted an ugly cut behind her ear. Mr. Waugh was uninjured, but was slightly affected by the shock.

Both the ladies were removed to the Nicholls Hospital, where they are being attended by Doctors Neal and Moir. It was reported to-day that Mrs. Greenwood was progressing favourably and would be able to leave the hospital by Friday, but Mrs. Waugh is not out of danger. It was stated that the doctors had not finally determined what injuries she had sustained, but expected to conclude their examination this afternoon.

Mr. Waugh stated that Mrs. Greenwood was a good driver and has a car of her own. P. C. Wigg reported to Chief Thompson that the street car was in charge of Mr. A. Robinson, with Mr. Harry Mann, 192 Dublin street, motorman.

The McDonnel street corner on George street seems to be unfortunately prolific of accidents, which are usually more serious than the average.

Civic Wood Yard In Stratford

Coal Allotment 3,000 Tons Less Than Last Year

STRATFORD, July 9.—The city by-law for $15,000 for a civic woodyard has been approved by the Lieutenant-Governor, and will be given its third reading at next meeting. Ald. Ireland is going to Algonquin Park to investigate the Government's offer of wood, and will call at Kitchener and Guelph to learn their experiences.

Ald. Newman has received a statement putting Stratford's coal allotment at 29,961 tons. This is 3,000 les sthan last year, but is the same less than received in 1916. A conference is to be held with coal dealers Thursday night to decide on a plan of distribution.

LIEUT. FRED HUBBS RETURNS HOME.

Mr. Fred Hubbs has reached his home in Hastings after an absence of over two years. For several months he was a prisoner in Germany, but subsequently was permitted to proceed to Switzerland. To-morrow he will be the guest of Mr. R. B. Rogers on his farm near the city.

LAWN SOCIAL AT THE CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART A SUCCESS

For the first time the weather man seriously threatened the usual success of the annual social held by the congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart, but at the last moment relented just when the committees were about to resign themselves to a keen disappointment. So complete had been the arrangements that within a few minutes after six o'clock the booths bloomed as if there hadn't been rain in weeks, and the supper tables were quickly spread with war-time fare. And in the end the results were all that could have been desired in these uncertain and restricted times. Many citizens came from all parts of the city, having waited apparently impatiently for the clouds to pass. To the discouragements of rainy and chilly weather which the various committees faced with equanimity, was added the regrettable absence of the pastor of the church, Rev. J. J. O'Brien who was recently taken ill with tonsilitis. The leadership and support he had given the preparations for the social were assumed by Rev. J. V. McAuley of Ennismore, whose help and inspiration was invaluable to Rev. Father Gorman, curate of the church.

During the evening the 57th Regimental Band, under the auspices of Mr. Rupert Glidden, gave an enjoyable programme of concert selections. A little feature that added interest were the ascensions of coloured balloons, which were sent adrift by Mr. Peter Milloy and Mr. Will Grady. The fish pond, fancy booth and refreshment stands reported satisfactory business, and the auction sales, with Mr. E. Hurtubise as auctioneer, attracted many purchasers.

Not the least noticeable perfection in the arrangements was the service at the supper tables, which were more than sufficiently "manned" with a staff that precluded no delays. The workers in this department were as follows:

TRIBUTE TO KING IN HOUSE MOTION

Stability of Throne Bond of Imperial Unity, Says Premier.

LONDON, July 9.—In the House of Commons yesterday Premier Lloyd George moved a resolution congratulating King George and Queen Mary on the 25th anniversary of their wedding.

In a long speech the Premier paid tribute to the manner in which the King had "faced the gravest issues during a period in which the world has been devastated by the greatest hurricane that ever swept the surface of the globe.

"When ancient thrones are tottering and monarchs are being deprived of their sceptres in other lands," the Premier said, "the British throne has become more firmly established than ever on the only foundation that is possible, namely, the lasting affection and good-will of the people.

"The war has strengthened the bonds which unite our King and people. After a moment like this, the irisis of the war, the unity of the Empire means much, and in this respect the position won by the occupants of our throne is a matter of Imperial moment. The stability of the throne is essential to the strength of the Empire, for it is not merely a symbol, but a bond of unity."

FUEL CONTROL IDEA ABANDONED IN GUELPH

One Coal Dealer Would Not Abide By Instructions

GUELPH, July 9.—It now looks as if the Fuel Commission of the City Council will go out of business before getting a start. One of the local dealers will not consent to abide by the instructions from the commission to deliver only small quantities to customers until all have received some. His contention is based on the fact that the Dominion Fuel Controller allows 70 per cent. of the customer's normal supply to be delivered. Ontario Fuel Administrator Harris, at Toronto, has ruled that the commission cannot prevent the 70 per cent. being delivered. The commission decided that if this is so they might as well give up, as far as superintending delivery is concerned, and the fuel office at the City Hall will not be put into operation.

Mr. Pope promised to come to Peterborough shortly in an effort to attempt a settlement of the dispute that will be amicable to the owner and the members of the Association.

OTTAWA MAN HAS GAINED 27 POUNDS

Well Known Lumberman Is Surprised at Results From Tanlac

In speaking of the marvelous way in which Tanlac has relieved him of a long-standing case of stomach trouble, Allan Reaume, a well-known lumber expert who lives at 107 Echo Drive, Ottawa, said: "I was actually surprised at the way Tanlac took right hold of my trouble, for I gained twenty-seven pounds on it and am now in better health than I have been in years."

Mr. Reaume was for sixteen years employed as lumber buyer by W. & J. Sharples, lumber exporters of Quebec, and has an extensive acquaintance throughout Ontario and Quebec. He is now employed as head checker for the Peter Lyall & Sons, Construction Company in the erection of the new Parliament Buildings.

"I suffered terribly from stomach trouble and a general rundown condition of the system," continued Mr. Reaume, "which had been worrying me for about two months. I had no appetite and what little I did eat always soured and made trouble for me. I would bloat up so with gas that I was constantly belching it up and my stomach was painful all the time. I would have a heavy, mean feeling after meals, as if my food had formed a hard mass and never seemed to get any nourishment from what I ate. My nerves were in such bad shape that I could not rest well at night, but would get up in the mornings feeling just as miserable as when I went to bed. I felt tired and played out all the time, had no energy about me, I lost twenty-seven pounds and was feeling just about all in.

"I had read so much about Tanlac that at last I decided to try it. I have taken seven bottles so far and it has not only entirely relieved my stomach trouble, but since I started taking it I have regained all my lost weight. I have a hearty appetite now, can eat most anything and am never troubled with indigestion or gas on my stomach at all. My nerves are in fine shape now, I feel stronger and better in every way and it was nothing but Tanalc that put me on my feet again. Because of the good Tanlac has done me I have started my wife to taking it and I am sure it will fix her up like it has me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: You do not seem to grasp the reason why there is so much "criticism" of the Y.M.C.A.

1. It is not at all necessary that the Y. M. C. A. should run canteens.

Canteens are institutions provided under the Army Act, and they must be managed by the officers of the battalion, and these officers are responsible to the government.

2. The public contributes large sums and the soldiers in buying at the canteens provide large sums for certain people to spend in buying goods for the canteens. Where are these goods bought, from whom, and at what prices?

They amount to an immense sum and the wholesalers' profits may easily mount up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

3. Why is it that the canteen sales dwarf almost out of sight the whole of the rest of the work of the Y.M.C.A.?

Y.M.C.A. canteens are not necessary for the soldiers for the very sufficient reasons given in paragraph 1.

Yours,
A G.W.V.A. Man.

Dear Editor,— Just a word about teachers' salaries. Daily we notice want ads for teachers at a salary of $550 yearly, a mere pittance which no Normal trained teacher should accept. And it is only in our local schools we see such salaries offered. No wonder half the rural schools have been closed during the last year, or if not closed, filled by non-professional teachers, which is practically the same as being closed. I know whereof I speak, as I am an "ex-school marm," having taught for nine years, and now I have a teacher boarding with me, and she is only getting $550 per year. She works in a stuffy little school all day and her evenings are spent looking over papers and preparing her next day's work. By the time her board and laundry bills are paid, wardrobe kept replenished, there is simply nothing left to lay by for the rainy day.

A child begins its education at 6, and if very successful can be ready to teach at 19. Then a meagre salary is offered them, what any servant girl can get, even though she has never spent a dollar on training for service. I am beginning to think that in a few years our schools will all be closed, and no wonder. But prehaps our teachers are to blame themselves for accepting such salaries. No school board looking for a teacher, "a Normal trained," should think of offering less than $800 at the very lowest, now that everything teachers use has more than doubled in price. It is only by doing so that we are going to be able to keep our rural schools open at all, as there are so many other positions a teacher can fill at better salaries. After a while teachers will be "a thing of the past."

Education is not prized half as much as it should be in this fair Canada of ours. I know some school boards are not the "voice of the people" at all. Their cry is the cheap teacher and plenty of changes, too, and they usually reap the results of their folly; not only them but a whole section must suffer. Thanking you very much for space, I sign myself—

An "Ex-School Marm."

Dear Sir: I was much interested in the meeting held in the City last week regarding the fuel question. Yes, for this city of ours needs to waken up, particularly the Fuel Controller. I see by the Examiner in last Saturday's issue that he called all his friends together, namely the coal dealers, and he is going to ascertain the quantity of coal that has been brought into Peterboro the last two years!

Now, isn't this glorious? and won't it be a warm thought on the zero morning for the poor when lined up outside the coal offices to have the satisfaction of knowing that our Fuel Controller knows this. Of course there won't be much danger of finding the Fuel Controller or the Mayor in these lines.

The Fuel Controller made a statement to the effect that the city could not compete with the coal merchants any more than it could with the dry goods business. Our Fuel Controller wants to learn his business a little more, then he will see a difference. It is absolutely necessary to have fuel to prevent privation and death. The dry goods business could close to-morrow and keep closed until the war is over, without causing the privation and misery that lack of fuel does. There is absolutely no comparison. The great mistake was made when it was decided to let the dealers give out the coal instead of having a central office for taking the orders. What is required is to find out who is getting the coal. Does our Fuel Controller know that there will be houses in Peterboro with upwards of 30 tons of coal in their cellars and only four persons living in them; and there will also be scores of homes without coal at all. It is about time that the people living in these large houses cut off their rooms so that the coal will go around. It is more essential to warm people than it is to warm buildings. Most of the people living in these large homes have secured their coal. You won't find them burning wood. Our coal merchants are not so badly fixed yet. Never did they own more automobiles and motortrucks than at the present time, or in a position to build new offices, and convince the city council to tear up the sidewalks. This is too serious a matter to allow 20 persons to have a free hand, when everyone is dependent upon them. It is a duty that the council owe to the public.

Thanking you for the space in your paper.

Yours truly,
"A Stitch in Time."

Conscription In Rome.

In the earliest period of Roman military history all able-bodied citizens under the king as commander-in-chief were compelled to serve in the army in time of war. It was under Servius Tullius, sixth king of Rome, that the first real organization took place. The armies were recruited by means of tribal levies made in a general public assembly, and each tribe was called upon to furnish an equal number of men.

MAKING PERFUMES.

How the Dainty Odors Are Stolen From the Flowers.

Pomades are the commercial vehicle for absorbing and transporting the perfumes of the jonquil, tuberose, jasmine and a few other species of flowers.

A square frame or chassis of white wood and about 20 by 30 inches in size is set with a pane of strong plate glass. On each side of the glass is spread a thin, even layer of grease, which has been purified and refined. Thus prepared, the frames are piled up in ranks six or seven feet high to await the season of each special flower.

When the blossoms arrive the petals are picked from the stem—the pistils and stamens being discarded—and laid so as to cover the grease in each frame. These being again piled so as to rest upon their wooden edges, which fit closely together, there is formed a series of tight chambers, the floors and ceilings of which are of grease, exposed to the perfume of the flower leaves within.

The grease absorbs the perfume, the spent flowers are removed daily and fresh ones supplied, and this process goes on from two to four or five months, according to the desired strength of the pomade, which, when sufficiently charged with perfume, is taken from the glass with a wide, thin spatula and packed in tin cans for export.

By these methods the delicate odors of flowers are extracted and retained for transport to distant markets, where, being treated with alcohol, they yield their perfume to that stronger vehicle and produce floral waters and extracts of commerce.

Coarser pomades are made by boiling the flowers in the grease and subjecting the residue to pressure. The spent pomades are used for toilet purposes and in the manufacture of fine soaps.

The process of preparing perfumed oils involves the same principle except that instead of solid grease superfine olive oil is used.

Essence and flower "water" are produced by ordinary distillation, in which the flowers are boiled in water in large alembics. The vapor carries off the perfume and is condensed in adjoining copper tanks like ordinary spirits. Some of the retorts used for this purpose are of sufficient size to receive at once half a ton of fresh flowers, with the requisite water for their distillation. When "flower waters" are to be produced alcohol is used in the distilling tank to receive the perfumes.

A Long Trip.

He was a college professor, who was greatly beloved because of his kind heart, but who had the not uncommon scholastic failing of absent-mindedness. One day, his married niece favored him for a long time with loud praises of her first-born. When at last she paused for breath, the professor felt that he must say something.

"Can the little fellow walk?" he asked, with every appearance of interest.

"Walk?" cried the mother indignantly. "Why, he's been walking now for five months!"

"Dear me!" exclaimed the professor, again relapsing into abstraction. "What a long way he must have gone!"

The Gloomy Guest.

Young Engley married the charming Olive, and after the wedding breakfast he chanced to notice one of the guests, a young man, who appeared to be extremely gloomy and was evidently not having a good time. He stepped up to the young fellow with the idea of cheering him up.

"Er—have you kissed the bride?" he asked.

"Not lately," replied the gloomy one, with a faraway expression.

REPTILES FOR DINNER

ALL FOUR CLASSES AFFORD FOOD FOR MANKIND.

Dainty Dishes Are Prepared In Various Parts of the World From Lizards, Turtles and Frogs—The Elephant's Foot Is a Tit-Bit Praised by All Who Have Tasted It—Sardinians Eat Adders.

Every nation has its staple dishes; but the odds and ends are the more interesting and in their way more indicative of the general status of the civilization of those partaking of them.

Mankind on the whole has an instinctive dislike to reptiles of every kind and degree; yet of the four families into which the older naturalists divide them—the saurian, ophidian, batrachian and chelonian—each affords sustenance to man, civilized or savage.

A peculiarly dainty and nourishing dish is made with the iguana, the flesh of which is as white a that of a chicken, and just as palatable; though the appearance of the reptile, with its scaly, black-spotted green coat, is more repulsive than either crocodile or alligator. To the inhabitants of the West Indies and the Bahamas the iguana is a much valued source of food and is hunted down by means of dogs, which are muzzled to prevent them using their teeth and damaging the iguanas, which are sold alive, or killed, salted and barreled for home consumption.

The eggs of the iguana are also much relished and are like hens' eggs in taste, but wholly filled with yolk and do not become hard in boiling. The horrid iguana of San Domingo is much appreciated by the bons vivants in the West Indies, the flesh tasting just like the roebuck's, though infinitely more delicate.

The common green lizard is eaten with much gusto by many tribes in Africa, and the gray lizard baked and fried in the south of Portugal, the dish in both instances tasting rather like chicken. In Brazil a green and yellow snake is consumed by all classes; while among the Sardinians the adder is frequently added to broths and soups.

Crocodile flesh is publicly sold in the meat markets of Senaar in Africa; and in Siam one sees the carcasses hung up for sale like sheep in the butchers' shops. The flesh of this great aquatic lizard tastes somewhat similar to veal.

In South America the cayman, or alligator, affords a dish, when boiled or fried in butter, just as tasty as rabbit.

It is the common sea turtle, though, which has won the highest commendations as an edible reptile. It is a species used in the preparation of the hereditary dish at most of the city banquets in England, the supply being sent from Jamaica and the Antilles, the favorite resort of these much prized reptiles, which travel hundreds of miles in order to deposit their eggs. A single turtle of the Amazon is a heavy load for a strong man; but though much larger than the Caribbean species, it is coarser in flesh. At Ega every house has its turtle pond, which is stocked for the winter when the Amazon runs low.

Of the batrachians used as food, the frog is the most popular and most historical; the French, Germans, Italians and Belgians (Walloons) all being noted throughout the centuries for their frog-eating proclivities. The frog is in best condition for the table in the autumn, just before it takes to the water for the winter; but is most popular as food during the spring, for it is then easier to catch.

The French usually eat only the hind quarters, dressed in wine or served with a white sauce, when it is an exceedingly dainty and nourishing dish, finer in flavor than a chick. But the Germans and Walloons, being of a more economical turn of mind, use every part of the animal save its skin and intestines. The species in favor for table purposes is that known as the green frog, though the red frog, much eaten in Italy, is just as good. There is no doubt whatever that the toad is often served in place of the frog in countries where frogs are much used.

But there are many tastes in the dietary of the nations. Bear's flesh is in great demand throughout Germany as one of the most esteemed delicacies, and smoked bear's tongue and hams are much in esteem there. Consequent on their rarity they are among the most expensive luxuries of the table. From bear liver are made sausages dear to the stomach of the Teuton; but a very remarkable price has to be paid for them.

Tiger flesh is eaten in many parts of India, though it is somewhat tough and sinewy. Lion flesh is very good to eat, and much in favor among the Hottentots and other South African tribes, who are also as fond of rhinoceros as any good Englishman is of a rump-steak. Rhinoceros flesh tastes rather like something between beef and pork.

But it is elephant's foot which wins most tributes. All who have eaten the baked foot of the elephant agree that it is most emphatically a dish for a king. The flesh of the elephant may resemble, when cooked, nothing more than a compost of soft leather and glue; but the foot! The foot is cut off at the knee-joint, then a hole about three feet deep is dug in the ground, and the sides of it baked hard with burning wood. The embers are removed in time, and the foot is placed in the hole, which is then filled up with earth tightly rammed down. A great fire is built above it, and kept blazing for three hours. At the end of that time the foot is removed, and the casing of hide and earth peeled off. The flesh is now like a jelly, and may be eaten with a spoon. It is certainly one of the greatest delicacies in the world.

A RAILWAY WIZARD

Tuft Created a Sensation With His Vertical Road.

FIRST PASSENGER ELEVATOR.

It Was Erected In the Old Fifth Avenue Hotel, In New York, In 1859 and Was Regarded as the Marvel of the Day—Its Introduction to England.

Americans may lose the use of their legs. A number of authorities on this subject have made the prophecy that unless the American mends his ways and changes the direction in which certain of his habits and tendencies lie his legs will become as atrophied as has become his little toe from close confinement in shoes and long disuse.

These authorities have pointed out the street car, the automobile and the average man's eagerness to "get there" in the quickest way and with the least possible effort is the causes for the present deterioration in legs, and as mechanical locomotion becomes more and more accessible and the riding habit grows man will have less and less use for his feet and legs.

In addition to electric cars and automobiles, another modern device contributes to the average man's increasing feebleness of limb. That modern device is the elevator. To the present generation, accustomed to ride from floor to floor and to push the elevator bell button and wait for the car rather than climb a flight of stairs, it probably seems queer to see or hear the elevator mentioned as a modern device.

Men in their youth and even in their middle age have become so habituated to the elevator that they feel that such a thing always was, or at least that it is coeval with brick and stone buildings. Yet the elevator is a modern device, and the word "elevator" in the application given it in America is newer still than the contrivance it describes.

Before the demolition of the old Fifth Avenue hotel in New York there was in one of the elevators a tablet, on which was inscribed this: "In this space was erected and operated in 1859 Tuft's vertical screw railway, the first passenger elevator ever built."

That elevator was one of the chief wonders of the hotel, which, because of its luxury and magnificence, was considered one of the wonders of the new world.

The "vertical railway," which saved persons the trouble of walking up and down stairs, was widely written about, and people came from far and near to look at the strange invention and to be able to tell their admiring friends in Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington and other cities out in the provinces that they had been able to go up and down stairs without walking.

When travelers came from New York and told about this vertical screw railway to our grandfathers, those worthy gentlemen raised their eyes and hands in astonishment and probably exclaimed, "Will wonders never cease?"

An English trade paper, the London Builder, in September, 1859, had an editorial on the subject of the vertical screw railway in the United States, saying: "It is a carriage that will move from the top to the bottom of the building and from the bottom to the top. It will be forced upward by the application of steam power, and the descent will be regulated by the resistance of hydraulic power."

It was not until the early seventies that the vertical railway was introduced in England, the first "lift" being installed in Albert hall, and to ride in this passengers were required to pay a fee of one penny. Conservative people in America and England looked on this invention with grave suspicion and "felt it in their bones" that it was only a question of time when it would fall down and kill everybody in it.

Today the "lift" is nothing like so common in Europe as the elevator, which is the same thing, is in the United States. One reason for this is that the United States is the birthplace and the home of the skyscraper, while high buildings, as building heights are measured in America, are infrequent in Europe.—Washington Star.

A Gallon of Gasoline.

A single gallon of gasoline will do wonders almost anywhere, but nowhere has it been applied to better purpose than on the farm. Here are some of its stunts. It will milk 300 cows, bale four tons of hay, mix thirty-five yards of cement, move a ton truck fourteen miles, plow three-fifths of an acre of land and make enough electricity to keep eight lights going in the farmhouse for thirty days.

His Punishment.

"I had a horrible dream last night," said Huddleston when he came down to breakfast the other morning.

"What was it?" asked his wife.

"I dreamed that I was in purgatory and was made to do all the things I had told my friends I would do if I were in their places."—Brooklyn Life.

Has Her Troubles.

Nothing can exceed the weight of responsibility experienced by a woman who is trying to entertain eight guests with an equipment of six knives and forks and six napkins.—Kansas City Journal.

The earth is our workshop. We may not curse it; we are bound to sanctify it.—Mazzini.

The impure, the deceiving and the uncharitable extrude themselves from eternal bliss by their unfitness for enjoying.—Burns.

His Own Medicine.

A medical practitioner on board an ocean liner administered rather freely sea water among the patients who were ill. No matter what their ailments were, a dose of the briny fluid was quickly handed to them, and they were told to drink it up.

One morning the physician fell overboard, which caused quite a consternation among the passengers. The captain came on the scene and inquired the cause.

"Oh, it's nothing, sir," answered one of the sailors, "only the doctor has fallen into his own medicine chest."

Long Pedigrees.

A distinguished French seaman, Admiral Magon, who was killed at Trafalgar, showed a pedigree going back to Mago, the brother of Hannibal. The Samson family, who owns an estate near Lyons, boast of their descent from the strong man of the Bible, which is commemorated in their coat of arms by the broken column of a temple. An Italian nobleman, the Marchese Porro, traces his line back to Porus, the Indian monarch who fought a battle with Alexander the Great.

Island City Still In Ruins.

St. Pierre, Martinique, which was destroyed by the eruption of Mount Pelee in 1902, has never been rebuilt, but it is said that even yet the ruins are being searched for valuables. The place is under police control, and two or three streets have been excavated, but it is still a "city of desolation."

When Pins Were New.

A curious fact in the early history of pins is that when they were first sold in "open shop" there was such a great demand for them that a code was passed permitting their sale only on two days in the year—the 1st and 2nd of January. Those days the court ladies and the city dames flocked to the depots to purchase them in such numbers that they were accounted festivals.

Holland Customs.

Holland has some peculiar customs. In many towns bulletins are affixed to the doors of houses in which persons are sick in order that their friends may be apprised of the state of their health without knocking or ringing, and in Haarlem the birth of a child is announced by means of a small placard adorned with red silk and lace.

Danger of Sugar Famine Over, Food Officials Declare

Situation Better Than at Any Time Since America Started to Feed Allies.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 11. — Definite assurances that here is no danger of a sugar famine were given by the Food Administration and the food situation generally was declared to be better than at any time since America undertook the feeding of the allied world.

The American public will, however, be expected to observe closely the new regulations limiting the household per capita consumption of sugar to three pounds monthly and to continue all other conservation measures, at least in part. Whatever saving other than that provided for in the regulations that may become necessary to remove all danger of famine will be done by manufacturers.

It was said to-day that even with the prospect of a 900,000,000 bushel wheat crop there can be little if any lessening of present conservation measures. A reassuring wheat reserve must be built up here and abroad, officials declare, and maintained against a possible short crop next year.

The new wheat harvest now coming in, it was said, finds the available supply of last year's crop very low. That wheatless and meatless restrictions will be removed entirely was declared at the Food Administration as highly improbable while the war lasts.

Now that the short market in meat buying has come to an end, and reserve stocks of beef and pork have been accumulated, there soon may be slight modification of meat restrictions in hotels and public eating places. Voluntary restrictions on domestic consumers virtually have been lifted, but from time to time the public may be asked to resume them.

Conservation of meat by hotels and restaurants, which have been the greatest consumers of heavy beef required by the Allies and American military forces, have enabled the Food Administration to relieve somewhat the beef shortage among the Allies. The exportation of beef and pork to Europe during the last two months were the highest in history.

A FLAMING MEMORY

(Montreal Star)

The long casualty list from the Llandovery Castle, as given in the press, is a ringing message to steel Canada's war purpose. The hospital ship massacre was a national tragedy as much as if the Huns had landed in Canada and butchered a community here.

Sir Robert Borden, after visiting the front, says the bombing of hospitals and the sinking of the Llandovery Castle will never be forgotten by Canadian soldiers. Nor will the people at home ever forget.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

Couldn't a good many of us eat less than we do at present? There is no need for us to go on actual short commons in Canada, but we manage to consume a good many extra meals that are quite unnecessary and which must, therefore, be condemned as wasteful. Three meals a day are sufficient for anyone.

Many of us eat more than is essential for our physical well-being and especially is this true during the summer months. Salads, fruit and vegetables are not only wholesome fare but they spell conservation of the foods needed for export.

Once again the old cry is repeated —save meat and bacon! Use plenty of milk, poultry, fish, eggs, fruit and vegetables.

Meat is needed as badly as ever in Europe. Indeed, it is estimated that it will be anywhere from five to ten years after the war before the herds will again be on a pre-war basis.

Galt is proposing to elect its aldermen for three years each, one-third retiring each year. Kingston's experiment along this line was not very successful and it went back to the one year term. Galt hopes also to select the mayor from the aldermen elect.

KODAK OR CAMERA

Will add greatly to your pleasure and enjoyment any time, and especially during summer months.

Think of the pleasure of looking over snap pictures taken even 3 to 6 years ago. Several people who have purchased cameras from us declare they have from one to six pictures they would not part with for the price of the camera.

IF IN DOUBT

If you are in doubt as to the most suitable kodak or camera, come to us and we will explain the most desirable features of the machine. We are sure to suit you and our prices are right.

Our developing and printing is done on our own premises. That means better service to you and also the fact that each clerk can give you the benefit of his experience.

AUSTRIA'S HUNGER REVEALED BY MOBS ALONG RAILWAY

Secretary of American Minister to Roumania Says People Beg for Food —Trains Were Guarded While Passing Through Austria.

THE GERMANS IN ROUMANIA

PARIS, July 11.— The food shortage in Austria is growing more acute, according to Herbert Mayer, of Chicago, secretary of Charles J. Vopicka, American Minister to Roumania. Mr. Mayer has just returned from Jassy, by way of Austria and Switzerland.

At Vienna the train on which he travelled stopped in the railroad yard, and a crowd of hungry and ragged men and women employed in the yard scrambled aboard and begged for food. All looked emaciated and underfed. When the passengers threw out scraps of food the Austrians made a rush and devoured it ravenously. They declared the government was giving them only enough food to keep them from actual starvation.

Mr. Mayer and Dr. Breckenridge Baine, of Washington, D.C., were the only Americans among the 175 passengers from Roumania. The others included the Italian and Serbian Ministers and Roumanian officers and civilians. The journey from Jassy to Berne occupied four days. No hostility was shown by Austrians or Germans ,and there were no demonstrations.

Train Always Guarded.

The train was in charge of a German colonel and the passengers were permitted to leave the cars at various stations, where always an Austrian armed guard was present. No attempt was made to draw the blinds in the passenger cars or curtail the customary privileges of travellers.

The Americans were most impressed by the almost complete absence of workers on the farms in Austria. At a station between Orsova and Budapest a mob of about one hundred Austrian soldiers and civilians who wanted to reach their homes attempted to board the train and were put off at the point of a pistol.

A German major at one station told the Americans the Germans were not taking America's entry into the war seriously, because they know that no more than twenty thousand American soldiers were in France.

"America Not Interested."

"The United States is not sufficiently interested in the war to send over a greater number," he said.

There has been an influx of German commercial agents and business men into Jassy, the little Moldavian capital. Five new motion picture theatres have been opened and many retail establishments re-opened, but with extremely slender stocks.

There are forty to fifty German military officers in Jassy, seeing that the Roumanian army is properly demobilized. The Germans have requisitioned the building occupied by the American Legation, ordering the Minister to find other quarters. As a matter of fact the Germans used the building as their consulate in the pre-war days and own all the furniture, the American Minister only having leased the premises.

The Roumanian Queen has shown an intense dislike for the Germans and has repeatedly refused to grant audiences requested by high German military officials. She, the King and the royal family are living in seclusion seventy-five miles from Jassy.

After the American Red Cross and other allied missions left Roumania the Queen kept to her bed three days. "Am I a traitor? Do I deserve this?" she cried, in speaking of her country's fate.

GRAIN MARKET

A more favourable weather map, showing showers and higher temperatures in the west, induced a weaker tone to the Winnipeg market, C.W. oats slipping back 1 5-8c lower than Tuesday's close on July and October options. The government report issued on Tuesday was at first interpreted as bearish on corn, but the action of the Chicago market later on scarcely bore out that interpretation, the market closing from ¾c to 7-8c up. Chicago oats closed 1-8c to 5-8c easier. Local trade is extremely quiet —practically nothing doing.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards-Receipts yesterday, 57 cars, with 419 cattle, 299 calves, 1524 hogs and 473 sheep.

Trade continues quiet on the cattle market, with the prices holding just about steady at Monday's decline of a dollar from last week's average for good and medium butcher cattle.

Yesterday's offering of fresh cattle was very light and of poor average quality, but including one or two small lots of fairly good quality which sold at $14 to $14.25. The bulk of the offering was of the medium butcher selling from $11.50 to $12, and a few good part loads around $13.

Fat butcher cows steady.

Calves were a little easier and about 25c lower

Sheep and lambs steady.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AN UNPLEASANT RIDE

CHAPTER CXIV.

We started out in high spirits. George seemed almost as pleased as I was to go. I chatted and laughed with him, forgetting to be dignified, exhilarated by the swiftly moving car, and the fresh air. I had carefully pinned my veil before we left the restaurant so that my hair would not blow, and look untidy, and so win me a reprimand from George; who had very little patience with straggling locks.

When we reached the town George proposed I wait for him in the parlour of the inn. I gladly consented. Like all women I had powder, etc. in my hand bag. I would freshen up a little while waiting. He had said something about having a bite before we started back as it would be quite late when we reached home.

I bathed my face and hands, then rearranged my hair, and brushed my clothes. George said I didn't look as if I had been out of my own boudoir; and he said it in such a complimentary tone that I blushed with pleasure. He wanted to start home at once after we had finished our "bite" which consisted of a club sandwich and a bottle of beer; but I persuaded him to walk about the town for a little. I never had been there, and it was such a pretty place.

We had not gone far on our way home when a most terrific thunder storm came up. I never had seen sharper, more terrifying flashes of lightning, never heard thunder that each peal seemed to strike so directly near me. I tried to be brave, but did not succeed very well.

"It is all your own fault!" George grumbled. "Had you not urged me to remain we would have been at home before this beastly storm came up. Serves me right also for taking such a trip in an open car just to please you. I'll never do it again!"

"Please don't say that!" I begged.

"Don't talk to me, I'm disgusted," and the remainder of the way home neither spoke. The ending of our almost perfect day, had as usual spoiled whatever pleasure I had had. I wished we had not gone more than once before I went to bed. George didn't speak a single pleasant word all the evening.

Evelyn Reeves Names Her Baby Girl For Helen

Before the evening was over however I had a message from Kurtz Reeves that effectually banished my depression and gave me something to think about aside from my own troubles.

"It's a girl, and Evelyn says it is to be named for you," Kurtz told me his voice vibrating with pride.

"Oh, really! when can I come over?" I asked delighted that they should have thought of me.

"To-morrow, the nurse says," he returned after a moment. "She came to town about noon. We tried to get you several times but could not find you."

"I have been out to Leanord Park with Mr. Howard. Give my love to Evelyn, and tell her I will be over the very first thing in the morning."

"Oh, George!" I exclaimed, "Evelyn has a baby girl and she has named it after me and I am to go over and seen her the first thing in the morning."

"Helen is a very fine name," was all he said. The look on his face also discouraged any further attempts to talk of the, to me, wonderful event.

"Mrs. Collins and that bunch are right," I murmured to myself when after waiting a few moments, I had gone upstairs to see what else aside from a gift already prepared, I could find to give my little namesake. Surely when a baby was named after one it was one's duty to remember the child more lavishly than just an ordinary baby would be remembered. "George would not like me to have children, I can see that," a queer little lonesome shiver ran over me.

The next day I could hardly eat my breakfast I was in such a hurry to get over and see the baby—my namesake. It seemed to me that George never had idled so over his breakfast, that he never had been so hard to please. His egg was not cooked right, and he had to have another one. By that time his coffee was cold, and that had to be sent back and heated. I fidgetted dreadfully, and he noticed it I was sure, though he said nothing.

He's doing it purposely, I thought, he doesn't like babies, and has no sympathy with my desire to be with Evelyn.

The moment he left I rushed to my room, changed to a street costume and almost ran over to Evelyn's. She looked so proud, so happy it almost made me cry. And her mother-in-law spoke so beautifully to her and of the baby that I was sure all her troubles in that direction were over. But the climax of my joy came when the nurse brought the little pink bundle in and let me hold her. "baby Helen," Evelyn said with a smile.

I wonder if I could explain the heart-ache I had as I thought I never shall have a baby of my own. Because I mustn't lose George, and I can't keep him and have a baby too. I know, I couldn't explain so I shall not try.

To-morrow—An Embarrassing Situation.

Earth's Diameter.

The earth's greatest diameter is not necessarily at the equator. According to the eminent Professor Henkey, the actual greatest diameter is that taken from the summit of Mount Chimborazo. The line drawn from this point to the opposite side on a point in Sumatra gives a diameter of 7,929 miles. —New York American.

PERIL OF RUST.

A Constant Menace to Structures of Iron and Steel.

Among the many questions which the architect and builder are called upon to consider, none perhaps is more important than that relating to the corrosion of iron and steel. This tendency to decay is peculiar to these materials, since none of the ordinary metals exhibits it to any comparable degree, and it is so strong that an unprotected piece is soon reduced to a shapeless mass of rust. It is one thing to design and erect a mighty skyscraper, but an entirely different matter to protect it from those influences which, if allowed to do their work, would ruin the greatest structure in a short time.

It seems strange, in a way, that unless iron is well protected it is far less resistant to natural agencies than wood or other building materials. It is being used more and more in the fabrication of large buildings and other structures of a permanent type, and the length of their life, to say nothing of the safety of the people employed in and around them, depends on the success with which corrosion can be prevented.

Painters are constantly employed on such structures as the Brooklyn or Forth bridges scraping away rust spots and repainting. When serious rusting is once started it is very hard to check, and as it would inevitably lead to the destruction of the framework a collapse would be certain to occur sooner or later, probably with an appalling loss of life.—Engineering Magazine.

Metal-Coated Seeds.

Considerable interest is being created by an altogether new system of soil electrification that may eventually prove meritorious. Its two outstanding features distinguish it from the methods that have been employed abroad. Instead of an expensive overhead network of wires being erected, two distributing electrodes, consisting of insulated wires with pointed copper projections at 6-inch intervals, are imbedded, parallel with each other, in the ground along opposite sides of a field. These subsurface lines are extended to a depth of about six inches and are so situated that they do not interfere with cultivation. The current, stepped up to about 2,0,000 volts by passage through a high-frequency apparatus, is in this manner "sprayed" through the ground. In passing across the field from one electrode to another the current, following the path of least resistance, seeks out the seeds, which are metal-coated. The condition thus created is described as being analagous to the coherer of a wireless set. In laboratory germination tests really remarkable results have been accomplished. Field tests were conducted last season with the encouraging, although not at all conclusive, results. In the minds of impartial experts who are familiar with the laboratory and field tests, the system is worthy of further experimentation, but at the present time not ripe for commercial exploitation. —Popular Mechanics.

LEGAL FALLACIES.

Ancient Superstitions That Tenaciously Cling to Life.

On the subject of "Some Popular Legal Superstitions" Case and Comment says that there are many misconceptions of legal doctrines, usually tenaciously held and sometimes rashly acted upon to the client's undoing, some of which are so grotesquely distorted that it is difficult to trace them to their origin. One of the most widely spread but fortunately harmless of these is that in order that a will disinheriting an heir may be valid he must be "cut off with a shilling." This notion is erroneous, but Blackstone finds a foundation for it in the civil law and says:

"The Romans were also wont to set aside testaments as being inofficiosa, deficient in natural duty, if they disinherited or totally passed by (without assigning a true, sufficient reason) any of the children of the testator. But if the child had any legacy, though ever so small, it was proof that the testator had not lost his memory or reason, which otherwise the law presumed, but was then presumed to have acted thus from substantial cause. Hence probably has arisen that groundless vulgar error of the necessity of leaving an heir a shilling, or some other express legacy, in order to disinherit him effectually."

Another erroneous idea, quite generally entertained, is that a signature is not binding unless written in ink.

Still another curious notion entertained in some localities is that an eye-witness may not testify to any occurrence seen by him "through glass." This is probably attributable to the fact that the imperfections of ancient window glass might deceive the onlooker as to what actually took place. The writer recalls an instance adduced by his instructor in physics while lecturing on the refraction of light of a windowpane in his house through which passersby on the opposite side of the square appeared, on coming opposite to a church, to leap over the steeple. A condition of this sort brought out on cross examination might affect the weight, though not the admissibility, of the evidence.

DEFENDING THE FAR EAST.

Japanese and Chinese Troops Co-operate for This Purpose.

The Japanese Foreign Office announces that the recently signed convention between China and Japan is limited to joint military operations in defence against the German menace in Siberia. Notes exchanged between the two countries on March 25 were made public by the Foreign Office. The first, from China to Japan says:

"The means and condition of the co-operation of the army and navy of China with Japan, are compatible with a common military defence against an enemy, for the realization of which plans may be decided upon by mutual agreement of both countries. They will be arranged by the military and naval authorities of both countries who from time to time will consult with each other freely and carefully upon all questions of mutual interest and, upon approval of the Governments, they will be carried into action according to the demands of the circumstances."

On the same date, Viscount Motono, then Japanese Foreign Minister, replied:

"I propose on behalf of my Government, that the period in which the notes will remain in force be determined by competent military and naval authorities of the two powers. At the same time the Imperial Government is happy to declare that Japanese troops within Chinese territory for the purpose of such defensive movements will be withdrawn completely upon termination of the war."

The third note was merely the formal acknowledgment by the Chinese Government of Viscount Motono's reply.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by most druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Few People Know How to Make Tea!

One is served "boiled" Tea, "second-hand" Tea, and flavoured water; rarely does one obtain that real Tea—tasty Tea," that has been called the "Nectar of the Gods."

The way to get it is to buy Lipton's Tea and follow these directions in making it:

1—Always use an earthenware or china teapot.
2—Thoroughly warm the teapot by rinsing with hot water.
3—Put enough tea into the pot to suit requirements. Two teaspoonfuls of Lipton's is ample for five cups.
4—Always use freshly-drawn water, and have it briskly boiling when poured on the tea.
5—Allow the tea to stand not longer than five minutes.
6—Add cream and sugar to suit taste.

But be sure to get Lipton's, because it is the only GUARANTEED QUALITY TEA. Grown, blended, packed, and sold by the same firm.

No other firm can give this guarantee.

The Greedy Starfish.

In his report to the Eastern Sea Fishery Board at Spalding recently, Mr. H. Donnison, of Lincolnshire, said: "Starfish, mostly small in size, and some not the size of a threepenny piece, have been very abundant, and constant attention on the part of the staff has been necessary to prevent them doing serious damage to the shellfish beds. In the channels, and on some low-lying ground which seldom bares, they congregated together, devoured every mussel and cockle around them, and gradually worked up the sands for more. A small special trawl obtained about 37 tons of the pest. The shrimp and mussel fishings during the half year were much above the average in quantity; cod-fishing on the Norfolk coast was also very satisfactory. The inshore herring fishing was only moderate, and there was a diminished supply of cockles."—London Times.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Successful Bidder

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

The Earl of Attesborough, a Scotch peer of the British realm, then about fifty years of age, had three sons, all fine, manly fellows, and he did not worry about having a direct successor to the title. The youngest of these boys, Alan Redwood, was desperately in love with Lady Gladys Fellowes, second daughter of the Duke of Arranton. The estates were contiguous, and the young persons of the two families were thrown a great deal together. The love affair between Alan and Gladys, aged respectively twenty and seventeen, was as natural as the mating of a pair of birds.

Unfortunately both the earl's and the duke's estates were in a bad financial condition. The former wished his eldest son and the latter wished his daughters to marry wealth. As for the younger sons, they were supposed to shift for themselves. The duke absolutely forbade any union between Gladys and Alan, and, indeed, such a marriage was next to impossible, for there was no income on either side.

Alan concluded to go to America, and his father gave him enough money to get there and have left a few hundred pounds to keep him till he could begin to earn a living. It was a sad parting between him and Gladys, both being sensible that they must drift apart. Alan took passage on a sail ship and after a month on the ocean reached America. He never wrote a line to any one after his arrival, and in due time he seemed lost to his family and former associates.

Five years after he left England the Crimean war came on, and his next older brother, who was an officer in the British army, went there with his regiment and died of disease in the trenches before Sebastopol. During the war the oldest brother broke his neck in a fall from his horse while fox hunting. This left Alan heir to the title. Inquiries were made in America for him, but nothing could be learned from him. But a record was found of the death of an Alan or Allen Redwood in New York who had come from somewhere else and lived alone, and papers were executed to show that the direct heir to the title of Earl of Attesborough was dead. A cousin who was next of kin took possession of the title and estates, but found the finances in such poor condition that he inherited an empty honor.

The Crimean war took a great many ablebodied men from the British isles, a number of whom left families behind them. In the country in which the Attesboroughs and Arrantons lived were so many destitute families from this and other causes that in order to relieve them a fair to end with a masked ball was held on the duke's estate under his patronage. Everything was done to get money, including the offering of the partnership for the first dance of five prominent unmarried ladies, one of whom was Gladys, the duke's second daughter. An auction was to be held before the ball for this privilege, the money accruing to go into the general fund of the fair.

On the day of the fair the duke's house and grounds were opened to all. The affair was a sort of fete champetre during the day, and at evening guests came in masks and fancy costumes for the ball. When all was ready for the auction the lady of highest rank with whom the privilege to dance first was to be auctioned stood on a dais and the bidding began. A goodly sum was realized, and the others took their turns. Lastly Lady Gladys stood up before the assembly.

A rich cotton spinner who had learned of the duke's necessities and had loaned him money started the bidding with £100. This man, MacCormack, was trying to put the duke under such obligations that he would consent to give him Lady Gladys in marriage. A man in the garb of an American miner—woolen shirt, sombrero and boots to his knees—raised the cotton spinner's bid £100. The cotton spinner went up a hundred more, and it was not long before these two were climbing over each other a hundred pounds at a time till the miner raised the other £1,000. At the price it would cost £5,000, or $25,000, to dance the first dance with the lady. Since the cotton spinner had not much hope of getting her in marriage he retired from the contest, and the privilege was knocked down to the miner.

Cries were now heard, "Unmask!" and the successful bidder advanced to the front of the dais and removed his face covering. Lady Gladys started.

"A stranger!"

"Who is he?"

"Give your name!"

These were some of the cries that came from all parts of the room. The stranger, turning, faced the crowd and said:

"I am Alan Redwood, earl of Attesborough."

Old friends gathered round the newcomer to hear his story. He had reached America shortly before gold was discovered in California and had made the journey there across the great American desert and the Rocky mountains. He had taken some goods with him and sold them at a great profit. The proceeds he had invested in mining property and had become very rich.

The duke was now glad enough to give his daughter to her former suitor, who cleared his estate of its indebtedness and had plenty over.

THE SILVER SWORD.

It Grows in Hawaii and Is the Rarest Plant in the World.

The rarest plant in the world grows in Hawaii, a fact which is unknown to all but very few of the thousands of tourists annually visiting the paradise of the Pacific. It is the silver sword.

Its very name is odd and unusual, at once arousing the curiosity and the interest of the stranger who chances to hear it. It is a cactus-like growth, the long, silky, gray leaves of which give it its peculiar name. The reason for its rarity is that it is found only on the most inaccessible slopes of the volcanoes of this group of islands.

From the earliest times it has been appreciated and greatly admired by the native Hawaiians, who called it "ahinahina" (gray headed), because they had never before the coming of the white man seen silver and therefore could not apply to the plant the cognomen which so well describes it.

All who have found it prize it more jealously than do Alpine climbers treasure the edelweiss. It is a far more beautiful thing and more difficult to obtain than the famous flower of Switzerland.—San Francisco Chronicle.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Sheho, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

By Twists Teacher's Words.

A Greencastle young woman teacher in the Peru (Ind.) high school a few days ago had a vision of her job leaving because of a violent protest lodged against her by a patron. The teachers were at a meeting when the protest came up. The patron accused the teacher of calling her boy "a scurvy elephant." The teacher was dumfounded when she heard the charge, and could not recall making any such remark. The corps of teachers went to work to attempt to unravel the mystery. Finally it was solved. The teacher had told the boy "He was a disturbing element," and the boy mistook what she said for "A scurvy elephant."—Indianapolis News.

ANIMALS AND TEMPERATURE.

Why Creatures of Tropical Climes Always Have Dark Skins.

Animals are not so easily acclimated as most people think. For instance, a monkey used to living in the trees in the shade, if exposed to the hot tropical sun, will die within three hours. A rabbit will be acted on in the same way. It has been shown that these particular animals have not developed a sufficient supply of perspiration glands. An animal with a plentiful supply of these glands can stand almost anything in the way of heat, for the evaporation of perspiration has an enormous cooling effect. Therefore animals used to living in trees or in the shade, not having the glands, cannot stand tropical heat.

Another peculiarity is that animals acclimated to tropical heat always have dark or reflecting skins. All animals domesticated in the tropics that did not have them before have acquired dark skins.

Black skins absorb more heat than white skins, and it would therefore seem to be the wrong color for the tropics. But the absorption of heat by the black skin produces excessive perspiration and consequent cooling by evaporation, so it is really a blessing. A reflecting skin would not absorb much of the heat rays. Such a skin is like a mirror, and is possessed by sleek animals.

Black skins, while they absorb heat more quickly than white, also lose it more quickly when the animal gets in the shade. As a matter of fact, nearly all dark-skinned animals of the tropics hide during the daytime and come forth only at night, simply because they are not supplied with glands and not because of their black skin.

Animals in general cannot easily adapt themselves to a new climate, but it has been proved that man can adapt himself to any climate, whether his immediate ancestors were ever subjected to it or not. The reason is in the wonderful heat regulation of the human body.

When a man is hot in the summer time and needs cooling he perspires freely and the sweat evaporates and cools him. When he gets cold the pores close up and do not let the sweat come out and cool him. This regulation is minute and involuntary and is on the job every minute of the day. A man can go naked in snow and not suffer much discomfort. The pores close up into tight knots (gooseflesh), and thus have the body covered with a skin almost airtight.

Curious Bread.

The bread that was served out during the siege of Genoa was a curious mixture. Marbot, who had to eat it or go without it, says it was "a horrible compound of damaged flour, sawdust, starch, hair powder, oatmeal, linseed, rancid nuts and other nasty substances, to which a little solidity was given by the admixture of a small portion of cocoa. Each loaf, moreover, was held together by little bits of wood, without which it would have fallen to powder. General Thiebault in his journal of the siege compares this bread to peat mingled with oil."—Argonaut.

Hot Stories.

A contributor to The Chino Herald, telling of the experiences during a summer trip into the desert, narrates that while he watched a lizard run across a sun-baked open strip of sand it disappeared in a puff of vapor. The intense heat of the sand had turned the moisture of its body into steam, the pressure of which rose so high that the little creature was blown into bits so minute that no trace of it was afterward to be found. In backing up his statement, he quotes an old prospectors' allegation that in Death Valley, during the heat of the day, water poured from a canteen will not reach the ground, being turned into steam as fast as it leaves the mouth of the canteen.

Paper Money.

Marco Polo (1254-1324) of Venice was the first person to announce to Europe the existence of paper money in China under the moguls. The fact has induced the belief that the moguls were the originators of it. But in the history of Ghengis Khan and of the mogul dynasty in China published in the year 1739 the author speaks of the suppression of the paper money which was in use under the dynasty of the Sung, who reigned in China previous to the moguls, and he also mentions a new species of notes which were substituted for the old in 1264.

NAVAL PROBLEMS.

How to Protect Warships From Mines and Torpedoes.

CAN BOTTOMS BE ARMORED?

This Is a Question That Can Be Answered Only by Experiment and May Involve Radical Changes In Construction Above the Water Line.

The next departure in the construction of war vessels will be armoring their bottoms. The mines and the submarines have demonstrated that side armor and impenetrable turrets are of very small account when the bottom of a ship can be so easily pierced.

The problem of protecting the bottom may look insoluble, but it cannot look more hopeless than the protection of the sides did fifty or sixty years ago. The idea of getting enough armor upon the sides of a ship to afford substantial protection looked impossible to naval architects of two generations ago. But bold inventors and constructors tried the experiment, and it succeeded.

Then the guns were increased in size in order to penetrate the thin armor of the day, and the naval constructors found it possible to add greatly to the thickness of the plates, and successive improvements in the quality of the plates were effected.

The next step was to attack the decks of war vessels by vertical fire, and the constructors introduced protective decks. Then the mine and the torpedo were perfected, and the submarine vessel was invented, and now the problem is to protect war vessels below the water line.

It may or it may not be possible to do this, but the experiment will be made, and it is as likely to succeed as some of the earlier experiments. Of course, bottom armor would add greatly to the weight of a vessel, but the displacement can be increased enough to give the necessary buoyancy.

Besides, it may be worth while to take off some of the turret and side armor to save weight. Of course the stability of the ship would be increased if the heaviest plates were below the water line instead of above. The sides of a vessel do not present a very large target, and the protection of the bottom may be important enough to justify a reduction in the protection of the sides.

When the naval architects found it necessary to increase the thickness of the side armor they reduced the area to be protected to the vitals of a ship, the engine room and the principal battery. The bow and stern could be shot to pieces and yet leave the central part of the ship intact, with the motive power and the biggest guns.

This principle may be carried still farther. Still less protection may be given the sides and top of the "citadel," in order to give more to the bottom, which can be attacked by an invisible enemy. The turrets are very heavy and being placed high above the water, they are where they have the greatest effect in impairing the vessel's stability.

At the distances at which vessels usually fight now the platforms of the big guns present a very minute target; the chances of their being hit is small; for the sake of protecting the bottom it may be worth while to replace the massive turrets with light shields designed only to protect the gun crews from small, rapid fire guns and fragments of shells, and put the weight where it will resist torpedoes and mines.

It may be that no bottom will stand the explosion of a mine or a torpedo, but the next departure in battleship construction will test this. The efficacy of the submarine has been demonstrated, and the present task of naval constructors is to devise protection from it.—Philadelphia Record.

Do You Find the Wicked Cheerful?

In the American Magazine David Grayson, author of "Hempfield," comments as follows on the cheerfulness of the wicked:

"We are nearly all of us shocked by the cheerfulness of the wicked. We feel that those whom we have set aside as reprobates or sinful spectacles should by good right draw long faces and be appropriately miserable, and we never become quite accustomed to our own surprise at finding them happy or contented."

WONDERFUL VACUUM.

Science Can Produce It Almost to the Point of Perfection.

Scientists have succeeded in getting what is practically a perfect vacuum, have succeeded in taking all the air out of a space except the one hundred and fifty millionth of it. As long as they had to deal with the old fine so called suction pump very low vacuums were impossible on account of leakage. The mercury pump was relied on to give the better vacuums, but that took a long time indeed. Then the Gaede pump and before that the Geryck pump improved matters somewhat.

The device now used is as ingenious as it is swift and reliable. Suppose that we have a sealed tube containing air. If we place this in liquid hydrogen the air in a few minutes becomes a solid in the bottom of the tube. If all the air were frozen we should have a perfect vacuum left, but air contains what the chemist calls "traces" of several inert and hard to freeze gases, two of which are helium and neon. The tiny amount of these rare gases found in the air is, of course, left in the space, and so a perfect vacuum does not appear. But helium has been liquefied also. As liquefied helium is the coldest thing obtainable it will not freeze any more of itself.

To make the vacuum more complete, however, it was decided to put some charcoal in the tube. It had long been known that hot charcoal had the power to absorb or "occlude" gases, but little was known about its power when as cold as liquid air. A great surprise was in store for the first man to try it, however, for it was found that it absorbed a great deal more when very cold than when warm, in some cases seven or eight times as much. So the charcoal placed in the space absorbed a good part of the gases remaining, and the wonderful vacuum of .0000058 of a millimeter, the normal pressure of the air being 760 millimeters, was obtained.—Chicago Herald.

HOW OLD ARE YOU?

Do You Know Your Age and the Year and Day of Your Birth?

How old are you? When were you born? See if you really know. See if your children know how old they are. Do not laugh at these simple questions until you try the test.

According to a recent issue of the United States public health service reports, it is a common occurrence to find school children, even high school pupils in the junior and senior years, who cannot tell how old they are, or who, if they know their age, cannot tell accurately in what year they were born.

You will need this information when you apply for a marriage license, or in registering for voting, or in seeking a government position, or in case you claim that you are heir to a fortune that is going to some other person. You may have to go under oath as to your age when you pay your custom duties upon return from your next European trip. So you should practice.

In some of our states there is no birth registration, so you may not be able to prove from the records that you ever were born. This might be embarrassing to you if you want to marry in Europe.

Perhaps the easiest way to remember your age is to form some jingle or rime on your birth year. For instance, "In 1897 little Johnnie came from heaven," or "In 1882 little Susie began to boo." Never mind what the rime is, just so you remember it, and if, after reaching the age of forty, you want to prove that you are only twenty-three years old, just change the rime and perhaps people will believe you when you repeat the jingle to prove your youth.

U. S., Not U. S. A.

Do you know what is the proper abbreviation of the United States? It is U. S. It is not U. S. A. There is widespread and apparently utter ignorance of this fact. The initials U. S. A. are the officially accepted abbreviation for United States army and do not under any possible conditions ever mean United States of America. At this time, when so many manufacturers in this country are branding their goods as made in the United States, this is important. The brand U. S. A. upon anything means that it was manufactured for the United States army. "Made In U. S." is the brand which should be put upon all goods manufactured in this country.—Albany Knickerbocker Press.

Miss Withers—Think you could come anywhere near guessing my age? Ha—Not with any degree of safety.—Judge.

In his book, "The Curves of Life," Theodore Andrea Cook says that a Sherlock Holmes could tell from the curves of a carpenter's shavings whether he was right or left handed, as a right handed carpenter invariably drives his plane a little to the left, producing right handed screws, while the left handed carpenter pushes his plane a little to the right and produces left handed screws.

The strongly left handed man will continue to use such tools with his left hand, even though with inconvenience, but he in whom the left handedness is not a strong bias becomes ambidextrous through the use of the right handed contrivances and appliances of everyday life.

Mr. Cook mentions many customs that have arisen through the normal right handedness of man. Among these is the rule of driving to the left, which still obtains in England, Portugal, Sweden and parts of Austria, Italy and Switzerland. This is a survival of riding days, when men held the reins in their left hands in order to leave their right free to use their swords.

The most notable example of a left handed artist is Leonardo da Vinci. He also wrote with his left hand and wrote from right to left. So that any one who wants to read his manuscripts or the annotations on his drawings must use a mirror. This, according to Mr. Cook, is the natural method of the left handed man.

Presidential Cheeses.

The first monster cheese presented to a president of which we can find record is that offered with great publicity to Jefferson in 1802. The cheese was made—one might almost say built—in Cheshire, Mass., in a press giving it the great dimensions of four feet diameter and eighteen inches high. After being successfully pressed it was drawn from Cheshire to Washington in a six horse dray amid popular rejoicing. With regard for the dignity of his office, the president insisted on footing the bill to the tune of $200. There is record of an even greater cheese presented to President Jackson, and President Van Buren received a great cheese every year of his incumbency. With him the custom seems to have ended.—New York Sun.

Uncle Jeff, an aged negro driver of Augusta, was piloting several northern visitors around just after the first golf links had been put in there. Uncle Jeff was a little short in his knowledge according to St. Andrew, but long on local pride.

"How many holes have they?" inquired a visitor, "eighteen?"

Uncle Jeff pulled up to make his answer more impressive.

"More'n dat, suh," he said. "Dey's got a passel er land, and de holes ain't bigger'n a tin can. I reckin dey's got a thousand holes already, suh."—New York Post.

First Sumptuary Laws.

Laws regulating eating, drinking and dressing are almost as old as history itself. Nothing like exactness can be reached in the matter, but it is safe to say that it was in Egypt as far back as 3000 B. C. that the first practical sumptuary statutes were passed. Among the Romans they first appeared in the celebrated "twelve tables." In modern times Charlemagne was the pioneer in sumptuary legislation.

A Bird That Bestows a Curse.

The stonechat, a "soft billed" bird, is so called from the similarity of its alarm note and the striking together of two pebbles. In some parts of Scotland it is supposed to contain a drop of the devil's blood, and its nest is never taken because of the curse it is always promising.—Country Life.

Leisurely Tasmania.

Leisure is regarded as so notable a characteristic of Tasmania that it bears the nickname of "the land of lots of time," or "the land of sleep a lot," while its inhabitants are called "tassies" and "jam eaters," the latter being an allusion to the island's great fruit farms.

TREAT CANCER QUICKLY.

"It Is Not Surgery, but Delayed Surgery, That Fails to Cure."

That cancer is at first a local growth and not a general disease of the system is now clearly established. This fact is of the utmost importance, since in holds out a high hope of cure if the malignant growth is removed before it has time to spread to other parts of the body. Cancer beginning in one spot later appears elsewhere, because small particles or cells are carried away from the first site and start other growths, not because there exists previously some poison in the blood which causes the disease to break out in different parts of the body. The great hope of cure, therefore, lies in removing cancer entirely from the system before it has a chance to spread from its first foothold.

The reason why so many people came to believe that cancer was a blood disease is doubtless because it was observed to come again in the same or other parts of the body after having been apparently cut out. It was natural to assume that when the disease kept coming back in this manner there must be some cause or taint in the blood which led to its breaking out in different places much like certain skin diseases.

The trouble which started this fallacious reasoning was that in those earlier days cancer was not so well understood as it now is. Surgeons then did the best they knew how, but without the advantages of modern methods they were unable successfully to exterminate the disease. The microscope has now shown us the paths by which cancer cells start their invasion of the body if the first and local appearance is neglected. Modern surgeons are, therefore, repeatedly successful in removing the disease once for all. As an eminent American doctor has well said, "It is not surgery but delayed surgery, that fails to cure."

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation, Sour Gassy Stomachs and Acid Indigestion.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little bisurated magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach, which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

The Allies Are Sweeping Forward In Albania

UKRAINE IS NOW IN STATE OF COUNTRY-WIDE REVOLUTION

ENEMY SUBMARINES ARE NOW CONTROLLED

"The Death Charge Has Changed the Hunters Into the Hunted," Says Sir Eric Geddes—Fewer Submarines Are Operating.

AMERICANS IN ENGLAND

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, July 11.—"The submarines are now controlled," Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, declared to-day in opening the official exhibition of naval photographs. "Fewer are operating now than for some time past. The depth charge has changed the hunters into the hunted."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, July 11.—Herbert H. Asquith, former Premier, in an address last night at the National Liberal Club, praised President Wilson's leadership in the war and his advocacy of a League of Nations after the war. The occasion was a dinner to the American officers at which five hundred prominent Englishmen were hosts.

Submarine Menace.

Vice-Admiral Sims, Commander of American Naval forces in the war zone, paid a tribute to the co-operation of the British and American navies and declared the submarine menace is now at an end for we are destroying them faster than the Germans can build them. Major-General Biddle, Commander of American forces in England, evoked long cheers when he announced that American troops were stationed at from seventy to eighty different points in England and Scotland.

THE POLICE WILL PUT "RAFFLES" IN HIS STRAIGHT JACKET

Free Exhibition in Front of the Grand Opera House This Evening

Detective Newhall and another member of the police force will put "Raffles" in his straight jacket in front of the Grand Opera House at seven-thirty this evening. The attraction promises to be one of the best of its kind seen in Peterborough for some time. "Raffles" is regarded as one of the greatest wonders of the human race and his free exhibition to-night will doubtless attract a large crowd. He will be at the Grand for the last three days of this week.

THE WEATHER

The rainfall yesterday was not very heavy (.13 of an inch) but there is such a thing as having too much of a good thing. Highest temperature 75 degrees; lowest last night 55 degrees. The unsettled conditions are apparently about at an end, and much warmer weather is now setting in over the entire west, with quite high temperature in Alberta.—W.P.

NO DOUBT IN ENGLAND AS TO OUTCOME OF WAR

Mrs. Dudley Cornell Chads Returns to Peterboro After Absence of Three Years in England.

PETERBORO OFFICERS

Mrs. Dudley Cornell-Chads, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Webster, Lakefield, who arrived home this week from a three years' absence in England, tells a most reassuring tale of the conditions there since going overseas with Mr. Cornell-Chads, who is with the British army as analytical chemist.

Mrs. Chads has had an opportunity of studying conditions in practically every sphere. Asked about the food conditions, she said there is plenty for all with the enforced care brought about by rationing. Only last month the meat rations had been increased, and the only complaints on the food conditions are made by the food hogs

ENGLAND IS OPTIMISTIC.

"One never hears a doubt in England as to the outcome of the war, and whereas since March 21st, when the big offensive started, England has been keyed up, it was not with fear of German victory, but with anxiety for the dear ones at the front," she said. "The spirit of England is wonderful In V.A.D. work in which I have been engaged I have known a woman to stay out from the hospital one day when news of her husband's death at the front has been received, and return the next day to her duty. Since the 21st of March that army of men quoted as lying idle in England, has disappeared."

IN AIR RAIDS.

Mrs. Chads was in London at the time of the first air raid, and told of how they quite composedly counted 36 bombs as they fell. It will be surprising to many to know that the John Bull printing house was destroyed recently. Mrs. Chads visited the ruins. Only by a delay of 15 minutes she missed the raid on the Bank of England some time ago. "More people are killed by our own shrapnel in an air raid than by the Hun bombs or falling buildings," she said.

"The Canadians," she said, "had a wrong impression of returning Canadian women." They are not compelled to return, but are each sent a circular explaining the food conditions, and that as the war will probably end shortly and the ships be used for transports they had best leave at once. Returning is optional but in most cases women are glad to return for their children's sake.

AMUSED BY SAMMIES.

The English are greatly amused by the Sammies and are making fast friends of them, and are more together than the Canadians and the Americans. The Yankees delight in learning the Cockney accent and go into roars of laughter over the pronunciation.

THE RETURN HOME.

The ship on which Mrs. Chads returned, H.M.S., 28-10, made the home journey in four days. She sailed one week later than the Empress of Britain, of which one of the convoy was sunk. Aboard the 28-10 were Col. Clegg of Peterboro, and Capt. W. Traill, both of whom are attached to the ship. Capt. Traill has just received word on leaving England that his sister-in-law, Nursing Sister Fortesque, well known in the city, was lost with the hospital ship Lonsovery Castle sunk off the coast of Ireland recently. The ship which carried mostly English women who have married Canadian soldiers, had also as passengers British officers who will superintend the building of the composite boats now under construction.

CARRY ON.

The whole slogan of England is "Carry on," and every man, woman and child is falling in to do so. The King mixes with privates at canteens and hospitals, and leaves unrecognized as he neither parades his identity by side or coronet Mrs. Chads has seen him frequently but not known him until after his leaving.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

British Positions Were Improved—French Troops Captured Number of Important Positions.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE

LONDON (Official), July 11. — In a local operation carried out last night south of the Somme, east of Villers-Bretonneux, the British positions were improved. The Germans again last night bombarded somewhat heavily the British positions east of Amiens on both sides of the Somme River.

THE STATEMENT READS.

We improved our positions slightly during the night east of Villers-Bretonneux.

Yesterday afternoon and last night successful raids in which we captured several prisoners and machine guns were carried out by us in the neighbourhood of Merris and Festubert. Hostile artillery has shown some activity against our positions astride the Somme.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS (Official), July 11.—French troops last night captured the town of Corcy on the front southwest of Soissons. In addition to gaining complete possession of Corcy including the Corcy railway station, the French took the Chateau and Farm of St. Paul to the south of Corcy. Capture was affected in an operation for enlarging of French positions to the east of Retz Forest.

THE STATEMENT READS.

In the course of the night French troops enlarged their gains on the outskirts of the Forest of Retz. Our troops took possession of the entire village of Corcy, railroad station of Corcy, and Chateau and Farm of St. Paul. Fifty prisoners, including one officer remained in our hands. Two raids executed by us in the region of Maisons de Champagne and an unnamed hill, resulted in a dozen prisoners being taken by our troops.

Registration Cards Have Been Returned

The Patfioitc Fund Office has been swept clear of all the envelopes, cards and other materials used in the recent registration. Gone too are the volunteer helpers whose assistance enabled Ald. Dobbin to direct the work of registering the men and women over 16 years in West Peterboro without interfering with his duties as the representative of the Patriotic Fund. Now, the office has resumed its normal appearance and operations. Both the used and unused cards have been returned to Ottawa, and the special cards listing farm helpers to the office of the Organization of Resources Committee. So smoothly was the work carried out under the supervision of Ald. Dobbin that none of the details of the Patriotic Fund suffered in the least. In fact the special duties of receiving money for coal supplies for the families of soldiers increased during the past six months, and every provision is being made for their fuel needs next winter.

The Albanians Are Aiding the Allies

Italian Forces Aided by French and Albanians, Together With British Naval Units, Are Sweeping Northward Across the Entire Width of Albania—Important Towns Captured.

AUSTRIANS ADMIT REVERSES

Special to The Examiner:
(By Ed L. Keen.)

LONDON, July 11.— Italian forces, aided by French and Albanians, together with British naval units, are sweeping northward across practically the entire width of Albania, in what may be one of the most important military and political offensives of the war. According to the latest dispatches received here the allied troops, in addition to making important gains on the sixty mile front between the Adriatic and the Dovlie river, are threatening the Bulgarian right wing in the vicinity of Monastir, 115 miles from the sea. The main military objective of the allies evidently is the old Roman road connecting Monastir with the sea at Durazzo, possession of which would permit the free movement of troops and supplies directly from the Adriatic into Southern Serbia and would seriously threaten the enemy's hold on a great portion of the occupied areas of that country.

A SIGNIFICANT PHASE.

Starting at the Vojutza river, the Italians, with the aid of British monitors, have advanced to the Semeni river, a maximum gain of 15 miles. The nearest portion of the old Roman highway lies just the same distance northward along the Skhumbi river, west of Elbasan. But the offensive also has far reaching political aspects. Already considerable forces of Albanians, under Essad Pasha, are fighting with the allies and are rendering valuable assistance Any considerable advance by the French in the Monastir region will have its effect on Bulgaria, which is reported to be low in morale, both militarily and economically. The most significant angle, however, is the probable effect on the Southern Slav nations of Austria, already on the verge of active revolt. A decisive allied victory in Albania may prove the torch that will ignite the whole of the discontented elements of the Dual Monarchy. One of the significant phases of the Italian advance is the frank admission of reverses by the Austrian War Office. The latest official statement from Vienna said the Austrians, "in the face of pressure from strong enemy forces," had withdrawn across the Berat-Fieri line.

Fieri already is in the hands of the Italians, and Berat, the most important city in Southern Albania, appears about to fall. Since the Italian advance began Sunday, the Albanian front has been growing in importance and now is the centre of the European war struggle.

The Revolution Is Spreading

The Peasants Have Several Small Armies of Several Thousand Men—Are Well Armed.

(By Joseph Shaplen—United Press).

STOCKHOLM, July 11.—The Ukraine is in a state of country-wide revolution, according to despatches received here. The Germans are pouring in reinforcements, which now have reached a total of 35 divisions (420,000 men). The peasants have several small armies of 15,000 to 20,000 each, all well armed with artillery and machine guns. These are defending villages and whole sections of trenches.

The fight is not of a political character, but is due chiefly to the surrender of land by the Germans back to the landlords.

Homestead sections thirty-five miles square have been wiped out completely. This revolution in the Ukraine, together with the increasing power of the Czecho-Slovaks in the east, necessitating a diversion of considerable German forces, may account in some measure for the delay in the resumption of the Western front offensive.

VICTORY FOR THE PAN GERMANS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, July 11.—The fall of Foreign Secretary Von Kuehlmann was arranged by German Army Headquarters, and is regarded in Germany as the introduction of an open pan-German regime, under the control of the military leaders, a special despatch from Holland says. It is declared as the biggest of a series of pan-German victories, and pan-German newspapers do not disguise their delight over it.

OBJECTS OF NEW SIBERIAN GOVERNMENT

Canadian Press:

LONDON, July 11.—Objects of new Siberian government include the repudiation of the Brest-Litovsk treaty and the establishment of a Russian Republic with an autonomous Siberia, according to the declaration made by a member of the new government. It is also proposed to rehabilitate the army and send troops against Germany. Russia's national debt would be acknowledged. Siberia assuming responsibility for her share.

Roosevelt in An Aerial Flight

Son of Former President Roosevelt Believed to Have Brought Down His First Hun Aeroplane.

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, July 11.—Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, youngest son of former President Roosevelt, is believed to have brought down his first German airplane, in a fight with three Boches far behind the enemy lines yesterday afternoon. His victory has not been verified to-day.

Heavy clouds separated Roosevelt from three of his comrades, who were flying eight miles inside the German lines at a great height. Emerging suddenly from the clouds he encountered three German airmen. After shooting fifty rounds he sent one of the Boches spinning toward the ground.

Roosevelt escaped from the others and returned to the American lines.

SULLIVAN FARMER DRAGGED TO DEATH WHEN HORSES BOLTED

Donald McDonald Was Found Lying in Field Under Mower.

OWN SOUND, July 11. — Donald McDonald, one of the best-known resident of Sullivan Township, was dragged to death when his horses ran away while he was running a mowing machine. He was hurled from the seat and dragged several times around the field.

When found the horses were standing in the fence corner, still attached to the mower, and Mr. McDonald was lying face down under the machine. Dr. McCullough of Chatsworth was at once called, but he could do nothing, as the victim had been dead for several hours. His watch had stopped at a few minutes after 3 o'clock. His hip was dislocated, his shoulder, nose and some ribs broken, and his body was a mass of cuts and bruises. There will be no inquest.

TWENTY-SIX DESERTED.

Just Before Last Draft Left Kingston For Overseas.

KINGSTON, July 11.—About twenty-six draftees deserted from the last draft here just before it left for overseas Several have been captured and are back at camp. Two were found hiding on Wolfe Island. The military police are scouring the district for the other fellows who are missing.

POOR CROPS IN AUSTRIA

Austro-Hungarian Losses in Recent Offensive Estimated at 250,000—The Prisoners.

A ROME DESPATCH

Canadian Press:

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, July 11. — Evidence secured from Austrian prisoners indicates that the Austro-Hungarian losses during the recent offensive were in the neighbourhood of 250,000. The prisoners say that corporal punishment in the Austrian Army, which was abolished last year by Emperor Carls, has been re-established in practice. Other reports made by captives tend to confirm accounts of poor wheat and potato crops in Austria. The condition of these crops is said to be particularly bad in Bohemia and in the region of Pilsen.

A Rome despatch to the Italian Embassy in Washington on July 6 estimates the Austro-Hungarian losses in the recent offensive as between two hundred thousand and two hundred and fifty thousand, including at least fifty thousand dead.

ROBBERS HOLD UP RAILWAY TRAIN

Canadian Press:

PAOLA KANS, July 11.—Three persons were shot and mail and express cars were looted by a dozen bandits, who held up a fast Missouri-Kansas and Texas passenger train early to-day at Koch, a siding three miles east of this city. They compelled the engine crew to detach the mail and express cars and ran them away, and then fled north in motor cars.

MR. C. T. THOMPSON DECORATED BY ITALY.

Paris, July 11 — Charles T. Thompson, correspondent of the Associated Press with the Italian armies on the Austro-Italian front during the Italian retreat from the Isonzo River to the Piave last autumn, and now on special service in France, has been awarded the Italian Army Service Decoration in recognition of his work.

Mr. Thompson was slightly wounded in the right cheek while observing a battle on the Isonzo front last October from the ramparts of the Gorizia Castle.

AVIATORS ARE BUSY

British Airmen Cause Terrible Havoc to Railway Station—Bombing Operations.

WEATHER IS FINE

(United Press Service.)
(By William Phillip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 11. — Allied aviators apparently have attained absolute mastery of the air. They are carrying the aerial warfare far behind the German lines. Although given the best weather of the whole war there is comparatively little battling, due to the extreme caution of the German airmen. Their activities are confined to night bombing, while the British bomb all night and fight all day when anything can be seen.

Huns Fly High.

The Boches conduct their bombing operations from an altitude of about 10,000 feet, owing to the belching fire from our "archies." The British bombers drop down to a height of 500 feet or even 50 feet before they let loose their high explosives. This makes for extreme accuracy.

A prisoner relates the tremendous havoc wrought on the Bapaume railway and station, where a British plane swooped low and dropped a bomb in the midst of troops waiting to board a train.

The British airmen are not allowing the cobwebs to cover their machines. One well known aviator has brought down 23 Boches in the last thirty days, his total now nearly equalling Baron Von Richtofen's. Another has more than 30 Germans to his credit, a dozen of which were downed during the last week.

NEW VICTORY BOND TO BE FREE OF ANY DOMINION TAXATION

Ottawa, July 11.—The government, after careful consideration has decided that the bonds of the next Victory Loan, will, like those of all previous issues, be free of all Dominion taxation.

With such a large body of existing securities tax free it was felt that it would jeopardize the success of the new loan to make it subject to income taxation and attempt to float it at the same interest rate as the last issue. If made subject to super-tax those desiring such securities would purchase on the market tax free securities in preference to subscribing to the new war loan.

STIRRING SCENES WERE ENACTED DURING THE SOVIET CONGRESS

Delegate From Ukraine Denounces German Ambassador in Latter's Presence.

SECRET PEASANT CONGRESS

(By Joseph Shaplen—United Press Staff Correspondent — Copyright).

Stockholm, July 11. — Stirring scenes were enacted during the pan-Soviet Congress at Moscow, according to Petrograd newspapers which have just been received here. With German Ambassador Mirbach occupying one box and with representatives of the Entente Allies in another section, a delegate from the Ukraine, M. Alexandroff, precipitated a lively scene by denouncing German imperialism and its influence in the Ukraine.

"I greet the pan-Soviets in the name of the Secret Peasant Congress in the Ukraine, where reigns a German dictatorship, and where the Bolsheviki continue negotiations with Marianette Skorodadsky, simultaneously tolerating the presence of German imperialism in the person of Count Mirmach." Two hundred and fifty members of the Left cheered his statements wildly, while Mirbach and his suite sat stiffly erect. "The Germans are employing imprisonments and executions without trials to suppress a revolt of the workmen and peasants but we know how to fight, even if you don't," the speaker continued.

"Down With Germans."

"The Germans have come to the Ukraine to obtain bread, but they won't get it. Wherever the Germans have loaded trains we have blown them up, and have treated likewise all artillery and magazines in the Ukraine. The Germans sought the transfer of the huge aviation machinery from Odessa and Nikolaiff to the Krupp works but we blew it up. The Germans will be wiped out in the Ukraine. They already have paid thousands of lives for their tyranny. You have concluded the Brest-Litovsk Treaty at the price of Ukraine's liberty. We now call upon you to aid us."

Members of the Left and of the Right rose, crying, "Down with the Brest-Litovsk Treaty at the price of Ukraine's liberty. We now call upon you to aid us." Members of the Left and of the Right rose, crying, "Down with the Brest-Litovsk Treaty." Mirbach excitedly whispered to a German officer. Members of the Left again began shouting, "Down with Mirbach, down with the lackeys of Mirbach—the Bolsheviki."

Premier Leon Trotsky then told the delegates that the Government was opposed to the offensive of the Red Guard.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JULY 11TH, 1918.

THE NAVY LEAGUE.

In the near future Peterboro is to be the scene of a drive for members for the local branch of the Navy League, an enterprise that should receive liberal backing from every patriotic citizen. The Peterboro branch was launched some weeks ago, following the visit to the city of Miss Constance R. Boulton of Toronto, and it is desired to get as large a membership here as possible; 50,000 members for the province is the objective of the provincial branch of the League, and of this number Peterboro is expected to contribute a proportionate share. The gratitude and admiration for the British navy and for the British mercantile marine which should be felt by every Canadian should make the task of securing members for this great organization, which is designed to assist our sailors, delightfully simple. It should be regarded as a privilege to be allowed to join such a League in order to testify in some small degree to the great debt that is owing to the men who have kept the seas open, and who are the greatest single factor in preventing Germany from winning the war. Had the British navy lost command of the seas, the effect on the allied cause would have been overwhelming and complete Had the British mercantile marine played the coward's part when the German U-boat pirates commenced their ruthless campaign of murder on the high seas, it requires no effort of the imagination to conjure up the positon that Great Britain and her allies would have been left But the British navy did not lose command of the seas, and the British mercantile marine dared the under-sea boats to do their worst. Our debt to the gallant sailors is indeed a heavy one, and so the people of Peterboro should welcome the opportunity that will be given them of becoming members of that splendid organization, the Navy League of Canada, affiliated with the British Navy League. The objects of the League can be assisted greatly by an increase in membership, and so throughout Canada these campaigns are being inaugurated and are meeting with splendid results. With the record that has already been made in the war, Peterboro cannot afford to be found lacking on the present occasion.

SAFETY FIRST.

Without attempting to fix in any degree the responsibility for Tuesday evening's serious collision at the corner of George and McDonnel streets it might be pointed out that the accident emphasizes the need of careful handling of all kinds of vehicles at this and other similar dangerous corners in the city. The scene of Tuesday's mishap has been recognized as a perilous corner for the reason that in the case of motor cars and vehicles approaching George street from the west, the store on the corner shuts off all view of street cars and automobiles coming south on George street, with the result that there is constant danger of a collision at this point. A resident who lives nearby remarked to the Examiner that he has sat on his verandah in the evening shivering with apprehension at the many narrow escapes from serious accidents he has seen at this corner. McDonnel street, being the most northern paved street running east and west is a popular thoroughfare with car drivers, and there is a steady stream of motor traffic from the west. As the traffic on George street is naturally heavy as well, the intersection of the two streets is a point where the utmost caution should be taken. Motor cars on either street should approach the corner at low speed, and the drivers should be careful to make sure that their warning horns are sounded. Many motorists neglect his precaution and the result has been some close calls at this point. All street car motormen have a responsibility to carry out in connection with the corner of McDonnel and George street, and at other street intersections where the conditions are similar Care should be taken that the street car does not approach the corner at dangerous speed, and that the gong is sounded well before the intersection is reached.

The motor traffic in Peterborough has grown to such an extent that all car owners should appreciate the absolute necessity of careful driving at all such danger zones. Even the legal speed limit may be too fast at times, and Tuesday night's accident, whoever was to blame for its occurrence, should bring home to all those in charge of vehicles on the streets that the motto of safety first is the best for all concerned.

AN UNNECESSARY RULE.

While Peterboro bakers in common with their brothers in the same trade throughout Canada, are cheerfully prepared to cooperate with the Canada Food Board in the saving of as much wheat as possible for export overseas, and are therefore complying with the order in regard to the use of substitutes for wheat flour, in bread, there is general complaint concerning the regulations that require all bread sold after the 15th of this month to be marked with a Victory Bread label. This order is regarded as unnecessary, and a source of expense and labour to the baker without in any way achieving the object for which it was designed. The Canada Food Board is warning the public that all bread not marked "Victory Bread," is bread that has not been made according to the new rules. Has the Food Board not thought of the extreme likelihood of such a regulation proving a splendid shield for the baker who wants to violate the law in regard to substitutes? The dishonest baker who chose to ignore the Board's instructions in regard to the composition of his bread, could cover up his violation of the law by using the Victory label. It would only be by analysis in any case that the component parts of the bread could be determined and the bakers are justified in complaining that the use of the label does not prevent violation of the law, but rather encourages it.

Again the labelling of bread means additional expense and may result in an increase in the cost of bread. The cost of printing the labels must be considered, and the labour involved in stamping each loaf of bread will be considerable, especially in view of the fact that the bakers, as every other employer of labour, are feeling the shortage of man power

Bakers throughout Canada are protesting vigorously against the label order, and there does not seem any adequate reason why the Food Board should insist upon a system that fails to benefit the consumer, and is a source of needless expense and trouble to the baking trade.

A PLAN THAT FAILED.

A few nights ago mention was made in these columns of the plan inaugurated by the city authorities in Guelph by which it was proposed to forbid the delivery of any more coal for the present to consumers who had already had more than one ton, until the Fuel Commissioner was satisfied that every resident had at least some coal ready for next winter The method seemed a simple and workable one, preventing the larger customer from getting a big supply while others could get none. The plan has, however, fallen to the ground through the opposition of one of the Guelph coal dealers, who has taken the position that as the Fuel Regulations permit the delivery of 70 per cent. of a consumer's normal supply, the dealers cannot be compelled to stop delivering that quantity. The Ontario Fuel Commissioner being appealed to, has ruled that the delivery of 70 per cent. of a consumer's normal supply cannot be prevented, so Guelph's reasonable method of preventing discrimination and providing for an equitable distribution, has been abandoned

In spite of this fact, however, there will be a pretty general opinion that the city authorities in Guelph had hit at the root of the trouble in arranging a system of rationing. The Fuel regulations, although if strictly carried out will prevent hoarding, work out to the disadvantage of the smaller consumer. The dealers cannot be prevented, according to Mr. Harris's ruling, from delivering 70 per cent. to any customer, and the man who has bought in large quantities in times when there was plenty of coal, is getting the preference now, while many other citizens are unable to secure the comparatively small amount that would carry them through the winter. The trouble is, too, that if coal advances in price, as is prophesized, and if there is a scarcity next winter, as seems inevitable, the effect of high prices and scarcity will fall directly upon those who are the least able to stand the strain. The man in the big house with 70 per cent. of his normal supply now in his cellar, the gas to cook with, if necessary, and probably a reserve stock of wood, can face the situation cheerfully, but what about his fellow citizens who cannot get their coal now, and who look forward to more visits to the police station, more long waits at the coal offices, more fees to pay the express man, and in general a repetition of last year's experience.

THE BEST BLOOD OF IRELAND

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

The nobly-phrased appeal to ex-President Roosevelt of Col. Arthur Lynch, Irish Nationalist M.P., is a reminder of the significant fact that practically all of the notable names and families who showed willingness to fight and die for Irish freedom in the past, are today on the side of the Allies. A direct decendent of Patrick Sarsfield, perhaps the most romantic military figure in Irish history, fell fighting in Flanders in the early months of the war. Two of the Emmett family fell at Gallipoli; as did a grandson of Charles Gavan Duffy, the Young Ireland leader; and a grandnephew of Smith O'Brien died in Mesopotamia. About thirty years ago a young man stood up in the British House of Commons one night and boldly cheered the news that Fuzzy-Wuzzy had broken a British square. One year ago the same man, Major William Redmond, gallantly laid down his life for the Allied cause. Other Nationalist leaders who in days past showed they were not afraid if need be to suffer hardships for their cause, have rallied enthusiastically against Germany, Col. Lunch himself being a notable example.

And even among representatives of Ireland's best blood in the United States, it has been the same. Everyone has heard of, and some of us remember, the episode in Manchester, when Fenian leaders, condemned to death, stood in the dock and calmly declared, "God Save Ireland." One of the men concerned in that episode died only last year in the United States. And from the beginning of the war he was a fervent friend of the Allies. John Mitchel, Young Ireland leader, once declared that "if I could seize with my hands the flames of Hell, I would hurl them into the face of my country's enemy" (meaning England); but only Saturday his grandson gave his life for a cause that is England's. And so it is and must be among every Irishman and decendant of Irishman who is a true friend of liberty. Only the spurious advocate of freedom can stand aside and see the fate of liberty the world over imperilled by Prussian tyrants. And if the great names of Irish history, the men who loved freedon well enough to die for it, could be summoned back to earth today, who can doubt where they would stand in this struggle.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Wood alcohol and bay rum continue to claim their victims. The use of these poisons as a substitute for liquor does not seem to be checked by the heavy death roll.

Peterboro people who are accustomed to grumble at the local tax rate, will feel better when they read that Lindsay's rate has reached the dizzy altitude of 41 mills.

There is a chance for other members of Parliament who were members of the Special Committee on Pensions, to tell what they think of the manner in which the pension system of Canada is being handled. Donald Sutherland, M.P., has opened the campaign.

And now we'll begin to get the real history of the war. The picnic party of Canadian editors, selected by the government to tour England and the battle front, has arrived safely.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

THEY ARE LEARNING ITS MEANING

(Providence Journal)

The adjuration "Work or fight" comes with crushing force to the sluggish mind that greatly objects to doing either.

THE TWO SLOGANS

(Louisville Currier-Journal)

The Potsdam gang started the slogan, "Pan Germanism" and evoked from the civilized world the slogan "Can Germanism."

IT TAKES NERVE

(The Baltimore Sun)

It takes a lot of nerve to stand behind a counter and charge a man two dollars for a necktie out the same stock you were selling off for twenty-five cents four years ago, and explain to him that the advance in price is due to the scarcity of material.

COOL EFFRONTERY

(New York Herald)

Kuelmann literally translated means "cool man". Well named is Mr. Cool Man. In cool effrontery it would be hard to match his last speech with its effort to place on Russia the responsibility for starting the war and its attempt to evade Germany's responsibility for its prolongation.

THE ANGLO-SAXON BOND

(Boston Transcript)

What is the cause of the change between our two nations? It is not altogether a matter of reflection—of the ripening reason of the people. It is simply this, that Americans and Britons have risen above the old plane of the maintainance of their own particular interests, and have placed themselves on the common and exalted ground of the service of humanity.

FORCE TO THE UTMOST.

(London Daily Express)

We hope there will be no more parleying with these monsters. Only one method of argument is open to them, and that is reprisals in the most drastic and thorough manner in our power. Germans, wherever and whenever they can be reached must be bombed and bombed again, until the piteous whining already apparent in the Rhine towns becomes a clamorous call for mercy.

OLD TIMES ARE CHANGED

(London Daily Chronicle)

It is with mixed feeling that we read of the withdrawal of London's last horse-drawn fire engine. No doubt the motor-engine is the more efficient, but for picturesqueness and thrill what sight had London streets to compare with the engine of ten years ago, with its superb white horses galloping at top speed? It was the nearest thing a modern could conceive to the war-chariot of Achilles.

SPORTING COMMENT

Joe Riggs, the Giants' clubhouse boy at the Polo Grounds, has enlisted in the Naval Reserve Force and expects to be called very soon.

Heinie Groh is having a big year with the stick, and he is fielding in his usual high class form. He is one of the real stars of the game.

Rube Marquard continues to pitch good ball for the Robins. Now and then he is defeated, but the scores of opposing clubs usually are low.

Heathcote, the former college star, who is making his major league debut with the Cardinals, continues to shine. He is a member of the National League's .300 set.

Southren League players are doing very well in their return to the majors. Most of the players picked up in the South had previous experience in the big leagues.

Eddie Murphy and Fred McMullen of the White Sox are now found in the .300 class of American League hitters, the former with a mark of .312 and the latter with .306

The United States Second Naval District baseball team has a real major league outfield. The trio consists of Powell, Kelly and Rehg, formerly of the Boston Braves.

The St. Louis Browns are living up to past performances in their work against Walter Johnson. Walter always found the Browns the most troublesome team in the league

Orders have been sent to W. D. ("Poll") Perritt, the Giant pitcher, to report to his local board on July 20 for an investigation under the "Work or Fight" order.

The Chicago White Sox carry plenty of strength despite the loss of several players of prominence. It would not be surprising to see the Sox jump into the fight for first place in a short time.

The Cubs cannot pick up to big a lead if they are to lose Killifer and Helocher. They will need quite a lead to hold first place after these stars get away.

The Leafs are in a forward position in the New League race and could scarcely be better off were they being intentionally "rated" by Manager Howley. They have won four of their five games on the present road trip.

Secondbaseman Cruthers, who recently failed to report to the Cleveland club, after being obtained from the Memphis club of the Southern Association, has been discovered playing ball with the Chester club of the Delaware River Ship League.

Should anything happen to the New League before the first of August the Toronto club would be hard hit. They have taken little money on the road and are carded to spend the greater part of August at the Island Stadium, when there might be a chance to reap their harvest.
